*DUKE UNIVERSITY
DURHAM, NORTH CAROLINA*

Dedication

He has directed his ability toward development of an Institution of Greater Renown

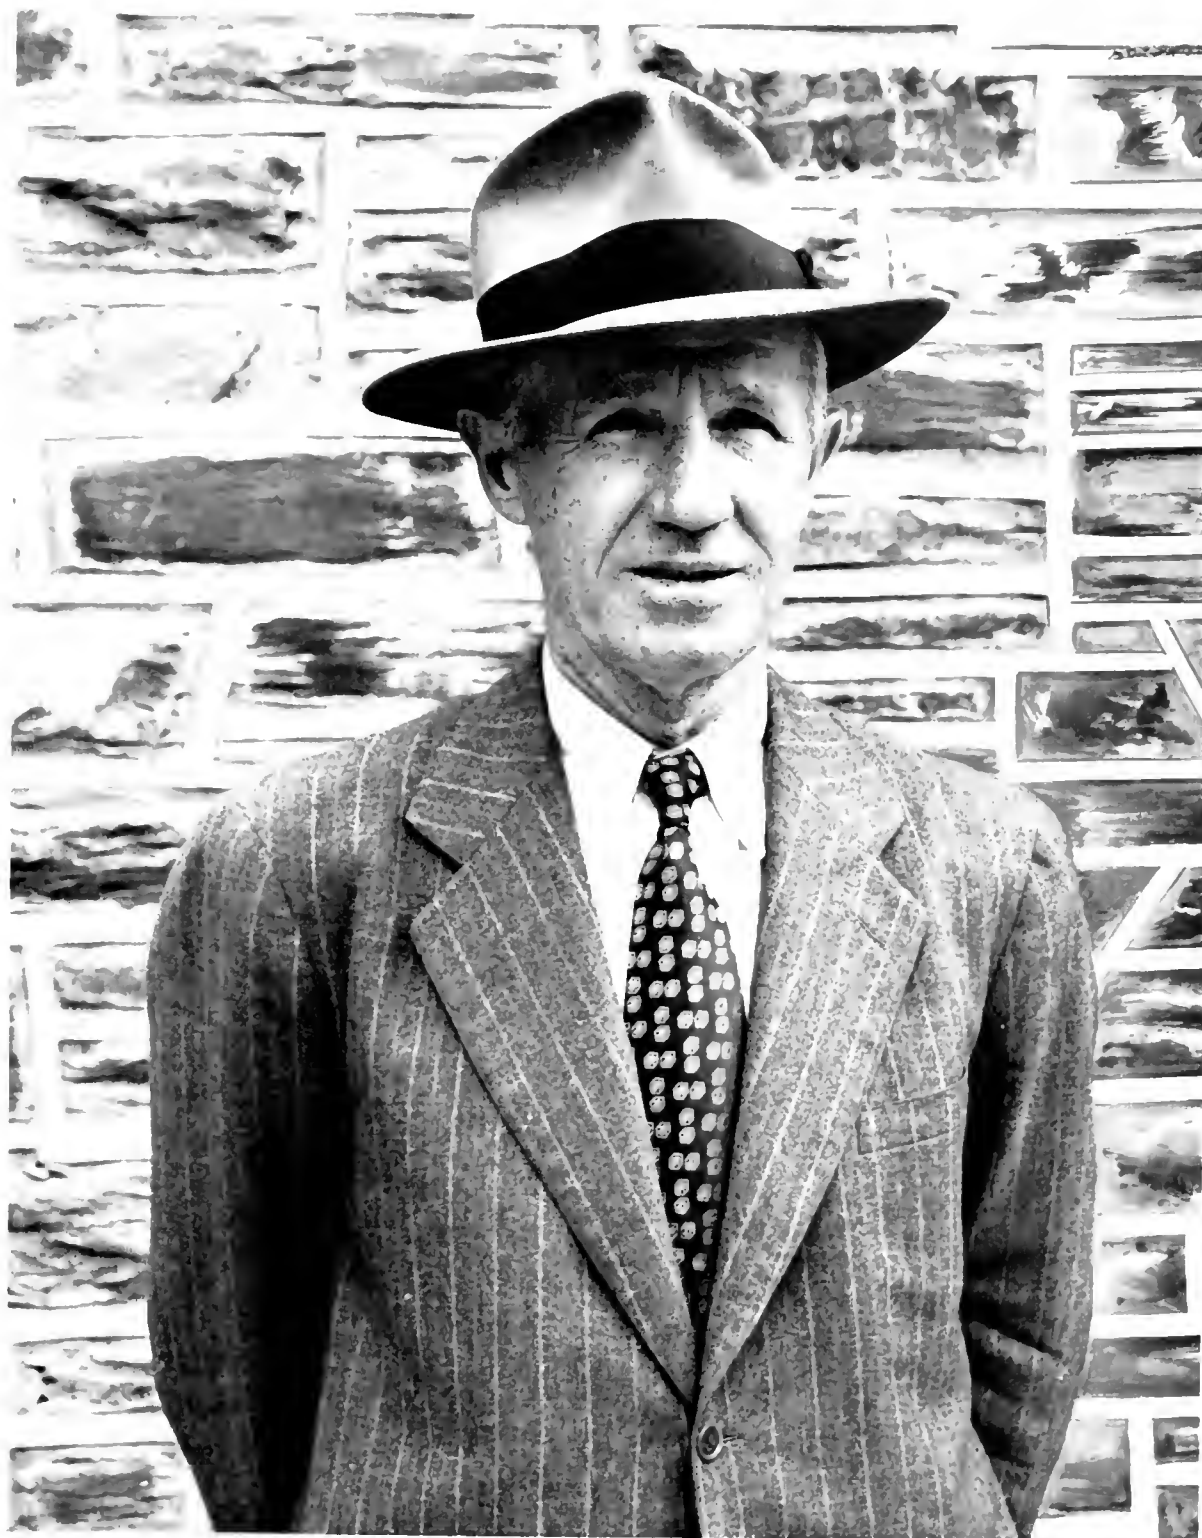

IN A YEAR of change and new uncertainty; in a year when men and women of our generation came back from the throes of a long and barren war to find that peace was not yet the happy way of life they had remembered or had been told of; in a year when youth of all nations looked up to old and proven leaders to say: Give us your hand to guide us through these troubling times.

In such a year, 1947, to such a leader, Wallace Wade, we dedicate the Yearbook of the Class of 1947.

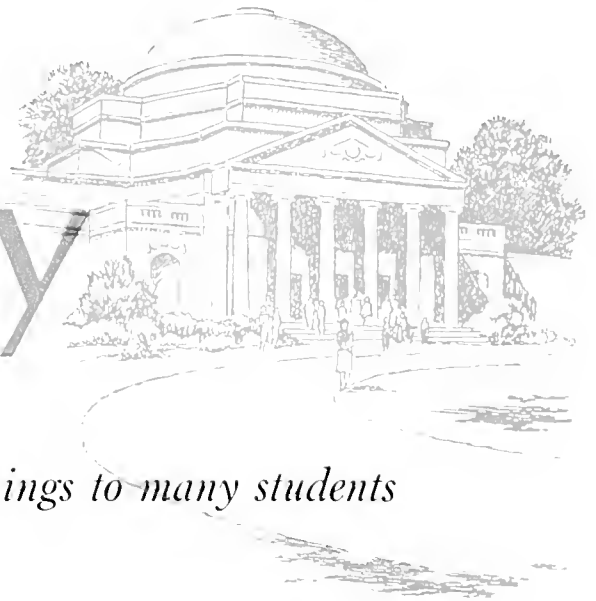

A man of calm and implacable dignity, Wallace Wade has symbolized the vicissitudes of our age. A veteran of World War I, who volunteered his services again in this war and served with high distinction upon the battlefields of Europe, Lt. Colonel Wade returned to Duke as many of us—to begin again his civilian activities.

In the Fall of 1946 his hastily assembled football team, composed mostly of veterans fresh out of the service, never quite got started. But Head Coach Wallace Wade, experiencing one of his poorest seasons on record, somehow emerged with a new and higher stature as a leader of men, and as Coach of the fighting team which he called “the most courageous group of men I’ve ever coached.”

Duke University

—many things to many students

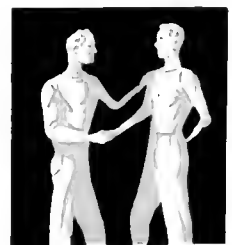

THE UNIVERSITY, as it strives to enlarge its intellectual dimensions and seeks a more comprehensive understanding of the ageless problems of mankind, is but a mirror reflecting its student mind and spirit. For the undergraduate likewise feels a need to develop and grow — intellectually, emotionally, and spiritually — so that he may, at the end of four years, emerge with the ability to view life's many phases and give just evaluation to each.

He is increasingly conscious of certain abilities and purposes within himself, born of the contacts of college life and learning, which he must continue to nurture and replenish throughout his life. And as he grows to the full stature of the graduate, there comes an awareness of his continuing dependence upon those who have sought with him these new found faculties—his university, his fellowmen, and above all, his God.

Administration

Wisdom and experience, personified in this group of self-effacing administrators, helped to guide us through our years at Duke. They encouraged us to realize and cherish the Ideals of the University.

WE PAY TRIBUTE to the men and women who have helped to give us a great university. Constantly striving for excellence, they have seen the transformation of Union Institute, founded in a log cabin at Trinity, North Carolina, to Normal College; and that, in turn, to Trinity College. They have seen Trinity moved to Durham under great protest from the Trinity townspeople. Through the benevolence of Washington Duke and his sons, James B. and Benjamin N. Duke, they have seen the growth of Trinity College into Duke University. It is significant that each succeeding administrator of the university, each a leader in the life of the nation, has directed his ability toward the development of an institution of higher learning; for these men might have had brilliant careers in religious or civil fields. Although the fame of Duke is spread by its students as they go to their life's work in the world, all the prestige they attain can find its foundations in the influence of the men with whom they associated in college.

The administration is keenly interested in the future. Their duty is to prepare the students for life following college years. The kind of men and women that will control the country in the next few years is determined to a large extent by the university from which they graduate. Consequently, the administration is aware that the students of today must be fit citizens of tomorrow.

This year that duty was a difficult one. With men of all ages returning to the campus it was hard to combine them and their desires into one organized unit. The enlarged enrollment created further difficulties. The size of the faculty was increased. Every faculty was used to the best advantage and everyone devoted his energies to the task at hand. It was a year of readjustment and settling down to a strange new life. Mistakes were made, but each emerged wiser and more assured of what Duke University has to offer, and what is to be derived from that realization.

PRESIDENT ROBERT L. FLOWERS

BOARD OF TRUSTEES

IN THE HANDS of the thirty-six men who make up the Board of Trustees rests the supreme authority of the University. They are empowered to make any rules and regulations necessary to achieve the good government of the school.

The new Chairman of the Board, elected last May after the death of J. F. Bruton, is Mr. Willis Smith of Raleigh. Mr. Smith, a Duke alumnus, is also president of the American Bar Association. The trustees meet twice a year to receive reports from committees and to approve the issuance of diplomas from the University, as recommended by the faculty. The Board must also appoint the University president and manage the property and the funds of the University.

The Executive Committee, composed of fifteen trustees, meets once a month with the trustees of the Duke Endowment to review the annual budget. This Endowment was established in 1924 by the indenture of James B. Duke. It represents an endeavor to provide in some measure for the spiritual, mental, and physical needs of mankind. To do this, Mr.

Duke provided for the establishment of churches, the maintenance of charity wards in hospitals, the care of orphans, and the care of widows of poverty-stricken ministers. He also created educational opportunities, helping other schools as well as our own university which bears his name.

Trinity College, named in honor of his father, Washington Duke, was remodeled according to instructions in the indenture, and its departments of learning were expanded, so that they include departments of Religion, Law, Education, Science, Business Administration, Medicine, Engineering, and a Woman's College.

Mr. Duke desired that "great care and discrimination be exercised in admitting as students only those whose previous record shows a character, determination, and application evincing a wholesome and real ambition for life."

The Board of Trustees has little actual contact with student activities on the campus, but their approval of us and of our ideas is, although intangible, of outstanding importance to our life here at Duke.

TRINITY COLLEGE

FIFTY-SIX YEARS of service to Duke University has been, to President Robert Lee Flowers, fifty-six years of devotion to the school's well-known ideals of education and religion. Just as the University has grown in the heart of its president, so Dr. Flowers, by virtue of his lively sense of humor and his brilliant mind, has grown in the heart of the University.

Upon the election of Dr. Flowers as president of the University in 1941, he remarked in his message to the students that their "influence not only determines largely how others away from the campus will evaluate the institution, but it also molds the aims of those who will guide it in the future. The students are the sole reason for its existence." Preceding his election as president is a long record of competent service. Graduating from the United States Naval Academy in 1891, Dr. Flowers returned to his native North Carolina as instructor of mathematics at Trinity College, and the following year was made head of the department. He was elected secretary of Trinity College in 1910 and, when Duke University was established in 1924, he became, first, secretary-treasurer, and later, vice president. Upon the death of his predecessor, Dr. William Preston Few, in 1940, Dr. Flowers was elected to his present position.

Dr. Flowers' honorary degrees consist of a Master of Arts presented to him by Trinity College in 1900, and two Doctorates of Law, one received from Davidson College in 1927, and the other awarded in 1942 by the University of North Carolina. He is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa, and Alpha Tau Omega fraternities. In addition to his contributions to the school, he has been active in civic affairs and social service.

Just as a great orchestra must be directed by a capable leader, so the symphony of life at Duke is subtly directed by the administration. Six men form the nucleus of this administration, around them revolving a vast system of office workers, professors, and students.

Dr. William Hane Wannamaker is vice president and Dean of the University. He came to Duke in 1904 as professor of German, after having received his A.B. from Wofford College, and his M.A. from both Harvard University and Trinity College.

Herbert James Herring, Dean of Trinity College, received his A.B. from Duke and his M.A. from Columbia. Formerly Dean of Freshmen, he was appointed Dean of Trinity College four years ago.

Robert B. Cox has served as Assistant to the Dean since March, 1946. He received his A.B. degree from the University of Tennessee and his M.A. from Peabody. He was working on his Ph.D. when he came to Duke last fall as an instructor in English. His duties now include the handling of the social calendar, cuts, fraternity discipline, and personal problems.

The Secretary of the University is Mr. Charles Edward Jordan, a Duke alumnus. He is connected with the administration of the Student Loan and Scholarship Fund, and serves on the committee of Religious Activity.

In 1941, Mr. Charles Blackwell Markham was elected treasurer of the University. Mr. Markham received both his A.B. and his M.A. from Duke.

Charles Aubrey Dukes has been Director of Public Relations and Alumni Affairs since 1944. He served as Assistant Director in this field from 1929 to 1944.

Dr. Alan Krebs Manchester, Dean of Freshmen, acts as adviser-in-general for all new boys. He holds an A.B. from Vanderbilt, M.A. from Columbia, and Ph.D. from Duke.

DUKE ENDOWMENT

THE PURPOSE of the trust is "... to make provision in some measure for the needs of mankind along physical, mental and spiritual lines. ..." The endowment provides appropriations for operating, building and equipping hospitals, orphanages, rural churches, and aiding superannuated Methodist preachers. The trust is denominated The Duke Endowment, and shall have perpetual existence. Mr. James B. Duke said that the proper tools to use for a successful organization were "men of such outstanding character, ability and vision" for officers, trustees and faculty as will insure the University of "attaining and maintaining a place of real leadership in the educational world."

MISS ALICE MARY BALDWIN

WOMAN'S COLLEGE

DR. ALICE MARY BALDWIN has been Dean of Woman's College since 1930, when it was established. Originally a New Englander, she came to Trinity College in the summer of 1923 as the Acting Dean of Women for Summer School. Six years later she received her appointment as head of the Woman's College. Dean Baldwin received her A.B. and M.A. degrees from Cornell University. Later she received her Ph.D. from the University of Chicago. Dean Baldwin taught history until four years ago when increased duties as Dean forced her to stop teaching. She has been very prominent in various educational fields throughout the country.

Dean Baldwin has encouraged students to come to her for advice and counsel. As well as being an administrator, she has shown herself to be a true friend, and the close contact she has tried to keep with all of the girls has endeared her to the student body. She acts, when the need arises, as mediator between professors and students, and also backs the Student Government Association in its undertakings.

Washington Duke first encouraged the admittance of women into Trinity College. Since then, the Woman's College has made many strides forward. New courses are being added to the curriculum every year, and women are entering into fields formerly labeled "For Men Only." The recognition of the value of education for girls is proved by the increasing numbers of applicants of exceptional calibre. Each year hundreds of girls have to be refused admittance to the college because of lack of space.

The war has proved the ability of women to excel in many fields of endeavor. On the campus, Duke co-eds have taken over positions previously held by men, particularly in the field of publication. Competition will grow stronger with each passing year, and a young woman must be armed with a good education to hold a job. The Woman's College provides such an education; it is here for the taking.

Aiding Dean Baldwin in the direction of the Woman's College are Mrs. Hazen Smith, Mrs. Walter Scott Persons, Miss Mary Grace Wilson, and Miss Ellen Huckabee.

Mrs. Smith is a graduate of Agnes Scott College. After receiving her M.A. from Columbia University in 1927, she came to Duke to take up the position of Assistant Dean of Women, and adviser to junior and senior women. She visited schools in the Orient, Russia, and England. This study enabled her to have a clearer understanding of how to go about creating a close relationship between faculty and students.

Mrs. Persons, Assistant Dean in charge of Freshmen, graduated from Duke in 1922. After receiving her M.A. in 1928, she studied specialized subjects at the University of Pennsylvania. In 1930, she returned to Duke to become Secretary of the Committee on Admissions, a position which she still holds as well as her present job.

Dean Wilson, a graduate of Winthrop College, first came to Duke as Acting Dean of Women during the Summer Session. When the Woman's College was organized, Miss Wilson became the Social Director. In 1937, she was appointed Dean of Residence, and is now also Counselor for Social Standards. She also plans and approves the social program for Duke University women.

Miss Huckabee is the adviser to freshmen women. She received her A.B. and M.A. degrees from Duke University, and, after her departure, became a member of the Dean of Women's staff at New Jersey College for Women. Returning to Duke, she was made Counselor of Pegram House and given her present job. Miss Huckabee just recently returned to Duke again, after serving in the Waves during the war.

Miss Lydia Bishop, Recorder of the Woman's College, is assisted by Dorothy Hubble Wise. They have charge of all grades, cuts, and class standings.

WILBURT C. DAVISON

MEDICAL SCHOOL

Dr. Wilburt C. Davison, Dean of the School of Medicine, has held this position since 1927. Having graduated from Princeton in 1913, he attended Oxford for the next three years, where he was a Rhodes Scholar. There he received a B.A. in 1915, a B.Sc. in 1916, and an M.A. in 1919. Upon returning, he obtained his M.D. at Johns Hopkins. In 1932 he received his D.Sc. from Wake Forest and his LL.D. in 1944 at the University of North Carolina.

From 1919 to 1927, Dr. Davison held several positions at Johns Hopkins University Medical School, including posts first as instructor, associate professor, and acting head of the Department of Pediatrics, and, later, as Assistant Dean at Johns Hopkins University Medical School. During these years, he also served as editor of the Bulletin of Johns Hopkins Hospital. In 1927, he assumed the position of Dean of the Duke University Medical School as well as that of professor of pediatrics, positions he is still holding.

Dean Davison is a member of the division of medical sciences of the National Research Council, and served as vice chairman in 1942-43. Among other positions, he acted as Consultant to the Office of the Surgeon General, U. S. Army, and also as Consultant in the Institute of Inter-American Army Affairs. He also is a member of the maternal and child health services in the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Senior Med Students work on the wards, treating patients, writing case histories, conducting experiments, and assisting operations, before receiving their degree.

SCHOOL OF NURSING

THIS YEAR the Nursing School is under the very capable leadership of Miss Florence Wilson. Miss Wilson acquired her B.A. degree from the University of Michigan in 1913, and her M.A. from Western Reserve University in 1928. In the summer of 1918, Miss Wilson practised at the Vassar Training Camp for Nurses, and, in 1920, graduated from the City Hospital School of Nursing in New York City.

Dean Wilson had a great deal of experience prior to her appointment this year at Duke. In 1923, she became medical supervisor at the Lakeside Hospital in Cleveland. At the same time, she was an instructor of medical nursing at Western Reserve University. From 1932 to 1934, Dean Wilson was instructor and supervisor of medical nursing at the University of Nebraska, and from 1934 to 1937, she worked in the same capacity at New York Hospital's School of Nursing. In 1937, Miss Wilson became director of the School of Nursing and Nursing Service at Syracuse Memorial Hospital, and Syracuse University's Nursing School appointed her associate professor of nursing education in 1943. From January 1946, to September 1946 Miss Wilson was executive secretary of the New York State Nursing Council for War Service.

Dean Wilson published Ward's Study Units in Medical Nursing, and collaborated in writing Smith's Principles of Nursing Care. She has also had several articles published in the "American Journal of Nursing."

Dean Wilson is planning programs for graduate nurses, to be held in the education department in West Duke on East Campus, the nurses to use Duke Hospital as a practice field.

Nurses are instructed in the classrooms during the first two years. The second year, instruction and duty are combined, and the third year is spent in working on the wards.

SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING

DEAN WILLIAM HOLLAND HALL has been on the staff of the Engineering School since 1915. He attended the United States Naval Academy, and in 1914 he received both his A.B. and M.A. degrees from Duke University. In 1915 he obtained his B.C.E. degree from the University, and in 1927 he received a M.A. in Civil Engineering from the University of Wisconsin. Dean Hall's first position in the faculty at Duke was as an instructor in Engineering.

Dean Hall is relieved of some of his responsibility by the chairmen of the three departments of the Engineering School—the Departments of Civil, Mechanical, and Electrical Engineering. Dr. Harold Crusius Bird is Professor of Civil Engineering and Chairman of the Department. He received his Ph.D. in 1908, and his C.E. in 1911 from Yale. He came to Duke twenty-one years ago as Professor of Civil Engineering. He is the editor of Engineering Journals and Bulletins.

Professor Ralph Sidney Wilbur is Chairman of Mechanical Engineering. He received his B.S.M.E. and his M.A. degree from Tufts College. He was engaged in mechanical engineering with commercial companies, and taught at the University of Iowa, the University of Pennsylvania, LaFayette College, and at the United States Postgraduate School at Annapolis, before coming to Duke. He has also served as Chairman of the Raleigh Section of the North Carolina District of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Walter James Seeley has been head of the Electrical Engineering Department at Duke since 1929. Until 1925, he was an Ensign in the U. S. Navy, working on the Special Board of Anti-Submarine Devices. He also taught electrical engineering at the University of Pennsylvania.

Because of the influx of veterans, the enrollment of the Engineering School has jumped to over 400. To remedy this situation, a greatly-needed class building is being erected on West Campus. It will be twice as large as the four present buildings combined.

H. CLAUDE HORACK

SCHOOL OF LAW

H. CLAUDE HORACK, Dean of the School of Law, has been on the faculty of Duke University since 1930. He received his Ph.D. and LL.D. from Tulane University, and served as President of the Iowa State Bar Association. Later he held the posts of secretary and president of the Association of American Law

Schools. He also attended the International Congress of Comparative Law at the Hague. Since assuming the duties of the head of the Law School, Dean Horack has placed special emphasis on close personal relationships with his students, stressing the importance of knowing the students well. He believes that a complete and sound legal education must include ability to reason independently and also a sense of responsibility to the public as well as the clientele.

For any education there must be books, and the Law Library was founded for this need. It provides the innumerable books to which a law student must have access if he is going to acquire an adequate legal education. The Law Library, consisting of approximately 75,000 volumes, is outgrowing its house; there are more books than the shelves can hold. The Law Library has earnestly tried to find the best material for the needs of the law students, and in so doing it has acquired some valuable publications.

Paralleling the increase in enrollment in the University as a whole, with the return of many old students and the admission of new ones, the enrollment in the Law School has swelled to enormous proportions. This first postwar class is well on its way toward being the largest class in the history of the school.

Law students gather on the Law School steps between classes to discuss the latest legal decisions. Ten minutes between classes gives them an opportunity for a short relaxation period.

GILBERT T. ROWE
Acting Director

DR. GILBERT T. ROWE, chairman of the Faculty of the Divinity School, has been directing the activities of the School since Dr. Harvie Branscomb left last year. On February 26, 1947, the announcement was made of the appointment of Dr. Paul A. Root as new Dean. Dr. Root had previously been a member of the faculty of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas.

This year the School has created a new field of study in Christian ethics with Dr. Waldo Beach, former professor and pastor of religion at Antioch College in Ohio.

Lectures during the college year were given for divinity students. Such men as Professor Robert Pfeiffer of Harvard University and Dr. Paul Lehmannof, editor of Westminster Press, were among the speakers.

The Divinity School government has become active in coöperating towards school progress. The officers were: William Coffin, president; Alfred Wallace, vice president; John Carter, secretary; Jarvis Brown, treasurer. The Council of Affairs works closely with the faculty in preparing many of the programs sponsored by the Divinity School.

The Divinity School building is equipped with a comfortable recreation room where chess games, such as this, occupy free periods. Card tables, magazines, newspapers and comfortable reading chairs are also provided. Special theological books are obtainable from the Divinity School Library.

DEAN KORSTIAN, who came to Duke in 1930, has served as Dean of the School of Forestry since its establishment in 1938. He received his B.S.F. and his M.F. at the University of Nebraska, and his M.A. at South-eastern Christian College. He received his Ph.D. at Yale. Besides serving in the Forestry Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Dean Korstian has written a series called Authoritative Works in the Field of Silviculture. The emphasis that the war placed upon the importance of the preservation of our natural forests led to the formation of several special commissions, on one of which the government requested Dr. Korstian to serve. Dr. Korstian has also been the director of the program for using the facilities of the famous 5,000 acre Duke forest for research as well as recreation.

The School of Forestry is spending its time in teaching on a graduate level, and is doing remarkably well, considering that it is so crowded. Since the end of the war, the enrollment has increased greatly, and the student body consists of representatives from twenty different states.

SUMMER SCHOOL

SINCE 1918, Dr. Holland Holton has been Director of the Duke University Summer Session. Dr. Holton acquired his A.B. degree at Trinity College in 1907, and came back again as a part-time instructor of public speaking in 1912. In 1919, he became head of the Department of Education. He received his J.D. degree from the University of Chicago in 1927. Dr. Holton's special fields of education are history and legal phases of school administration.

Before coming to Duke, Dr. Holton taught at Durham High School, and was principal and superintendent of the Durham County Schools for several years.

In 1919, there were 88 students enrolled in the summer session. The number has increased to 3,375 by 1938. During the war, the number declined greatly because the navy project was using the buildings, but the 1947 summer session, according to Dr. Holton, is from Monmouth College in 1922, he did graduate work at the University of Minnesota and the University of Wisconsin for the next three years. At the end of this time, he received his Ph.D. from the University of Wisconsin. His Litt.D. he received from Columbia University in 1934, and in 1935 he received another from Monmouth College. He has been a professor here since 1925.

Dr. Hoover was awarded in 1929-30 the Social Science Research Fellowship for study in Soviet Russia. In addition, during the past thirteen years he has held important positions in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, as well as the presidency of the Southern Economic Association and the vice presidency of the American Economic Association. He acted as consultant on the National Resources Committee and as Economic Adviser on the Advisory Commission to the Council on National Defense and various other war agencies. He also worked in this capacity for the Economic Intelligence of the U. S. Control Council for Germany, and is an author in his own right.

Commencement are the two outstanding events given for the reunion of the alumni. All speakers, such as those presented at the University on the lecture series, are entertained at the University House by the Alumni Department. Besides these duties dealing with its own alumni and its own affairs, the Alumni Department helps the local Alumni Association in North Carolina with its meetings, helping the members plan the programs, which include films and talks.

During the war, the Alumni Department was an extremely active organization. It had the difficult task of keeping in touch with the seven thousand Duke men and women in service, and endeavored to send to them The Archive, The Chronicle, and other college publications. With the end of the war, the Alumni Department's job was still not finished. Thousands of boys who had attended prewar Duke returned to complete their educations, and many of the servicemen at Duke during the war chose to continue here. It is through the Alumni Department that the returned veteran becomes reacquainted with his school, and takes his rightful place again.

CHARLES AUBREY DUKES, Director of the Alumni Department, was appointed to this office by action of the Board of Trustees in 1944. When Mr. Dukes attended Duke, he worked in the department. After graduating in 1929, he held the position of Assistant Director in the Alumni Department until the death of Mr. Dwire, Vice President and former Director, whom he succeeded. Besides his regular duties connected with the Alumni Department, Mr. Dukes acts as an adviser to various organizations. Aiding him in his work is Miss Anne Garrard.

The Alumni Department serves as a connecting link between the graduates and the University, combining the public relations of the University with alumni affairs. Since its formation in 1922, the department has grown from a small office to one which occupies three rooms. Its duties are varied and cover many fields. Not only does it keep in touch with all alumni and have their addresses on hand, but record is kept of everyone who attended Duke, whether he is a graduate or not, and each is mailed all college literature, such as catalogues and pictorials. It sponsors all University entertainments; Homecoming and

The Alumni office serves all Duke Students here and away. They publish the Alumni News, which comes out monthly.

OFFICERS OF THE MEN'S STUDENT GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION THE STUDENT BODY

IN 1922, the Men's Student Government Association of Duke University was formed. Organized for the purpose of democratizing college life on West Campus, it added to its regular duties by undertaking the promotion of social activities. The growth of importance of Men's S.G.A. since its formation is revealed by the active part it now plays in campus life. It is with these standards in mind that the 1946-47 Association has acted.

The election in which this year's officers were chosen saw the return of many of the prewar elements usually associated with such elections. Vigorous campaigning between the Union Party and the University Party characterized the weeks preceding the election. The Union Party was victorious with Lou Bello elected president, Bill Raup, secretary, and Jim Davis, treasurer, while Ed Kollenberger took over the vice presidency. Senior representatives were Art Gilbert and Jim Foster; junior representatives, Bud Barrett and John Brooks; and sophomore representatives, Carlton Fleming and Bob Rich.

WOMEN'S STUDENT GOVERNMENT

Margaret "Goochie" Taylor, President

IN 1919, the women students of Trinity College formed a self-government organization, the foundation upon which was built, in 1924, the Student Government Association of the Woman's College. According to the Constitution, the aims and purposes of the Association are: "to increase a sense of individual responsibility; to further a spirit of unity among women of the college; and to cooperate with the faculty in creating and maintaining high ideals for the women of the University."

One of the first steps taken by the Association during 1946-47 was a revision of the election system. Other accomplishments included the modification of a number of minor regulations, the formation of a new rooming plan, the adoption of a policy of promoting closer relationships between town-girls and resident students, and an attempt to strengthen House Government.

In their way, W.S.G.A. has upheld the standards set for it in the past, and has attempted further development.

Classes

Together we passed the years, shouldering the burden of Time across the delicate span from youth to maturity, building a lasting love for the University...

THIS is a book depicting progress. It shows the developments that have taken place throughout the year—each season brought new situations, new ideas and new activities. There is physical progress that comes with material additions. While not as apparent, none the less notable are the classes themselves. For each class there is a different meaning and function for the college. The freshman class bring the necessary new material with them, which must be sifted to form new viewpoints indoctrinated with the Duke ideas. There is a bewilderment in adjusting to new surroundings, but by the end of that first year, they are ready to assume responsibilities. The Sophomores return to familiar surroundings and begin to make a firm stand; they begin to find their niches and work toward chosen goals. The junior year is a year with a purpose—a working to achieve honors and responsibility that comes with being a senior. To the seniors falls a heritage of leadership. It is a culmination of all the preceding classes. Thus each student has progressively advanced from his neophyte days to the end of four years.

The value of a diploma cannot be told completely. It stands for four years of study, of making friends, of coöperation with others, and in short—a preparation for emerging outside of the small college world into a greater and fuller life. Some have gained all they expected, others have gained more, and still others have not benefited as much as they expected; yet, each has matured a great deal and is taking with him the art of living with other people. Each class is a united body with common interests. When the day comes for each to go his own way—each with new individual interests—there is a feeling of comradeship that will not soon be forgotten.

THE SENIOR CLASS

June the second means the completion of one phase in the lives of the graduating Seniors, and the beginning of another phase that lies directly before them. Most of them consider it as the most important change in their lives, for graduation symbolizes the end of youth and the beginning of mature paths of thinking.

There will be a feeling of anxiety to leave the old and bound ahead into the new. But there will also be a feeling of sentimental reminiscence where countless events, big and little, comic or tragic, combined to make a pleasant association. Some will regret that they did not fulfill their earnest intentions made in their freshman year, while others will feel a sense of pride as they look back on their accomplishments, be it academic, extra-curricular, or social.

Their first three years were war-years. They witnessed the arrival and departure of the Army and Navy. They watched the Goody shop close, leaving behind it many memories of loud, joyous evenings of singing and drinking in the smoke-filled room. They changed from riding the bus for three years to piling into convertibles during their senior year. They spent their last Xmas train ride on Duke Specials, filled with students who in turn were filled with the Christmas spirit. They once again juggled their class schedules so they could have classes on both East and West. And there were many other transformations that took place during those four years.

But there were smaller events, also . . . daily events that went unnoticed, and will perhaps not be thought of until after June has come and gone. Such things as late-hour bull sessions, rainy walks down the campus, rushing to the P. O., cabin parties and private picnics, the serenade to the Engineers when they left East, secret meetings before elections, revision of the rushing system, and sunbathing under the telescopes of the Engineers.

These things will be taken with the graduating class. And there is something else that will be carried away—a modest confidence in themselves, and a hope that they attained a true standard of values and a positive view of criticism.

Geatner, D., Secretary; Fariss, C., Treasurer; Gvington, S., Vice President; Stutts, E., President.

THE JUNIOR CLASS

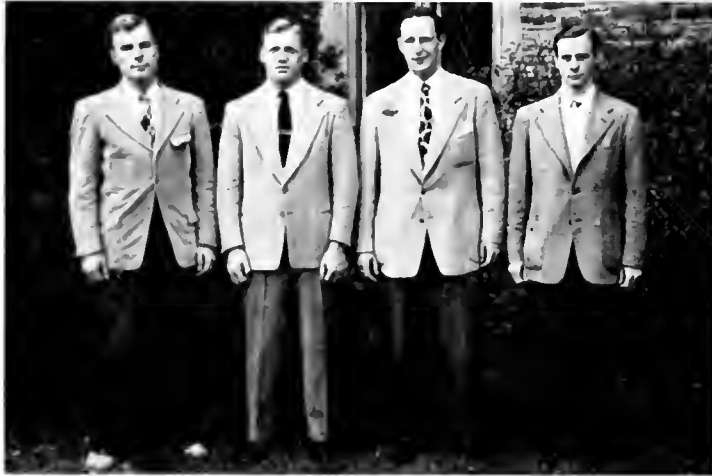

The junior year marks the end of freedom, for it is the last year free from the worry of Senior "C" averages, jobs, and entering into a new way of life. But it is also a year filled with anticipation and preparing for that all important Senior year.

Having conquered the traditional freshman's quandary and sophomore's slump, the Juniors started out to make a name for themselves. They filled their days with sponsoring drives, giving dances, advising the freshmen, and selecting leaders for the Senior year. An important event on East Campus was the arrival of the Senior jackets, which was accompanied with the feeling that at last they had become favored upperclassmen. Others worked hard on the last lap before becoming potential Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa, White Duchy, and Phi Kappa Delta members. Scholastic majors were picked out and requirements for graduation worked into the schedule.

The year was filled with new experiences. The Juniors were fortunate to find they had two years of school free from a war-governed University. They remembered too well the war years of Navy restrictions, no cars, and no spring vacations. The girls delighted in the return of the three to one ratio, while boys and girls approved of the return of Dean's List, cars, trips to Pinchurst and Greensboro, Junior and Senior privileges, fraternity open houses, spring vacation, and big-name bands. And they looked forward to the next year with the hope that more rules would be changed, and the feeling between East and West would become closer and closer.

An important element in the class was the large number of returned veterans. More came back into this group than into any other. They brought the memory of prewar life here at Duke, profits of experience of the war years, and the hopes and plans for a better University life. They made their influence felt. The change that has overtaken the world has definitely been felt by the Juniors. They, too, feel a sense of responsibility as they watch their college days being numbered. Their Junior year is over, but the grand work accomplished gives promise of the greatest year yet to come.

THE SOPHOMORE CLASS

Racing through a fascinating freshman year filled with newness and excitement, and surging ahead with eagerness during the second year, the sophomores played and worked harder. And it proved to be just as new and exciting as the first year. The sophomores found themselves free from freshman restrictions. They were also no longer on the receiving end of the treacherous days of rushing. The more fortunate ones who made their C averages sat proudly in chapter meetings. BOS and Sandals helped the freshmen acclimate themselves as easily as possible to the new experience they had gone through the preceding year.

After a year at Duke, the sophomores began to find and develop their particular talents and interests. Perhaps there was a feeling of arrogance for a time, but it soon passed as they assumed their new duties and responsibilities. They walked around with a feeling of self-assurance and were only too eager to tell the freshmen all they knew. Phi Eta Sigma and Ivy looked for potential geniuses for the coming year, while the old members looked forward to the dream that maybe someday they would be tapped to Phi Beta Kappa, O D K, or White Duchy. Others looked forward to a "C" average or a potential pin-up.

The classic event on East Campus of the traditional Goon Day, sophomores' annual day of dominance over the freshmen, finally came. After weeks of gleeful planning, they tasted sweet revenge at seeing freshmen bow down to them. The sophomore prestige was finally established at Rat Court when all the freshmen girls, complete with whiskers and tails, crawled into the auditorium and received their sentence.

But this feeling of revenge was soon forgotten and the sophomores settled down to show the freshmen how to behave and what they should and should not do, for the sophomores were high and mighty upperclassmen at last, and delighted in passing on the experience they had gained during the previous year.

The Sophomores have reached the half-way mark in their college career. These first two carefree years have flown by, and it will be all too soon that they will be putting on their black robes and caps.

THE FRESHMAN CLASS

From city and country, from high schools and prep school, freshmen come to Duke University. Past honors and accomplishments mean little as each must begin again to find his place in the new surroundings. Yet the new place is one of even greater opportunities and is more than ready to offer them. So each freshman enters the collegiate path to his goal — a goal often hard to reach.

The bewilderment of arrival is quickly taken care of by the upperclassmen during Freshman Week—Sandals, BOS, "Y" cabinets, and others lend a helping hand. They are willing to listen to advice, but at the same time they are ready to make up their own minds independently. This new independence is the greatest thrill a freshman can experience. They suddenly find themselves away from home, "on their own," and a feeling that they are college students at last surges through them.

The newness of college life delights them—they were awe-struck by their first glimpse of the grandeur of the chapel . . . they played gleefully on their first cabin party . . . they decided Duke dances were wonderful . . . they secretly looked forward to Goon Day . . . they met new friends from all over the country. Even exams held a fascination, as did the experience of going through rushing.

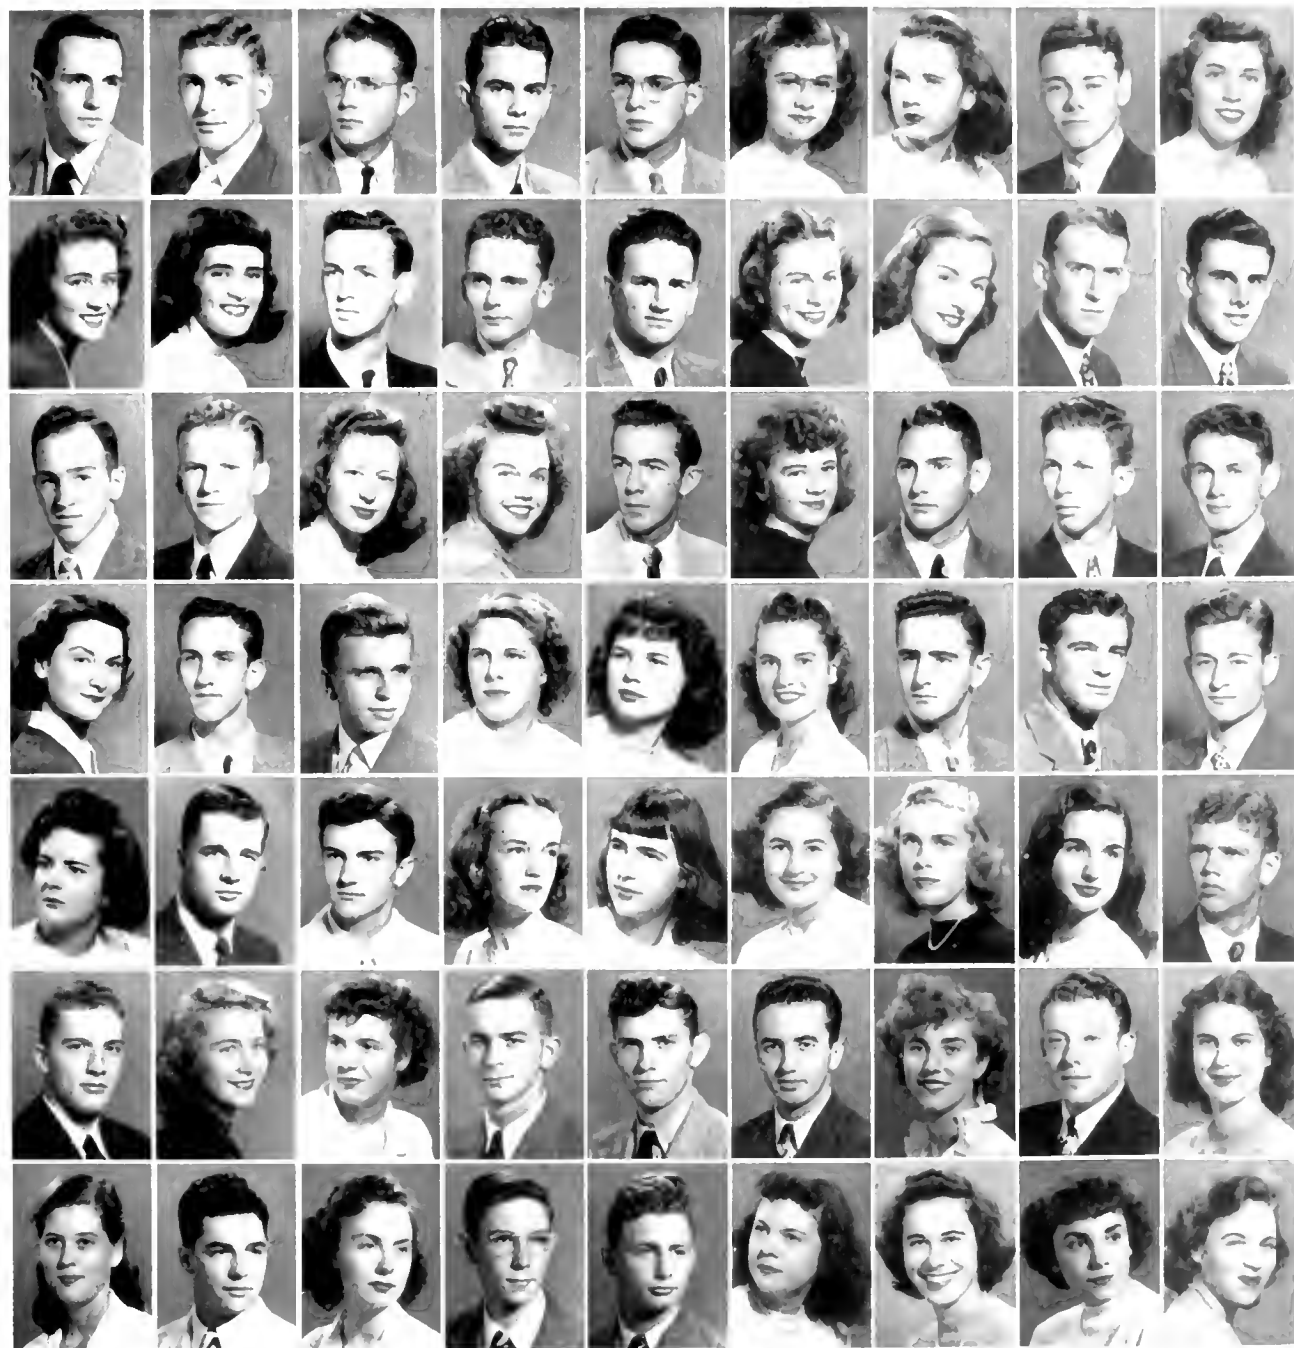

But soon the newness of dorm life, freshman week, and classes vanishes, and in its place comes a feeling of "belonging." As Spring comes around the freshmen are firmly established as an essential part of the college, and they roll along smoothly but firmly. They have overcome the obstacles that crop up in the path of every freshman. Some are successful, others are unsuccessful. But no matter what the outcome is, each freshman believes firmly that it has been an experience that he would not have missed for the world, and it is a year that he will never forget. It is a year filled with vivid memories, but with much promise for the future, for there are three more glorious years ahead, and these will be years of freedom, gayness, and a sense of responsibility. This class is the first freshman class to enter the back-to-normal postwar Duke, and they realize how fortunate they are. But they are also ready to settle down and prepare themselves to step out in the still unsettled world of today.

THE NURSES

Student nursing is an alternating series of great anticipations, astounding revelations, amazing discoveries, pleasant surprises, and self satisfying experiences.

Reminiscing seniors gaze back fondly on the day when the yellow cab set them out on the Baker House sidewalk with a thud that must have resounded all the way back home. They were Preclinicals, the bottom rung in a seemingly endless ladder. They were baffled by the long corridors of the hospital and nurses' homes and were often seen asking the old timers, "Which way to 04A or 110?" But they were fast to learn the straightest and quickest path to the dining room and the P. O. They spent hours in the labs puzzling over the mysteries of the "ologies," chemistry, and anatomy. They enjoyed pre-clinical class privileges, tolerated the eight to ten study hours, turned off their lights at ten-thirty, wondered what a "patient" looked like, and thought medical students were the most interesting and the smartest people in the hospital.

But soon the hospital began to seem not quite so large, and superiors seemed not quite so many. "Capping" came and a bib and cap were added to the uniforms. They became members of the Nurse's Student Government Association and began to voice, at first quite meekly, their opinions in the student body meetings.

The years came and went in rapid succession. There were fewer classes and more practical nursing. They began to see that nursing was not just theory but a humanitarian practice. They began to see that patients were not a chart number but each was an individual, a challenge to the nurse. In short, the evolution of a pre-clinical student to a graduate nurse was fast becoming a reality. These may have all been little beginnings; a bigger beginning was the day when at last there were no more classes to attend—just State Boards to be studied. Innumerable "twelve o'clock" permissions were granted to the girls, and they discovered that there is much to be learned in the world. They already suspected that outside of the white clean wards of the hospital waited a bigger challenge than they had ever met.

ORGANIZED A FEW YEARS AGO TO PROMOTE BETTER STUDENT GOVERNMENT

The gavel falls, and over two hundred young women become silent and settle down to the business of the evening. Such marks the beginning of each student government meeting of this organization. Since its creation several first Monday night of each month. All activities which do not come under the jurisdiction of the Education Committee are regulated by this organization. Since its creation several years ago the N.S.G.A. has proven itself to be of great value both to students and to the administration.

There in the amphitheater of the hospital student problems are discussed and new ideas are evaluated and instituted. Occasionally there are guest speakers invited to address the meetings. Chosen as the voice of the people is a Student Council, which consists of girls representing the student group. These are an elected president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, two representatives from each class, athletic chairman, chairman of social standards, and two members from the publications.

This council meets each Monday night with a faculty adviser to discuss business affairs of the N.S.G.A., handle disciplinary cases, and plan for the coming meetings.

During the early years of the school the students were ruled by an honor code. In 1942 the student body agreed to dispense with the code and in its place to institute an honor system, organized on a basis similar to other institutions. This honor system applies to the entire student body and requires that a nurse shall act honorably in all relations of student, professional, and social life so long as she is under the jurisdiction of the school.

As the N.S.G.A., which is as yet a young body, continues to grow and expand, the student nurses feel that their pride in the organization is well justified. Plans for its growth and improvement in the future are always being made, for the students feel that through self-government they better themselves and increase a sense of individual responsibility.

Honoraries

Those students of outstanding ability who distinguished themselves by meritorious service to the University in their particular fields of interest were rewarded by membership in one or more honorary fraternities. . . .

HONORARIES have come to play an important part in the life of the university. They are means of uniting those people with common interests throughout the country. They develop common grounds among the outstanding universities. They encourage men and women to discover and to develop their talents.

The purpose of any freshman entering college is to make himself feel as if he is a part of the school. He wants to experience the sense of contribution, no matter how large or small. Throughout the four years he spends at Duke he strives toward this goal. He enters wholeheartedly into campus organizations and activities. If, at the end of his college career, he has done his job exceedingly well, he is rewarded with the satisfaction of having become a member of an honorary society such as Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa, Phi Kappa Delta, or various others—each suited to his particular talents. He may have belonged to only one honorary or he may have belonged to several, but in any case his membership indicates curiosity about and ability for some special phase of college life; for honoraries are in the field of specialization. When a student is invited to membership he is expected to contribute to the life of the group. The benefits derived go beyond those of the classroom. The student becomes acquainted with fellow students and faculty members who have similar interests. He widens his experience with people and he may even learn something of his own importance. The importance of the honorary will be strengthened as the individual's character, ideals, and ambitions are strengthened in later life.

WHITE DUCHY

White Duchy is a secret order composed of the seven women of the senior class who represent the highest qualities of leadership and service in activities of the Woman's College. To be tapped to White Duchy is the highest honor awarded to women at Duke. The details of the organization of White Duchy, the methods of choosing members, the place of meeting, and the identity of the white-hooded figure which taps the seven members of the junior class in the May assembly are all secret. As the new members take their seats on the stage in the Woman's Auditorium, a white carnation is pinned on each of them by the old members of White Duchy. At intervals throughout the year all the members of White Duchy wear white carnations, symbols of the organization.

OMICRON DELTA KAPPA

Rho circle of Omicron Delta Kappa was chartered in 1926, twelve years after the fraternity had been founded by members of the student body and faculty at Washington and Lee University. The purpose of the founders was to bring together for the good of the university all leaders in the various forms of college activities. Thus it is that Duke's circle, Rho of Omicron Delta Kappa, by recognizing men who have attained eminence in scholarship, athletics, publications, and other fields of campus life, rewards those seniors who have been leaders in the activities of the University. The officers for the past year were: Ed Koffenberger, president; Norris Hodgkins, vice president; Dean Alan K. Manchester, secretary; and John Seward, treasurer

PHI KAPPA DELTA

The members of Phi Kappa Delta are chosen from the senior class of the Woman's College as the twenty best representatives of leadership in their class. Founded in 1944 as a local honorary society, Phi Kappa Delta aspires to become Mortar Board, national honorary, in two years. Phi Kappa Delta recognizes women of Duke for the same qualities of leadership, scholarship, and service for which Omicron Delta Kappa rewards its members, senior men of Duke. Tapping is conducted in much the same way as is that of ODK, the brother fraternity. The names of the new members are tacked one by one upon a flower-bordered shield of Phi Kappa Delta which stands in front of the Woman's Union. Members are chosen twice a year, in the spring and in the fall.

SANTA FILOMENA

Santa Filomena, Duke School of Nursing Senior Honorary Society, has for its goals the betterment of interclass relationships and the promotion of better nursing care and higher nursing standards. The candidates for membership must show recognized qualities of leadership, demonstrate superior nursing ability, and must have maintained a high scholastic record. The candidates are chosen from the rising senior class and in a candlelight ceremony, the members "tap" the candidates by pinning a white flower on their uniforms and presenting them with a small Nightingale lamp. Members may wear a small pin, the only jewelry which adorns a student's uniform. It is a proud and thrilling moment when this tiny emblem of the highest ideals in nursing is given to a nurse.

The DES honorary engineering society, whose aim is to promote interest in engineering and to recognize superior scholarship, leadership, and character, was established at Duke University twenty-three years ago. During its many years on campus it has been an organizing and leadership agency for encouraging campus activities. This year, DES sponsored an Engineer open house and smoker for freshmen engineers, and aided in the preparation of the freshman engineer handbook. The active members, tapped publicly each year at the Engineers' Ball, are chosen from members of the junior and senior classes of the College of Engineering; the upper one-fourth of the junior class are eligible for membership.

BETA OMEGA SIGMA

THE LITTLE COGS IN THE LITTLE WHEELS ARE BEGINNING TO ROLL

Beta Omega Sigma, stripped of the duty of disciplining freshmen, turned its attention to other means of serving the student body this year. With the women's Sophomore Class as co-sponsors, BOS opened the school year with a sophomore open house in the Ark on the first day of classes, and, on October 19, together with Sandals, played host to an overflow crowd of seven-hundred and fifty Dukesters in the first formal dance of the season. BOS, through its publicity campaigns, helped turn out throngs of students to the football pep rallies, and went on to spark campus enthusiasm before the Carolina game with the traditional bon-fire. During Homecoming week-end, BOS presented a cup to the Sigma Chi House and movie tickets to House O for their prizewinning Homecoming decorations. In January, BOS again joined hands with Sandals in the revival of joint sings on campus. A BOS council was formed, which has as its primary purpose the fostering of closer coöperation between BOS and the Freshman Class.

BOS, founded here at Trinity College as an honorary fraternity among leaders, celebrated its thirtieth anniversary this year. It has as its purpose the strengthening of Duke spirit and tradition, the encouragement of freshmen participation in extra-curricular activities, and service to the student body. Membership is limited to those outstanding sophomores who, by their second semester have compiled a total of twenty-four activity points, based on participation in extra-curricular activities and scholarship. The active members this year were Dick Barrett, Bob Chapman, Al Earnest, Bill Edwards, Zeno Edwards, Jack Fieldson, Carlton Fleming, Bob Garey, Ed Gatling, Fenton Guinee, Will Jackson, Bud Middlesworth, Larry Phelps, Lew Hodgkins, Art Polier, Manley Stockton, Al Sugarman, Jim Summers, Bob Taylor, Frank Trechsel, and Chuck White. Beta Omega Sigma was led through this year by Carlton Fleming, president; Ed Gatling, vice president; Bob Taylor, secretary; and Al Earnest, treasurer.

IT IS NECESSARY TO BE QUITE DISCREET WHEN SPEAKING OF OUR FEET

Sandals is the name given to the group of twenty sophomore women who are chosen as demonstrating the highest qualities of leadership, scholarship, character, and service during their freshman year at Duke. Every spring the old and new Student Council select the twenty most outstanding freshmen from recommendations from the various organizations in which the freshmen participated, from the House Counsellors, from the House Presidents, and from the Freshman Office. To be eligible for membership a rising sophomore must have a C-average for her first semester at Duke. The tapping ceremony is an impressive one which takes place in April in the Woman's Auditorium. The appointment not only results in the honor and reward for past accomplishments, but also in the pledge for future service to the college.

Sandals was founded in 1932 by the Woman's Student Government Association to fill the need of an honorary leadership organization for freshmen women, just as Beta Omega Sigma was functioning on West Campus. Membership, however, entails responsibilities, since Sandals is the service organization of Student Government. It has traditional duties such as hostessing in the Ark every night, assistance to the Administration and to the new students during Freshman Week, and taking attendance in assemblies.

Since there are no dues to the organization, every year Sandals' first project is to make money. This year they held the first formal dance of the year with BOS, their brother organization. Their main purpose this year was to redecorate the Ark, which included buying a radio-victrola to replace the juke-box.

The officers for 1946-1947 were: Betty Bob Walters, president; Mary Brinkman, vice president; Charlotte Mill, secretary; and June Sumner, treasurer. The adviser for Sandals is Mrs. Schraeder, who has helped them with her conscientious supervision to complete another successful year.

Recognizing the need for an organization on West that would encourage incoming students to higher planes of scholastic achievement, the men of the freshman class instituted the national honorary, Phi Eta Sigma, on the Duke Campus in 1931. Founded at Illinois University twenty-three years ago, the fraternity has today a national membership which includes forty-nine active chapters.

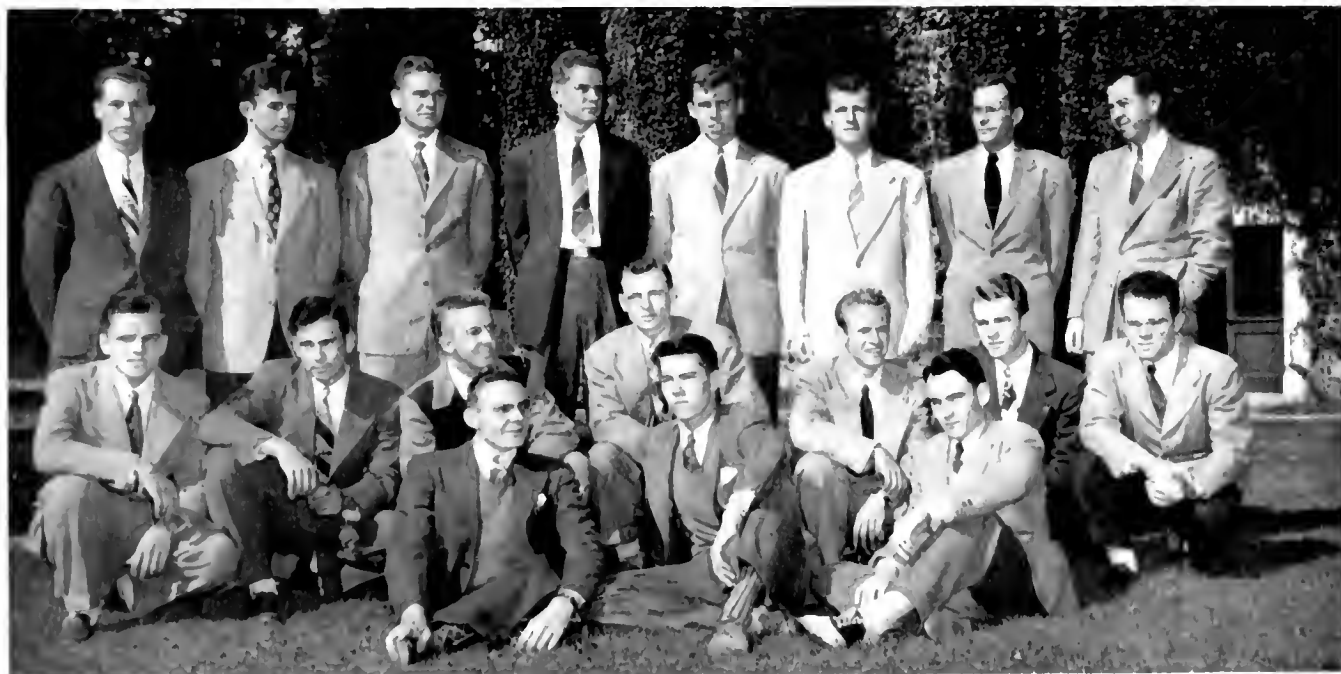

In fulfilling its purpose of recognizing and promoting excellence in scholarship among first year men, Phi Eta Sigma has shouldered several responsibilities, the most important being to lend a helping hand to freshmen who are having difficulties with their studies. A Freshman Scholastic Advisory Council was formed, and it has worked tirelessly to assist any first year man who applies for aid. Functioning with ever-increasing activity, the organization now plans to award a plaque to the freshman house making the highest average and to present a cup to the social fraternity whose pledge class excels scholastically.

Phi Eta Sigma has been further embellished at Duke by the active part the organization has had in spurring freshmen toward high goals of scholastic achievement.

Annually a banquet is held celebrating the advent of new members who have successfully maintained an average of 2.25 for the first semester or 2.5 for the entire freshman year. Membership in Phi Eta Sigma signifies the highest degree of scholastic accomplishment that can be attained by a freshman.

Under the capable leadership of Frank Trechsel, president; Ty Kaus, vice president; Robert Rich, secretary; and Richard Barrett, treasurer, Phi Eta Sigma coasted through the year. The members were J. J. Austin, S. H. Brown, R. A. Bugg, A. L. Busch, O. N. Forrest, W. F. Guinee, R. E. Haines, J. N. Hicks, R. F. Hill, D. L. Hinman, W. H. Jackson, Arthur Miller, R. W. Miner, M. E. Rudisill, H. A. IT IS PROVEN THAT PEDAGOGY HAS A PROPER EFFECT ON PULCHRITUDE.

Organized by the women of the freshman class in 1937, for the purpose of stimulating intellectual curiosity and inspiring first year women to greater scholastic achievement, Ivy has fulfilled its objectives and gained recognition, not only as an honorary society, but as an active campus organization. Its members served as ushers at recitals and concerts in the Woman's College Auditorium throughout the year. At mid-semester Ivy entertained those freshmen having a B average, and again in the spring a picnic was given in their honor.

Eligibility for membership in Ivy is based upon the attainment of an average of 2.25 quality points for each semester, or 2.5 for the whole freshman year. Twenty new members were recognized at the tapping service held late last spring in the Woman's College Auditorium, and four more were admitted in the early fall of the year.

After a short decade of existence, Ivy can well be proud of its history and of the fine reputation it has established as one of East's most worthwhile organizations. However, the value of the encouragement it has afforded deserving freshmen far outweighs the measure of credit received.

Ivy traditions were carried out this year through the administration of Margaret Ann Penfield, president; Elizabeth Vosburgh, vice president; Ruth Harrell, secretary; Mary Ann Atkins, treasurer; Pauline Ligon, reporter; Miss Ellen Huckabee, adviser. The members were Nancy Adams, Mary Ann Atkins, Shirley Blue, Enta Cove, Martha Duncan, Mary Glenn, Helen Ruth Harrell, Nancy Huntington, Betsy John Hurley, Elsie Pauline Ligon, Helen Mapp, Elizabeth McDonald, Ellen Morrison, Margaret Ann Penfield, Jean Stevens Richardson, Rosalind Schwartz, Marilyn Skinner, Sarah Simpson, Elizabeth Roberts Walters, Gloria Whetstone, Lois Jean Wiloughby, Mary Wimberly, and Barbara Wurmstich.

WE. HERE IS THE RUB TO BE OR NOT TO BE THAT IS CONGESTION

The Theta Alpha Phi badge is one which is recognized by theatre people throughout the country. It entitles members to go backstage at any production, thus giving them insight into the mechanics of the professional theatre and allowing them opportunity to meet the celebrities of the stage, many of whom are fellow members of Theta Alpha Phi.

The national fraternity was founded in 1919 at the University of Chicago, and Duke's chapter was organized in 1925. The object of the fraternity is to increase, stimulate, and foster achievement among students in all branches of dramatic art. This does not mean that its members must be actors, but the national headquarters sets up certain requirements for membership: two major roles or four minor roles or the equivalent amount of work along business, make-up, or managerial lines. This work may be done either in Duke Players, Hoof and Horn, or in the French plays.

This year Theta Alpha Phi became active again in its prewar capacity. Therese, with Barbara Seifert playing the lead, was presented in December, and the traditional annual May Day pageant was revived by Theta Alpha Phi. One act freshman plays were sponsored by the fraternity. These performances are the only ones of that nature in which freshmen are allowed to participate.

Patsy Foutz was President of Theta Alpha Phi during the first semester, but resigned because of her election to the presidency of Southgate. She was succeeded by Don Clark, who served as president during the second term. The other officers were: Chuck White, vice president; Ed Menerth, secretary; and Barbara Sachs, treasurer. Pop West is the faculty adviser.

THE PEN IS MIGHTIER THAN WE EVER THOUGHT COULD BE POSSIBLE

In 1919, at the University of Tennessee, a national honorary literary society for women was founded, Chi Delta Phi. Three years later the Zeta chapter was founded at Duke. The objectives of this society are to encourage interest in literature and creative work in writing. The society fosters its members' efforts in writing poetry, short stories, and narratives. This organization recognizes women whose interest in letters has been shown through their labors on the different publications and through other outstanding literary efforts made during their college years. Above all its purpose is to be an organization where women can meet with others so interested, talk over mutual problems, and profit by friendly criticism of their work. To become a member of Chi Delta Phi, one must show an interest in literature, and a demonstrated ability for creative work in any literary field.

During the past year several meetings were held at which literary discussions took place. At other meetings distinguished members of the faculty, and well known literary figures spoke to the members on appropriate subjects. Occasionally this chapter met with the Chi Delta Phi chapter at the University of North Carolina. One of the major projects of the society this year was work on founding a brother organization for men interested in creative writing. Mrs. Newton Ivey White and Mrs. Lewis Patton are the chapter advisers.

Officers this year were: Sue Bowmall, president; Ginny Gunn, vice president; Ann Smoot, secretary; and Barbara Pearce, treasurer. The members were: Carolyn Brimberry, Marjorie Clute, Olive Lanham, Ann Smoot, Peg Throne, Betsy Chapman, Sue Bowmall, Ginny Gunn, Barbara Pearce, Lib Shanley, Doris Harbrey, Maggie Carter, Polly Walker, Sis Willoughby, Mary Jane Simpson, Helen Mercner, Kay Lauer, Margaret Palmer, and Pat Way.

Tau Psi Omega was founded in 1936 by Mr. and Mrs. Neal Dow, and a group of Duke students. It has expanded until now chapters are found at the Women's College in Greensboro, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and Northwestern University at Evanston, Illinois. Besides furthering interest in the French language, its aims include providing a means whereby students able to speak French may have an opportunity to do so. To accomplish this, Tau Psi Omega holds open houses every year for those interested in membership. These feature speakers, French songs, and other forms of entertainment.

To become a member, one must have at least one year of college French (or the equivalent) with a B average or better, and be able to speak the language.

During the past two years Tau Psi Omega has been sending packages to a pair of French twins each month.

This year Tau Psi Omega produced several French plays. Plans are also being made to install new chapters in other colleges and universities in the country. The club wants to begin a library of French songs and records.

Two initiations are held each year, and many open houses to which non-members are invited. The officers of this honorary society were: Nora Recio, president; Helen Mercner, vice president; Jane Rowe, secretary; and Beverly Howerton, treasurer. Members were Martha Abernathy, Jean Barnhardt, Anna Borden, Margaret Emhart, Beverly Howerton, Betty Jackson, Jean Kilmer, Beth Kuykendall, Juanita Lane, Constance Lummus, Helen Mercner, Ruth Northrop, Nora Recio, Allienne Rimer, Jane Rowe, Barbara Sachs, Jean Marie Strange, Patricia Taylor, Jean Tommasi, Dreama Walker, and Frank Micara, Patricia Sillman, Ann Smoot, and Margaret Taylor were inactive members. Mr. and Mrs. Neal Dow of the Romance Language Department, as advisers, have given most generously of their time in guiding and aiding the fraternity.

Sigma Delta Pi, national Spanish honorary fraternity, marks 1947 as its tenth year at Duke. This chapter was chartered in 1937 as a branch of one of the largest national honoraries. The Alpha chapter was founded in 1919 at the University of California at Berkeley.

According to the constitution of the national fraternity, the purpose of Sigma Delta Pi is four-fold: to cause a wider knowledge and greater interest in the contributions of Spanish culture to our own civilization; to stimulate an enthusiasm for these things in the students of the various universities and colleges where there are chapters; to foster a coöperative spirit and friendly attitude between the nations of Hispanic speech and of English speech; and to reward those who have manifested extraordinary abilities in studying the Spanish language.

Membership requirements are based on scholastic average in the study of Spanish. To be eligible for Sigma Delta Pi, a student must have had a B-average (2.0 quality points per semester hour) in three years of Spanish and must also have a general scholastic average of 1.8 quality points per semester hour in all the subjects he has taken. Besides these requirements, a student must show an active and enthusiastic interest in all things Hispanic. Thus it is that not all the members of Alpha Theta chapter are Spanish majors, but they have gained membership by their support and interest in Spanish culture.

An average of two meetings per term are held. One of these is an open house to which all students interested in Sigma Delta Pi are invited. The other meeting is usually a combined business meeting which begins with supper in the Union where all the conversation is in Spanish and ends with the business. Often a speaker is invited to these meetings.

The officers for this year were: Connie Merrill, president; Johnston Watts, vice president; Majel Kalquist, secretary-treasurer; and Elizabeth Stutts, social chairman.

*I WISE YOUNG MEN AND A DRAUGHT

Pi Tau Sigma, a national honorary Mechanical Engineering fraternity, was organized at Duke by Assistant Professor William Hinton in 1944. The objects of this organization are to foster the high ideals of the engineering profession, to stimulate interest in coordinate departmental activities, and to promote the mutual professional welfare of its members. With these aims in mind, group projects are undertaken by the chapter as a whole. The most important of these is the election of the outstanding sophomore each year.

Prospective members are voted upon by the members, and are chosen on the basis of sound engineering ability, scholarship, and personality. Last term the chapter lost its original adviser, W. A. Hinton, who went back to Georgia Tech. Professor Ralph S. Wilbur, chairman of the Department of Mechanical Engineering, has filled this position.

The annual convention of all the chapters was held for the first time since the war in Austin, Texas, at the University of Texas. A delegate representing Duke was present.

Initiation of new members is held each year and is superseded by a banquet and speaker. Last term W. J. Eitman, professor of Economics, spoke on "The Engineer and the Price Level." The previous term Mr. Williams, Regional vice president of the A.S.M.E., spoke on "The Engineer and Citizenship." At this meeting Mr. Williams, Mr. E. S. Theiss, and Mr. T. C. Cooke were made honorary members.

Officers for Pi Tau Sigma for the past year were: president, Ernest Friedli; vice president, John H. Boeckel; corresponding secretary, Clifford Sayre; recording secretary, Edward Linker; treasurer, Eugene B. Johnson.

HOW TO GO ON WITH LEARNING TO ADMINISTER BY WILL AS ADMINISTER

The Zeta Chapter of the National Fraternity, Kappa Chi, was founded at Duke University in the Fall of 1942, and chartered May 18, 1943. The National Chapter was formed in 1936. It is the purpose of Kappa Chi to provide and to promote a medium for the realization of true fraternity, in order that its members may mutually share in worship and fellowship based on the high ideals of Jesus Christ. The object of the fraternity is to provide and realize fellowship among the pre-ministerial students on the campus, and to be of additional service in furthering the religious life on the campus.

It is the sincere desire of every member to be the disciple of Christ; bearing His Cross; joining together in fellowship of His service to the Glory of God; and the realization of His Kingdom.

During the past years the members of Kappa Chi have been in charge of the University

Vespers services each Thursday evening. These vesper services, always well planned, are a source of enjoyment and inspiration to students on West Campus and East Campus, as well as to the public. Many programs were planned to promote friendship in Christianity between the East and West campuses.

Highlighting the social calendar were picnics, dances, and cabin parties.

Any undergraduate student who anticipates entering the full-time services of the ministry is eligible for membership. A two thirds vote of active membership constitutes the election of the new nominee, providing the new member has a "C" average. The officers for the year were: President, Roland Rosson; Vice President, Robert P. Ward; Secretary, Thomas Driver; and Treasurer, Bert Raper. There were thirty seven members of Kappa Chi this year.

THE PRODUCT OF THE MEANS CAN SOMETIMES BE CARRIED TO EXTREMES

The members of the honorary mathematics fraternity are distinguished by a gold key with the Greek letters of the fraternity, Pi Mu Epsilon, upon it. This national society was founded in 1914 at Syracuse University; Duke's chapter, North Carolina Alpha, was chartered in 1932, eighteen years later. The purpose of the fraternity is the promotion of mathematical scholarship among the students in academic institutions of university grade, by electing members on an honorary basis, according to their proficiency in mathematics. It engages in activities designed to promote the mathematical and scholarly development of its members.

To be eligible for membership, a student must have taken calculus, must have acquired a B-average in the math he has taken, and must have at least a C-average in all other courses. There are one hundred and seven students listed on its membership roll.

THEY MAKE A CHANGE FROM CAPS AND GOWNS TO RAPS AND FROWNS

Kappa Delta Pi is an honorary fraternity of students who have shown interest and ability in the field of education. Alpha Tau chapter at Duke was formed in May, 1927, by the members of the Braxton Craven Education Society, which owes origin itself to the inspiration of Braxton Craven. Mr. Craven was one of the most eminent North Carolinians in the field of education. The first chapter of Kappa Delta Pi was founded at the University of Illinois on March 18, 1911, sixteen years before the society was organized at Duke. there are now 131 active chapters in the schools and colleges of the United States.

The purposes of the fraternity are to encourage high professional, intellectual, and personal standards, and to recognize outstanding contributions to education. To be eligible for membership in Kappa Delta Pi, a student must have junior class standing, rank in the upper quarter of his class, and be enrolled in

The officers of the society for this year were the following: George F. Epps, president; Ruth Neuhoff, vice president; Jo Ann Walker, secretary; and Wayne Bainbridge, treasurer. The faculty adviser, Dr. W. W. Elliott of the department of mathematics, helped the local chapter of Pi Mu Epsilon to fulfill the purpose for which it was organized.

Meetings are usually held once a month, at which time faculty members speak to the fraternity on subjects akin to mathematics. This year a banquet was held for all the members and the new initiates.

The membership of Pi Mu Epsilon consists largely of science majors and engineers, along with the mathematics majors who make up a minority of the membership. To be asked to join the fraternity constitutes an honor which is coveted by all those who are interested in mathematics.

the teacher training group. The fraternity key is a gold scroll bearing the emblem of the beehive and the Greek letters KDPI. The colors are jade and violet and the national publication is the Educational Forum.

Since many of the women are already doing their practice teaching in the Durham schools, there are many practical questions which come up for discussion in the monthly meetings. Because teaching is such an important profession, in that it is one of the most formative influences in a child's life, the organization feels that it is performing a very valuable service in advising those who will be the teachers of the future.

Dr. A. M. Proctor is the chapter counselor, and the following were the officers for this year: Walter Gale, president; Virginia Hartman, vice president; J. H. Oswalt, secretary; and Elizabeth Ambrose, treasurer.

ONE OUNCE OF TIM, ONE TIGGER OF VIGOR, AND ONE DASH OF VITALITY

The members of Delta Phi Rho Alpha are leaders in various sports on East Campus. This club is an honorary athletic society for women, which was founded in 1921 by a group of enthusiastic sportswomen at Duke. It was created as a sister organization to Tombs, honorary athletic fraternity for men. The aims of this society are to promote and encourage school spirit, greater and more active participation in intramural sports, class sportsmanship, and leadership and interest in athletics. By challenging winning teams in athletic contests, it fosters keener competition in the various sports.

To become a member of Delta Phi Rho Alpha one must demonstrate good sportsmanship, interest in athletics, and ability to participate in sports. Each year a maximum of two juniors and seven sophomores are admitted. The initiation in March is similar to that of Tombs. Each "goat" is garbed in the traditional costume of heavy black stockings, one white and one black shoe, a middy blouse, and a short black skirt. Each initiate has to carry a rolling pin, a paddle, a bucket, and various other articles with the Greek letters of the sorority on them.

At the end of every year, in order to encourage athletic participation, and the perfection of one's abilities, a key is awarded to the senior, who, by her leadership, sportsmanship, and athletic ability throughout her four years at Duke, is considered the most outstanding athlete.

This year the officers of the club were: Marjorie Frey, president; Ann Templeton, secretary; and Dorothy Meredith, treasurer. The active members of Delta Phi Rho Alpha this year were the following: Jean Rockey, Margaret Taylor, Pat Weiland, Mary Elizabeth Walters, Susan Amsbury, Bootsie Thorne, Libby Vining, Dorothy Meredith, Marian Pecot, Jo Rac, Ann Templeton, and Marjorie Frey.

REMEMBER, A "D" ON THE SWEATER IS WORTH TWO ON THE REPORT

The new Varsity "D" Club, which was formed in March, 1946, has taken its place among the major organizations on the Duke campus. Combining the better features of Tombs, an old athletic honorary fraternity, and the old Varsity Club, the new club has been designed as a social, athletic honorary organization for athletes.

The Club attempts to further a better social and greater athletic interest for the school as a whole.

In order to become a member of the Club, one must first be awarded a varsity letter; then he must submit a letter requesting admittance as a member. Once each semester a limited number of the applicants are accepted. Limited by its constitution to fifty members, the Varsity "D" voted this semester to place all married and graduate students on an associate status, so that more of the returning veterans could be accepted. The Club now has 48 members and 23 associate members.

The members sponsored the annual Homecoming dance this year, and a dance in the Spring semester. The Club room in the new gym, donated by the Athletic Association, was open before and after all home athletic contests for the use of visiting teams, coaches, officials, press, and the members of the Club and their guests. Highlighting these functions were the Homecoming openhouse, and the openhouses following some of the big basketball games.

The Club has undertaken a concentrated drive to discourage the wearing of numerals and letters won at other schools, and a drive against the destruction of public and private property during the football season and throughout the year.

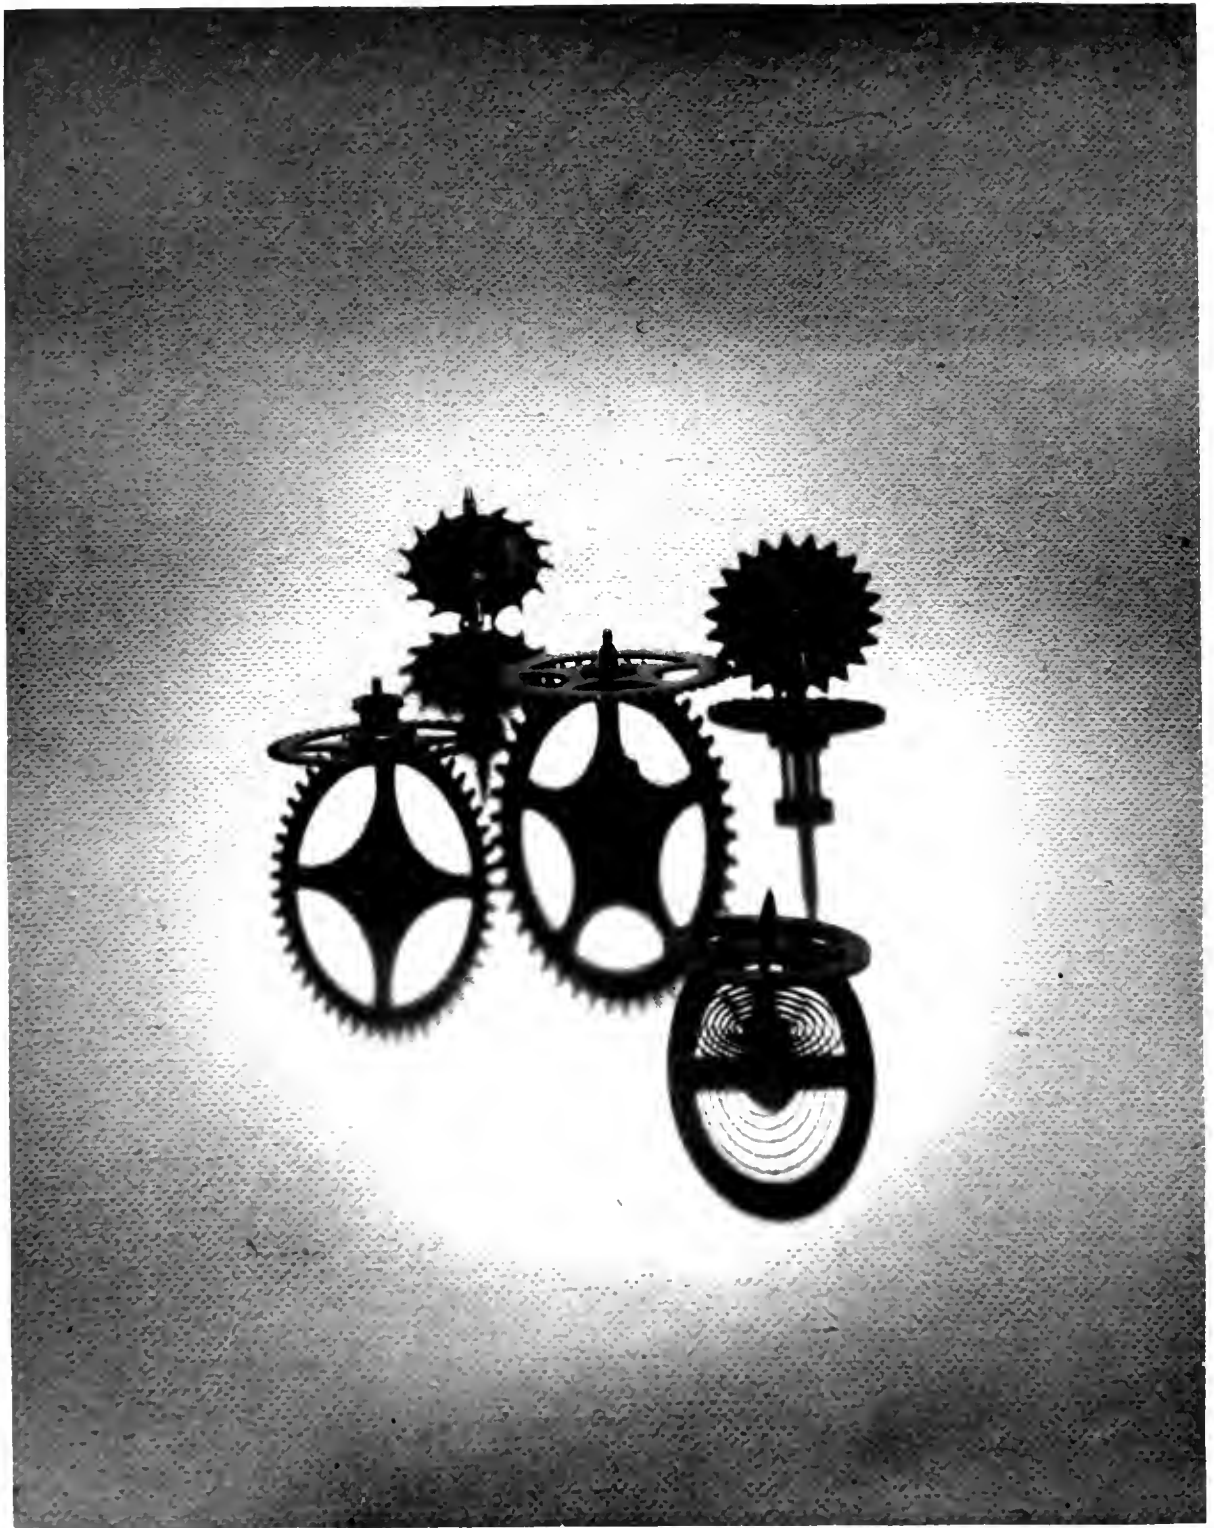

The officers for this year were: president, Charles Davis; vice president, Grady Stott; secretary, E. P. Bethune; treasurer, Caspar Holroyd; publicity director, R. M. Livingston; chairman, Warren Pope.

Organizations

Each of us went his separate way, choosing an outlet for his talent amongst the vast and varied web of organizations which interwove our extracurricular life.

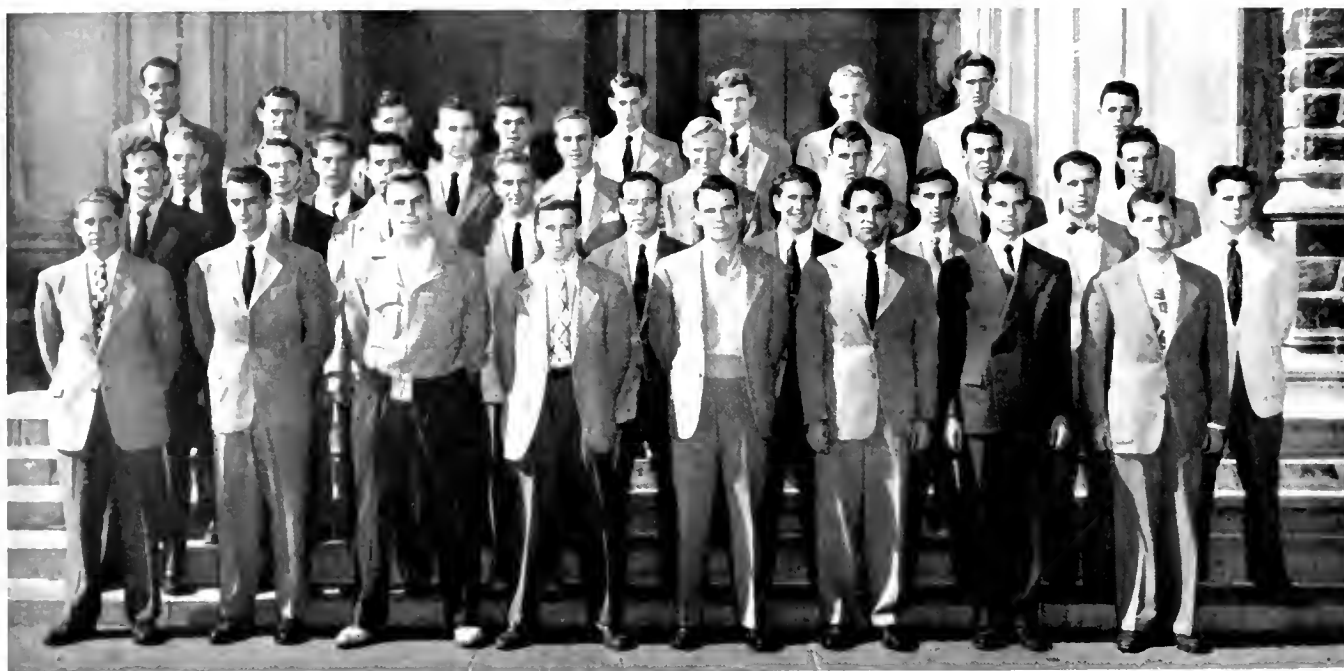

THROUGHOUT life the drive to achieve something, to be someone, dominates our personality. We unconsciously strive to improve ourselves and to make advancement—socially, scholastically and economically. In four college years this stimulus for achievement is given added impetus by participation in organizations. Democracy characterizes the organizations. Every individual is offered the equal opportunity to progress and grow through work and service. It is through these college organizations that we learn the true importance of the individual. Our ideas, whether good or bad, may be presented. Our talents may be used to their best advantage. Training to help us in our future occupation is often laid before us. All these factors add incentive for further accomplishments and create inspiration for our present and future work.

Whether our interests lie in engineering, dramatics, medicine, publications, or social service, there is an organization at Duke that helps deepen the individual's interest in that subject, as well as widen his knowledge of it. While doing this, new friendships are made and old ones are strengthened. We discover that our merits do not go unnoticed, but on the other hand are not over-rated. We must prove our worth to the organization; we cannot live on past reputation. Full benefit of membership in organizations is achieved only by those who devote their sincere energies.

In future years we shall doubtlessly look back on our four years of college and we shall consider what went toward making them worthwhile. With scant reflection we shall then realize that it was the work and the people with whom we worked in the organizations which remain most clear in our memory. It is this memory of college that we shall hold most dear.

THE MEN'S FRESHMAN ADVISORY COUNCIL

The Men's Freshman Advisory Council, founded in 1937, faced many new problems this year. They undertook the tremendous task of helping veterans become properly adjusted at Duke. This organization helps the Freshman by offering scholastic and social aid. This year it was planned to give each new man an adviser of equal experience. This matching of ages, war experiences, and future plans, is an important milestone in the history of the Freshman Advisory Council.

The Freshman Advisory Council has no national affiliation. It is supported financially by the members, or by the fraternities that they represent. Forty per cent of the advisers of the F.A.C. are independents. The advisers are chosen from the junior and senior classes, and must have a C average. The officers were: president, W. A. Willson; vice president, A. B. Tallman; secretary, L. M. Clymer; treasurer, Roger Neighborgall.

William "Bird" Willson, Chairman

WOMEN'S F.A.C.

Peggy Wilkinson, Chairman

In many ways the Freshman year is the most important year in college, for it is during this period that the habits and patterns which will govern all of the other years, and the final net gain of the college experience, are set up. Realizing this, in 1931, Mrs. Hazen Smith organized a group of upperclassmen to act as advisers for the incoming Freshman class. Then, as now, the girls were chosen on the basis of leadership, character, and the particular personality adaptations that facilitate deep friendships between an adviser and her freshmen.

The importance of this work became increasingly evident through the years, and the Freshman Advisory Commission, originally a part of the Y, grew up into an entirely independent organization. The chairman of the Commission, who this year was Peg Wilkinson, now becomes automatically an ex officio member of the Student Council.

THEY INSTRUCT THE NEWCOMERS, ADMONISHING "GO EAST YOUNG MAN."

The primary goal of the Young Men's Christian Association is the development of a sense of Christian fellowship among the Duke undergraduate men. This feeling is most efficiently engendered among the students through admiration of the service rendered to them by the "Y."

During Orientation Week, when the year began, "ASK A Y MAN" signs were almost as ubiquitous as Kilroy, greeting the gaze of the returning veteran or new freshman each time he looked up from the "Y" sponsored Handbook.

Open houses, Polity Club programs, dances, retreats, and especially the Twilight Hour with its recorded classical and popular music also captured the enthusiasm of the campus. Sick men appreciated the Y-sponsored hospital visits, and a social service program outside the University was very much expanded under Irv Nichols' summer leadership.

THEY HELP TO KEEP ALL THE FRESHMEN FROM ALWAYS WONDERING "Y".

One of the important organizations on the Woman's campus is the YWCA Cabinet. The YWCA, active at Duke long before the Woman's College was established, was organized by Mrs. A. M. Gates and Mrs. W. H. Glasson, and was a forerunner of the Woman's Student Government Association and Freshman Advisory Council. This club did the work of the F.A.C. during its first years, and sponsored the beginnings of the W.S.G.A.

The organization has a threefold program of ownership, study, and play. It is a Christian association, and seeks to help the students find the joy of living through Christ. The YWCA members meet the Freshmen and transfers upon their arrival in Durham, and help them get settled in their new surroundings. This year it sponsored, with the W.S.G.A., the freshman pajama party and "Stunt Night" during Freshman Week.

THE FRESHMAN “Y” COUNCIL

The Freshman “Y” Council works in conjunction with the “Y” leaders, in order to promote wholesome social relations and religious activities on the campus. The Council devotes its energy to the planning of better recreation and providing opportunities for students to put their religious ideas into practice. During the year it has sponsored the lovely twilight-candlelight vesper services, retreats, discussions, semimonthly student forums, and several successful dances in the Ark.

The members for '46-'47 were: Tom Shelton, Sam Banks, Kay Helms, Frank Alverson, Carl Burgert, Wilbur Devendorf, Charles Tutan, Kent Burns, Bob Stipe, Bob Wilkin, Nick Nickerson, Mack Tribble, Dick Price, and Howard Poston.

The officers were: Tom Shelton, president; Sam Banks, vice president; Kay Helms, secretary-treasurer; Frank Alverson, chaplain.

The Sophomore “Y” Council functions as a subordinate unit to the Senior Council, which is affiliated with the National YMCA. During the war it was abolished, but was reestablished on the campus in March 1946; since that time it has reaffirmed itself as an active and necessary coördinate board, making close coöperation between the Sophomore “Y” members and the seniors a reality.

The threefold purpose of the Sophomore “Y” is to train men for work on the Senior “Y” Council, to help the Senior “Y” carry on its activities, and to carry on the general work of the YMCA. Successfully putting this purpose into effect, the sophomores have worked diligently on their projects, among which were the creation of a Lost and Found Station, Homecoming decorations, the Sophomore Sing, and the afternoon dances given in the Ark.

The Junior "Y" Council came into being in 1944, and has since served as a coordinating link between the over-all leadership of the "Y" Board and the members of the junior class. Besides aiding in the publication of a campus guide book and helping with the annual "Y" Christmas Fair, the council members have given service at the Duke Hospital.

Forty Juniors composed the council this year. The officers for the year were: Ila Wertenberger, president; Lila Magruder, vice president; Marilyn Eelman, secretary; Jim McRae, treasurer.

This year the main project adopted by the Sophomore "Y" was supplying Edgemont Community Center with a library. The money to buy the books was raised by the participation of the Sophomore "Y" in the campus-wide "Y Fair" held in December. In November the council sponsored a dance in the Ark for the Veteran's Club.

The officers for 1946-1947 were: Shirley Field, president; Jane Caldwell, vice president;

Elizabeth Hoff, secretary; and Clare Flowers, treasurer.

SOCIAL STANDARDS COMMITTEE

The first Social Standards Committee was established at Trinity College to meet the social needs of the women students. Later, when Duke University was founded, the committee, as it is known today, was organized. In 1931 the Social Standards Committee became a subsidiary of the Woman's Student Government Association.

The Social Standards Committee maintains the desired social standards for the Woman's College, and promotes a varied and interesting social life. The committee sponsors the Coed Ball each semester, and sends a Social Handbook to the Freshmen during the summer. The Duke Calendar was published for the students at Christmas time.

Members are chosen by the chairman of the Committee, and by the W.S.G.A. Council. There are twenty-five upperclassmen members. The officers were: Laura Schwarz, Chairman; Marion Van Trine, Vice-Chairman; Jamie Branch, secretary; and P. J. Wiley, treasurer.

STUDENT FORUM

Fran Ellis, Chairman

In 1933 the Student Forum was organized at Duke University. Objectives for the club are to fulfill a campus need to advance culturally and intellectually by bringing outstanding speakers to the college community. The students of the Woman's College support the organization by contributing annually a certain sum of money, since the Forum charges no one for admission to the lectures.

The members are senior women who have shown a definite interest in campus affairs and activities, and who have proven themselves intelligent members of the college community.

One of the most important speakers for the year was Walter Duranty, world renowned authority on Russia.

The officers of the Student Forum were: chairman, Fran Ellis; legal adviser, Toni McElroy; secretary, Ann Edmunds; publicity director, Bette Baxter; social chairman, Pat Weiland; and adviser, Miss Genevieve DeArmond.

The purpose of the Pegram Chemistry Club as stated in its constitution, is the following: to bring together at regular intervals those persons especially interested in chemistry; to promote a friendly social relation between the faculty, graduate students, and undergraduates; and to promote further interest of the members in the science of chemistry and related fields.

Named after one of the leaders in the history of Duke University, the Pegram Chemistry Club seeks to include in its membership all those students who have manifested an interest in chemistry and who desire to become members. The only academic requirement which has to be fulfilled is that members must have taken or be taking analytical chemistry. Those who are majoring in the department of chemistry make up the largest group in the club.

During the war the club was inactive, but in January 1946, professors in the Chemistry Department at Duke announced to their classes that the organization was to be reinstated in its former function and asked interested students to attend the first postwar meeting, which was held that week. Since that time the club has held meetings twice a month and has had socials at intervals throughout the year. At the club meetings, members of the Chemistry Department, of some other science department, of the hospital staff, and of other groups have been speakers. These meetings are held in the chemistry clubroom on the third floor of the Chemistry Building on West Campus.

The officers for the Pegram Chemistry Club for the year 1946-1947 were the following students: president, Sally Dickerson; vice president, Mary Jo Taylor; secretary, Rosalie Long; treasurer, Louise Gurney; program chairman, Walter Burch; social chairmen, Dayne McGiehan and Grady Roberts.

In 1937, a group of pre-medical students organized the Duke University Pre-Medical Society. This club was founded to establish a better relationship between the pre-medical students and the faculties of both the undergraduate and medical schools. Its aims are to impress upon the pre-medical students the high ideals and standards of the medical profession.

Successful and interesting symposia have been held. These include lectures, tours through the hospital and medical school, and round-table discussions on topics of interest.

The purpose of these symposia is to acquaint the pre-medical student with the value of his undergraduate work as a basis for medical training. During the year the club was addressed by men well known in the medical field.

Members are elected on the basis of their interest in their chosen field, personality, scholastic average, and other recommendations. Though many in the group will not be able or interested enough to continue through medical school, and though they may not specifically use the information they gain through the group discussions, tours, and lectures, it will always be valuable to them.

Officers for the society this year were: Ray Hooker, president; Evelyn Schmidt, vice president; Charlotte Thompson, corresponding secretary; and David Drake, treasurer. Members included Charles Bugg, David Drake, Ray Hooker, Tom Hudgons, Rosalie Long, Glenn Mathison, Merlyn McClure, Nora Recio, Evelyn Schmidt, Charlotte Thompson, Wendell Bayless, R. V. THESE PEOPLE NOTE WHICH OF THE NOTES ARE THE MOST NOTEWORTHY

Established in 1933 through the enthusiastic efforts of Mrs. J. Foster Barnes and Miss Evelyn Barnes, the Music Study Club has won a prominent place among the college extra-curricular activities. The organization has a two-fold purpose—recognition of the ambitions and abilities of Duke women in the field of music by providing a chance for their expression, and at the same time giving those who have a sincere interest opportunity for appreciative listening.

The Music Study Club consists of fifty girls chosen on the basis of their common interest in music. All are not performing artists; anyone with an honest desire for better understanding of music, a preliminary to greater appreciation, is welcomed.

The Music Study Club has plunged wholeheartedly into numerous activities. Each year it has successfully sponsored one of the celebrity concerts, as well as presenting student recitals. Through the efforts of Gerry Lewis, former member of the Music Study Club and a daughter of the treasurer of the Metropolitan Opera Company, a fund of nine hundred dollars gratis was donated to the organization by Nino Martini, whom the club had presented in 1937. Since that time the money has been used to back one professional concert a year.

In December the customary Christmas party for members and their dates was given; and in the spring the brilliant duo-pianists, Luboshutz and Nemenoff, appeared in a concert sponsored by the club. The final event of the year was a tea at which guests were entertained by the accomplished members of the club.

Able led through another successful year by Bluma Kafka, president; Connie Merrell, vice president; Ann Larkin, corresponding secretary; Ursula Aiken, recording secretary; and Anne Craig, treasurer, the Music Study Club is proud of its achievements and hopes to continue stimulating interest and enriching the musical life of the college.

THESE SINGERS WOULD BRING THE SWALLOW'S BACK TO A CAPELLA.

The Madrigal Chorus was organized in October 1944, by Dr. Robert Hull. Since that time most of the group's public appearances have been given off campus before numerous civic and musical organizations in Durham, Raleigh, Chapel Hill, and Hillsboro. Other concerts were offered at Sunday night sings, before the Music Study Club, and to the general public on campus. One time the Madrigal Chorus supplied the musical setting for a Modern Dance Club program.

Dr. Hull has made it an objective of his group to perform not only madrigals, which are usually romantic lyrics, but also other seldom sung choral compositions suitable for performance by a small group.

Madrigal music is sung without accompaniment, and members are carefully chosen each fall according to vocal ability. The music performed during the three years of the chorus' existence has been varied, ranging from some of the earliest madrigals to a modern composition by Dr. Hull himself. The festivities of the Christmas season at Duke, as everywhere, are chiefly musical, but Duke has been particularly fortunate since the founding of the Madrigal Chorus to have the opportunity of hearing many little known, though beautiful, carols.

Philip Wooley was president of the society this year, while Shirley Crompton filled both the secretary's and treasurer's posts. Members of the Madrigal Singers during 1946-47 were: sopranos, Emily Boyd, Shirley Crompton, Margaret Jones, Nancy MacMurtrie, Ann Simpson, Joanna Wehn, Mary Jo Wise; altos, Jean Barnhart, Dorothy Fakema, Louise Field, Carolyn Koontz, Nancy Linkens, Evelyn Vandiver; tenors, Thomas Howerton, Dwight Irwin, Grimes Slaughter, Joe Wells; basses, Dr. Waldo Beach, Wayne Collin, Lindall Davison, James Smith, Philip Wooley.

THEY'VE BEEN MANY PLACES AND SUNG THINGS; TRAVELIN' GENTLEMEN

With the return of many former members, the Duke University Men's Glee Club had every promise of being the best Glee Club in the history of the school. J. Foster Barnes, head of Duke's Music School, founded the Men's Glee Club, and has trained Duke voices for nearly twenty years.

Highlighting the year was the Spring trip which carried the Club from North Carolina up the East coast to Washington, Pittsburgh, and New York. The trip to New York marked the eleventh successive year that the Men's Glee Club has sung over a national network. Other week-end trips to Wilmington, Albemarle, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Fayetteville, and Charlotte were taken.

The officers were: president, George Clark; vice president, Clark Nelson; business manager, Bob McCuiston; secretary-treasurer, Wally Osborne; librarian, David Black.

The Women's Glee Club, founded in 1925 by Mrs. J. Foster Barnes, as a training ground for the Chapel Choir, this year gave singing experience to 186 girls, some 30 more than last year. Seventy-five of the group were invited to join the Chapel Choir, while the whole Club had several opportunities to sing with the Choir, and to sing alone in the Chapel on Sunday morning.

A new step forward in this range of activities came this fall, when the Glee Club was asked to provide talent for radio broadcasts. The members of the Triple Trio (Glee Club girls) were also invited to schedule a regular weekly, or bi-weekly, program over the air.

Jean Rockey served as president this year, and Lois Neifert as vice president and business manager. Barbara Seifert was secretary; Margaret Carter, treasurer; Alice Wiseman, assistant secretary; Virginia Kauble, social chairman; Mary Stewart, Choir secretary; and Mary Evans, Choir social chairman. The Glee Club pianist was Ursula Aiken.

FROM BEETHOVEN TO BORODINE TO BRAHMS AND "BACH" AGAIN

One of the newer organizations in which Duke students are contributing time and interest is the Duke Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Robert Hull. The orchestra was organized in 1943 when Dr. Hull came to Duke; it is now a full-fledged college organization with recognition keys, officers, and a system of compulsory attendance.

The concert given in March this year by the orchestra was one of the highlights of the musical season at Duke. Dr. Hull's new symphony, "Tobacco Town," was presented. A special feature of this concert was the "Romantic Symphony" by Dr. Howard Hanson of the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y., who was the guest conductor for the performance. The music for the March concert was taken from the compositions of American musicians.

In May another concert was given at which Tchaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite" was presented. The music of Gluck and other European composers was played by the orchestra, and a special trophy award, the first of its kind, was presented to a member of the orchestra in recognition of his service and improvement.

The orchestra's sixty members also participate in the socials, cabin parties, and picnics sponsored by the group. These and the other activities of the orchestra are organized by a council of nine members headed by William Carl Murphy, president; Nan Hedden, secretary; John Christian, treasurer; and their conductor, Dr. Robert Hull.

AND THEN MR. BONE DIRECTS THE
BRASS THAT IS MADE FOR CLASS

The Duke University Bands fulfill a two-fold function in the musical life of Duke University. During the Fall, the Marching Band presented seven separate programs of appropriate marching maneuvers and formations. Each team that played on the Duke gridiron was saluted by the Marching Band. The Band traveled with the football team to Raleigh, Chapel Hill, and New York. Highlighting the activities of the Marching Band was the demonstration at the New York Polo Grounds. This drew widespread acclaim from the Duke alumni and students, as well as from the radio announcer and sports commentator, Grantland Rice, both of whom referred to the Band's performance as one of the best seen at the Polo Grounds.

After the football season, the Concert Band was organized for the purpose of performing representative works from the Band's repertoire. While there was a good deal of carry over from the Marching Band into the Concert Band, only the most skilled musicians were selected for the concert organization.

Both men and women students make up the 75 piece Concert Band. This organization presented its annual Winter Concert in Page Auditorium, made several radio broadcasts, and appeared in three outdoor lawn concerts. The year's activities of the Concert Band were terminated by the Commencement exercises. The combined activities of the Marching and Concert Bands made up one of the most successful years in the history of the Duke Bands.

COULD THEY TRIPPLE OVER THE LIGHT AND IT BE SO EASY

The Modern Dance Club was founded at Duke University in 1936. Organized by Modena Lewis and students of the Woman's College interested in modern dancing, this club has aided in the promotion of aesthetics on the campus. The aims of this group are to promote interest in the dance as an art, to stimulate creativeness on the part of the members, and to offer an opportunity for expression in dance movement.

In the spring the annual modern dance recital was presented in coöperation with the speech department, the music department, and the art department. The dances for this program are always original creations of the club, and the costumes are designed by students of the art department.

The club helped to bring Charles Weidman and his dance group to the campus for a concert last year. While here, Mr. Weidman held a master class, at which students from nearby colleges were guests.

Some of the group attended the dance section of the Arts Forum given last year at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

The officers were: Marilyn Gibson, president; Joyce Dawson, vice president; Barbara Kerr, secretary; Bootsy Thorne, treasurer; and Marilyn Stivers, publicity chairman. Members of the Modern Dance Club included Barbara Lacombe, Clare Flowers, Mary Brinkman, Jo Rae, Jane Caldwell, Marjorie Coldwell, Patsy Foutz, Virginia Gunn, B. J. Troxell, Eleanor Allen, Nancy Rousseau, Elizabeth Hoff, Thelma Klussman, Lois Johnson, Patsy Taylor, Betsy John Hurley, Barbara Kerr, Joyce Dawson, Marilyn Stivers, Bootsy Thorne, Frances Elder, Mary Wimberly, and Marilyn Gibson.

HERE WE HAVE THE GALS WHO
HANG AROUND THE "POOL" ROOM

The Nereidian Club was established at Duke in 1938, by a group of students and a faculty adviser. The Nereidian is a local organization and has no national affiliation. The Nereidian strives to recognize ability and to promote efficiency in swimming and diving among the women of Duke University.

Tryouts for membership are held in the fall and in the spring, on a competitive basis in swimming and diving. Each new member must have completed her Senior Life Saving Test before she is pledged. There is a pledge ceremony for the new members called, "Fish Day." The pledges, "sans" make-up, wear large paper fishes around their necks and carry a glass of water and a fishing pole.

Highlighting each year is a large water pageant. This year the pageant was presented

March 13, 14, and 15 to the students, the faculty, and the town people. The theme was winter scenery. Snow men, snow covered trees, and other winter scenes decorated the gymnasium. The story was an original fairy tale written by the members of the Nereidian Club. There was also a National Telegraphic Swimming Meet in connection with the Speed Club. A scholarship was awarded to one member to an Aquatic school of her choosing.

The membership of the Nereidian Club is limited due to the crowded facilities. This year there were twenty eight initiates and sixteen pledges. Officers for the Nereidian Club this year were: president, Susanne Thompson; vice president, Jean Marie Strange; secretary, Julia Toms; treasurer, June Glenn; faculty adviser, Miss Weeks.

The Woman's Athletic Association Board was established by the Physical Education Department to handle the problems of sports in the student's life. The Board, as one of the most active organizations on the campus, strives to associate the Woman's College with a well planned and well rounded program of recreational sports.

The W.A.A. Board is composed of an integrated system of clubs. This governing body consists of nineteen girls who were for the year 1946-47: Jean Erwin, president; Pat Weiland, vice president; Jo Rae, secretary; Ann Templeton, treasurer; Monkey Walters, Student Government Association representative; Dorothy Meredith, Publicity chairman; Betsy Greene, chairman of the Point System; Patricia Primrose, head of Minor Sports; Fay Reifsnyder, head of Hockey; Jean Noble, head of Basketball; Shirley Zittrouer, head of Badminton; Merewyn Stallings, head of Bowling; Betty Owen, head of Softball; Marge Frey, head of Fencing; Sue Amsbury, head of Tennis; Donna Todd, head of Golf; D'Arlene Brink, president of the Speed Club; Sue Thompson, president of Nereidian; Marilyn Gibson, president of the Modern Dance Club; Barbara Tinsley, president of Pegasus; and Miss Janice Van Tuyle, faculty adviser.

An open house was held for the Freshmen during Freshman Week to acquaint them with the various clubs within the W.A.A. The Association also sponsored an outdoor picnic. During Homecoming Weekend the Board sponsored an open house in the gym, highlighted by swimming, dancing, and other indoor sports. Several other successful open houses were held during the year.

W.A.A. members sponsored a Play Day in the Spring for the entire East Campus. Rewards were given to those who were victors in the tournaments in individual sports, and letters were given to the girls with a sufficient number of points. The interscholastic competition in swimming, basketball, and hockey was successful this year, and interest was high.

Bench and Bar, an organization begun in 1938 as an outlet for the interest and enthusiasm of the pre-legal students in their future profession, still makes interest in the law the only prerequisite for membership. The aims of the association are: to serve as a coöperative center of intelligent legal thought; to stimulate in pre-legal students interest in subjects other than law, so that a general educational background may be correlated with the more specific pre-legal training; to establish a closer relationship between the pre-legal student and the members of the faculties of the undergraduate and law schools.

Determination of the individual's qualifications for the study and practice of the law and the relative merits of various law schools, are ever present topics of interest at meetings, as are legal problems of particular moment to individual members.

Under the guidance of President, William Howe; Vice President, Jean Bramlett; Secretary, Winn Kern; and Treasurer, Paul Huffman, the society has been able, during the past year, to procure many interesting speakers. Mocks trials were held, and the annual spring Banquet was given for members of the society. These were: John Alger, George Allsop, Thomas Bailey, Jack Bergstrom, J. T. Billings, Sue Bohn, Jean Bramlett, Bachman Brown, Charles Buchanon, Robert Carr, Margaret Cauthers, Ben Christopher, John Coleman, Carlton Fleming, William Fleming, Jefferson Frederick, Leonard Hall, William Howe, Paul Huffman, Winn Kern, Elaine Kupp, Sandy Jones, James Lacey, Norma Little, Mary Ellen McCarthy, Muriel McDermott, William McLean, Robert Musser, Alfred Oppenheim, Bob Parrish, W. The Engineer's Club was established in March 1945, by Jim Kelly, John Imhoff, and Hoyle Wilson. Previous to that time the engineers had occupied Southgate Hall on East campus, and operated under their own government, the Engineers Student Government Association. In 1945 they moved from Southgate to West Campus, and their Student Government was merged with the S. G. A. on West campus to form the M. S. G. A. The engineers felt the need of forming a separate organization, though, in which the engineers, acting as a group, could further their activities on campus and stimulate an interest in engineering. Thus the Engineer's Club was formed. Jim Kelly served as co-president of the M.S.G.A. and president of the newly formed Engineer's Club.

This year, under the leadership of president Dominic N. Biancavilla; vice president, W. J. Palmer; secretary James T. Murff; and treasurer H. Jackson, the Engineers' Club is trying

The student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers was established at Duke in 1934. Professor Ralph S. Wilbur, with the assistance of a group of interested students, started the club with the idea of forming a closer relationship among those in this work. In 1935 the club became a permanent member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

The objectives of the student chapters are: (1) to add to the students' acquaintance with the practical side, as well as the theoretical side, of the field of Mechanical Engineering; (2) to furnish the student with the journal of the society, and to keep him informed of the latest engineering progress, by making libraries of the student branches depositories of the society; (3) to develop the student's initiative and ability to speak in public, and to familiarize him with parliamentary procedure and organization of learned societies, and (4) to enable the student to establish fraternal to carry out its objectives of fostering a close association of the engineering students of the campus, and to add to their interest in engineering affairs by sponsoring lectures, movies, and displays of interest at the meetings. This interest is further stimulated by the publication of the Duke Engineer, the engineer's official magazine, put out at various intervals during the year to publish recent engineering developments and other news of interest to engineers.

All engineering students are eligible for membership, and at present there are 410 upperclassmen listed with an undetermined number of freshmen designated as engineers.

Highlighting the social season are the two Engineer's Club Dances, one each semester. The fall Engineer's Ball sponsored Sammy Fletcher and his Duke Ambassadors, and attendance was much greater than in previous years, because of the increased enrollment in the School of Engineering.

contact with his fellow classmates in engineering, and to meet men engaged in the active practice of Mechanical Engineering.

On the Duke campus the society sponsors inspection trips to different factories and plants. During the year, meetings are held at which industrial movies are shown and speakers are provided to talk on appropriate subjects. Various social activities are also enjoyed throughout the year. This includes a formal ball, which marks one of the social highlights on the campus. In the spring of last year twenty-five members attended the district meeting in Chattanooga, Tennessee, and brought back many new ideas and plans.

Heading the club this year were the following students: Clifford Sayre, Jr., president; E. Wilson Griffin, vice president; James Reynolds, secretary; Edward M. Linker, treasurer. Mr. F. J. Reed is the chapter adviser. The membership of the Duke chapter numbers approximately seventy-five men.

The Duke Student Branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers was established in 1927 by Walter J. Secley, Head of the Electrical Engineering Department at Duke. It has been under his able leadership and that of Professor Otto Meier, Jr., since its beginning. These two men have served as counselors of the branch until recently when Professor Keith B. MacKeehan took charge of the group.

This year, headed by its new officers, Eugene A. Madlon, chairman; Richard H. Miller, vice chairman; Harold M. Jackson II, secretary; and Herbert W. Penske, treasurer, these electrical engineers are trying to keep themselves informed on the latest developments in the field of engineering.

The organization aims at developing the latent abilities of the students, primarily by affording opportunities for them to carry on activities quite similar in nature to those which are carried on by the Institute members, such as the holding of meetings, the presentation and discussion of papers, reports, and participation in inspection trips to places of engineering interest. The organization also serves to acquaint the student engineers with both the practical and theoretical phases of engineering. The meetings are held twice each month. A. I. E. E. is not an honorary organization, and this year it lists its membership at 118.

Once every school year the electrical engineers give a "lab" party in Asbury Building. The laboratories are suitably decorated with electrical oddities to provide the guests with amusement. Other entertainment includes dancing, novel "lab" games, and both quartet and community singing. This party is the main social function sponsored by the club as a group.

The Duke University Chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers was established locally in 1932 under the leadership of the Civil Engineering Department. Since that time, A. S. C. E. has served as the medium through which its members and the engineering faculty become better acquainted with situations of mutual interest. It aims to keep its student members informed on the modern trends in Civil Engineering.

During the past year, this Chapter was awarded a certificate of commendation by the National Headquarters for its work under the faculty direction of Professor H. C. Bird and President Lee M. Ragsdale. Recommendations for such an award are made by the National Committee on Student Chapters, following a study of the official activities of all student chapters in the nation. The Duke University Chapter was one of twelve chapters cited in 1946. The commendation reads as follows: "The Board of Direction of the American Society of Civil Engineers officially commends the Duke University Student Chapter of the A. S. C. E. for excellence in the effective and meritorious conduct of its affairs. The ability and professional diligence of your chapter officers, members, and faculty adviser, responsible for your success, have been commended by the Society's Committee on Student Chapters and the Board of Direction has authorized the Certificate of Commendation to be issued."

The past President, Lee M. Ragsdale, was also awarded second prize for an article submitted to the A. F. Davis Undergraduate Welding Contest last spring. The article entitled "Welded Homes for Millions" was published in the May 1946, edition of the Duke Engineer.

The society, which draws its members from upperclass Civil Engineering students, was led this year by Harold L. Becker, president; Addison T. McCarrick, vice president; and James T. Murfl, secretary-treasurer.

REPORT ON THE PLAYERS' SEASON HOW THE YEAR WAS SHOWING

Fifteen years ago Professor A. T. West organized the Duke Players to help satisfy the growing interest among the students in doing creative dramatic work. His other purpose in founding this organization was to provide a new kind of entertainment for the Duke campus.

With the return to peace-time operation, Duke Players, as other campus organizations, passed through a year of alterations and augmentations. A new system, initiated this year, of assessing each undergraduate woman $1.50, allowed the Duke Players to plan a more definite budget. Three tickets were issued in return, which constituted a saving of an additional $1.50 for girls who planned to attend all three regular Players productions, thus stimulating interest in the various performances throughout the year.

The first of these plays, Agatha Christie's mystery thriller, Ten Little Indians, was directed by Professor West. Pat Taylor, a newcomer to the Duke stage, headed the able cast. One of the best performances was turned in by Ed Menerth, a veteran of the footlights at Duke, who played the role of old General MacKensie. The audience was kept in suspense throughout the play by the fine acting of the cast.

Tired of butchery, the Players chose Thoman Job's Theresa as their next performance, an extra to the three regular shows. In reality, this production was put on by the Duke Players of Theta Alpha Phi, national honorary dramatic fraternity. Professor Barnhardt directed the cast, which was led by Bobby Seifert, of Double Doors fame.

Antigone, a take-off on the old Greek tragedy, was presented in March. The purpose of this drama was to show the ceaseless work of the French underground movement during the past war, and to show its participants' undying devotion to a cause of freedom from the Nazi tyranny over the French people, which had been imposed during the years since the defeat of France by the Germans.

Many former members of Duke Players returned from the services this year to give the organization a wide range of talent from which to choose, as well as a boost in enthusiasm.

The sets for the different plays were designed, constructed, and decorated by Duke students, while other committees managed the lighting, make-up, and costumes.

Certain interested students were given a chance to learn the art of superintendence the hard way, through the actual direction of one act plays. All-freshman casts of these shows gave an inkling of a bigger and better Duke Players of the future.

Officers for the year 1946-47 were: Margaret Throne, president; Robert McCreary, vice president; Betty Winter, secretary; Chuck White, business manager; Leah Spicer, co-ed business manager.

Tom Driver, as Philip Lombard, tries to make love to the leading lady, Patsy Taylor, who plays the role of Vera Claythorne.

Corpse Barrie Lewis of the cast of "Ten Little Indians" is pronounced dead by the doctor, James Foster. Other members of the cast, which include Patsy Taylor, Tom Driver, Ed Menerth, Etna Cove, Al Myerberg, and Terrance Holt, hover around, watching intently.

The year 1946-1947 was a big one for the Hoof and Horn Club at Duke. After its birth in 1936, as a club to produce original musical comedies, its period of dormancy during the early war years, its revival in 1942, and the difficulties encountered because of the Navy program at Duke—after all this, the Hoof and Horn Club emerged bigger and better than ever before, to give Duke's campus many varieties of musical and dramatic entertainment. The club was modeled after Harvard's famous Hasty Pudding Club, and after Princeton's Triangle Club, but Duke's organization was the first of its kind in the South.

The major production of the year was "What's New," written, acted, and produced by the all-student club. An important addition to the functions of the club was the sponsorship of the bi-weekly radio program, "Campus Time," which was broadcast for one half-hour on Friday afternoons over WDNC. Sammy Fletcher and his band, the Duke Ambassadors, were featured along with other specialties on these broadcasts.

Besides those who are talented in music, dramatics, and dancing, members who work on the business staff and on the production end of the performances fill valuable places in the organization.

Chuck White was the president and business manager of the club; Sis Messner served as corresponding secretary; and Lois James was the recording secretary. Two talented minds behind and on the scenes of both the musical production and the radio show were Al Robertson's and Judd Mathison's. Sue Bowmall was the assistant director of the radio show and production manager of the stage show.

COMPILED WITH A FEW DREAM NOTES.

The close bond of friendship that exists among the members of the Duke Ambassadors Orchestra is one of the intangible qualities which make them the success they have become. Ever since 1934 when Sonny Burke organized the Ambassadors, in 1937 when Dutch McMillan took the band to Europe, and in 1939 when the unforgettable Vince Courtney began singing with the band and composed their present theme song, "Dream Notes," the band has climbed from one pinnacle of fame to another.

Now that the sixteen former Ambassadors with four new members are again playing under Sammy Fletcher at Duke's dances after a long intermission which most of them spent overseas as pilots and ensigns, and in which some of them played in service bands, they are receiving acclaim from all over the country as a great college dance band. In the memorable summer of 1942 the band played at Palisades Park, N. J., in Boston on a circuit with Hal McIntyre and Claude Thornhill, and at Old Orchard Pier in a "battle of music" with Ray McKinley. Later the Ambassadors turned down the offer of four coast-to-coast broadcasts to come back to school.

Sammy Fletcher, drums, and Tommy Farr, trombone, are two of the band's stars who are recognized in the dance music profession; Sally Waddell and Clarence Smith are the talented vocalists.

This summer, as always, the band is planning ahead of time; there are nebulous dreams of Europe, Mexico, the beach, and South America. Whatever they decide, it will be only a stepping stone to a great future for one of the organizations of which Duke students are proud.

The goal of the students on Publications Row is to depict as accurately as possible the many and varied phases of student life here at Duke. With this in mind, a newspaper, humor magazine, literary magazine, the yearbook, an engineering publication, and the nurses' newspaper are published, and each of them find a special facet of college life to cover.

In this past year, there has been a conscious change in policy, in most cases brought about by the return of so many veterans to the campus. These men have come to expect the straight story in whatever they read. The editors and staffs have realized this fact, and through recognition of it, have added to the value of the publications at Duke. They have tried to give the student body what they wanted.

FOR THESE JURORS, THE POWER OF THE PRINTED WORD, CLASSED

The Publications Board, established in 1924, and reorganized by the Executive Committee of the University in 1935, has control over all of the student publications on campus. It consists of the following members: three members from the University staff appointed by the President of the University; six men from the Junior and Senior classes, elected by the students in Trinity College; two members from the alumni appointed by the President of the University; four women from the Junior and Senior classes, elected by the students in the Woman's College; and three editors and three managers of student publications, ex-officio members without any voting power. With the advice of the Board, the President of the University appoints an advisory committee of three members from the staff of the University each year for each publication.

Any student wishing to run for editor or business manager of any publication must be a senior, unless under very unusual circumstances the Board, upon the unanimous recommendation of the three staff members and the two alumni members, should decide to consider a junior for such position. No student can hold the position of editor or manager for more than one year.

A publication fee of $5.50 has been authorized, to be collected from each undergraduate, $2.50 payable at the beginning of the fall semester and $3.00 at the beginning of the spring semester. If the Board decides to make a basic change in the expenditure of money, this change must be approved by the Executive Committee of the University before becoming effective.

The Publications Board authorizes and arranges the division of profits among the editors, business managers, assistant business managers and editors of the various publications. It provides also for a sinking fund.

CHANTICLEER EDITORIAL STAFF

Libby Shanley, Editor

THE ONE OF THE FINEST PAPERS
PUBLISHED IN THE UNITED STATES

The job of the Chanticleer Editorial Staff is one which entails as much work as any of the other staffs on the Row. The editor, Libby Shanley, and her helpers, have a year-round job, which begins for Libby in the summer with work on the dummy, and continues until the book is in the hands of the students. The material which has to be organized and presented in the CHANTICLEER is of a far wider scope than that of any other publication, since not only the events and writing of the students are included, but also the students themselves.

This year, Duke's first postwar one, the Editorial Staff was manned chiefly by women students. During the war when the men were away, the women took over most of the jobs on "Pub Row," among them editing the CHANTICLEER. The men have not had time to work up into the more responsible positions on the Editorial Staff as yet. The editors for this year were the following: Libby Shanley, Editor-in-Chief; Margaret Carter, Assistant Editor; Pat Way, Co-ed Editor; Barbara Pearse, Associate Editor; Polly Walker, Copy Editor; Nora Cleaver, Engraving Editor. The section editors were: Betty Becker, Administration; Lois James, Classes; Ruth Northrup, Organizations; Katherine Terrell, Pan-Hellenic; and Helen Gordon, Features. The sports section was handled by Jim Hopkins, Bill Elias, and Johnny Walker. The photographers were: Charlie Carver, Bruce Wilson, Ben Cato, and John Morfit.

Co-ed Editor Pat Way, Associate Editor Barbara Pearse, and Assistant Editor Maggie Carter criticize the possibilities of engravings; while Nora Cleaver, Photographic Editor, directs Jo Fulcher and Clare Flowers in typing captions for organizations to insure correct spelling.

Taking care of all the business connected with the publishing of a volume like the CHANTICLEER is no simple task. Since there are so many firms represented in the CHANTICLEER's advertising section, there are many duties of correspondence, banking, and actual walking involved in working for the Business Staff.

John Coleman, as Business Manager, and Ray Tilley, Assistant Business Manager, were heads of the business end of the CHANTICLEER for 1947. Betty Jane Troxell, Co-ed Business Manager, represented the Woman's College in the managerial capacity.

One of the first and biggest jobs which the members of the Business Staff undertake during the year is that of having the class pictures taken. When this job is completed in the early fall, getting ads for the book occupies most of the attention of the Staff; this is the major function of most of the members of the Staff. Besides these two important duties, the Business Staff carries on the CHANTICLEER's business with the printer and engraver.

The last and probably most pleasant duty

which the Business Staff performs is that of giving out the new CHANTICLEERS to the student body in the spring. The work goes on, however, out of the sight of the students, in the typing and filing of the various letters and bills which make up a great part of the accessories of the office.

This year a party was given in the spring to celebrate a successful year of work and play.

Taye Taylor, Jean Dunn, and Doris Caveness take care of the details of the business office under Co-ed Business Manager B. J. Troxell's watchful eye. Bob Ward meanwhile adds up expenses. Jane Scarborough and Helen Neumeister keep business good and spirits high.

CHRONICLE EDITORIAL STAFF

WE JUST CAN'T AFFORD TO BE IRONICAL ABOUT THE CHRONICLE

Norris Hodgkins, Editor

Just as Duke's year revolved around the many problems arising from the change to peacetime ways, so the Duke Chronicle took as its theme for the year the reconversion. Not merely content with recording the news, Chronicle writers often took the lead in facing the problems which arose during the year.

Experienced talent was abundant this year, as Editor Norris Hodgkins found out in September, when faced with the happy dilemma of finding enough to do to three keep ex-editors, two ex-business managers, and three ex-sports editors busy.

Football was king as usual during the fall. Student activities, record enrollments, big-name dances, beauty queen selections, and many other campus activities were in the headlines weekly because of the persistence of a loyal and energetic editorial staff.

Throughout the year the Chronicle attempted in its editorials and columns to point the way toward a better Duke - to make the University not only the best in the South, but the best anywhere. To achieve this end Chronicle editorial writers urged a more comprehensive alumni program, liberalized academic requirements, and discreetly conducted a poll to determine the quality of instruction received.

Heading this year's hard-working staff was Editor Norris Hodgkins. Johnny Baldwin, an Editor back in '43, served ably in the position of Associate Editor. His technical knowledge and excellent editorials played a large part in making the paper a success. Helen Mercner, Clay Felker, Charlie Sydnor, and Mary Jane Simpson, supervised the reporters in grinding out the weekly supply of stories, features, heads, captions, cutlines, and all the many other details that go into making up a newspaper.

The sports staff, led by Sports Editor, "Swank Hank" Beaudouin, turned out the top page in recent years. The clever cartoons that graced the editorial page each week were ably drawn by Bill Stars, Art Editor.

CHRONICLE BUSINESS STAFF

IT IS BLACK AND WHITE BUT IN THE RED, IT CAN BE READ

The beginning of the school year found the Chronicle business staff well supplied with experienced personnel. Two former business managers had returned to the campus, Don Perry, who served in the position until his graduation in January, and Howard Terry, who was elected to assume the post for the rest of the year. Another who had returned from the service with a previous "Pub Row" record was Art Gilbert, who served as assistant business manager.

Well-deserved credit goes to the co-ed staff members, especially Nan Moesta, co-ed business manager who kept the books. Persevering Tacy Taylor, Pat Shaw, Ann Rankin, June Sumner, and Mary Ellen Rothrock went after advertisements downtown. Jack Quaritious, Bill Houck, Logan Bruce, and Bob Peak rounded out a hard-plugging downtown staff. The line-up was potent, and with Perry cracking the whip at first, then passing it to Terry, the results of their street-pounding were impressive. Delivery of the paper to our 3,500 readers was under the direction of Ford Wiggins and John Osborne. Their group of twenty faithful freshmen did the unglamorous job of taking the papers from room to room. As the curtain falls on another year, Perry, Terry, and Moesta take a final, satisfied look at the books—they're decidedly in the black.

Cliff Blackwell, Business Manager, Ginny Gunn, Editor

THE ROOM WITH FURNITURE OF FAME GIVES RENOWN TO MANY A NAME

The year 1946-1947 saw the Archive reinstated in its former prewar capacity as Duke's monthly literary magazine. In September of 1943 the Archive and the monthly humor magazine, Duke 'n' Duchess, had been combined for the duration as a literary-humor magazine. This year, under the competent editorship of Ginny Gunn, the Archive has returned largely to its literary status. The Editor's staff was manned by David Fick, Associate Editor; Peg Throne, Assistant Editor; Frank Trechsel, Art Editor; Joan Angevine, Poetry Editor; and Betsy John Hurley, Exchange Editor.

Besides the short stories written by students, there were several unusual features in the magazine this year. One of these was a long poem, "Coal," in the December issue; another was "Nagasaki," a prose piece by Joe DiMona. "Archie Speaks," the editorial article appearing in the front of each issue is one of the most popular regular features of the magazine. The "Sketches" Series, which have featured among others Dr. Rhine and Dr. N. I. White, were written by Bill Styron, whose contributions have been numerous and well-done.

Editor Gunn's stressing of lay-out this year reaped tangible results in the general attractiveness of the magazine. The Art Staff, headed by Frank Trechsel, was staffed by Larry Coe, Cynthia Barrell, Clarence Brown, and Pat Wimberly.

Two Archive stories were published in Best Stories magazine. They are Doris Harkey Meriwether's "Spill the Milk" and Joe DiMona's "Geisha Girl—Yes?" from one of last year's Archives.

The Business Staff was headed by Cliff Blackwell first semester and by Pat Dorsey second semester. Fran Hudson, Assistant Business Manager, and Dee Genter, Co-ed Business Manager, helped, as did the entire staff in handling the ads and ad-seekers.

As at its founding sixty years ago, the Archive is the outlet for publication of student creative writing today.

DiMona, Hurley, and Loomis go over final proof of their efforts, while Genter, Hudson, Fick, draw layouts for the next issue.

DukEngineer

Gene Madlon, Managing Editor, Art Wheeler, Editor

The official magazine of the College of Engineering of Duke University is the DukEngineer. It is published quarterly by the engineering students, and provides an outlet for their literary talents. The magazine prints timely articles on recent developments in the fields of civil, mechanical, and electrical engineering, and keeps the entire student body at Duke up-to-date on the work and activities of the Engineering College. It helps promote a growing interest in the various fields of engineering, both among engineers and students in other schools of education.

The DukEngineer reports on the work of the honorary organizations associated with the school—such groups as the A.S.C.E., A.S.M.E., and A.I.E.E. It publishes articles concerning the many opportunities open to engineers in the post-war world. Articles on subjects of world importance such as robot and jet-propelled airplanes, the results of petroleum refinement now and in the future, and methods of protection against lightning, have appeared in the DukEngineer this year. Accompanying these enlightening stories have been many interesting photographs. The lighter side of the life of an engineer is also written up in the magazine.

Another important function of the publication is that it provides a medium for tying the alumni together and maintaining contacts between the alumni and the College.

The DukEngineer hopes to move its office from Publications Row to the new engineering building which is being constructed on west campus.

The staff of the DukEngineer for the past year consisted of the following: Editor-in-Chief, Art Wheeler; Managing Editor, Gene Madlon; Business Manager, Ernie Freidli; Associate Editor, Ronald Kirkpatrick; Advertising Manager, Don Campbell; Circulation Manager, Len Thompson; and the assistants. Bob Saunders handled the photography. Advisers were Prof. E. K. Kraybill and Prof. C. R. Vail.

THE END ALL OF THE NEWS THAT FITS THE PRINT IS GOOD NEWS

Flora Kurz, Editor; and Lee Hodges, Business Manager.

The Special Chart, a bi-monthly mimeographed publication of the student nurses of the Duke School of Nursing, was first "dreamed-up" several years ago by some students who were missing the smell of printer's ink. The paper provides the means for those who wish to maintain their interest in journalism during their three-year training period.

Since it came into being it has not only brought the student body, as a whole, closer together by printing many articles of interest both of school and social life, but also has brought satisfaction and valuable experience in the mechanics of publications to those girls interested in journalism.

The staff is picked each year by the retiring staff, though anyone who has an interest in journalism may write for the paper at any time. The Special Chart's clever covers which so well represent the life of a student nurse, and the contents, timely news articles and items of general interest, in each publication are a constant source of enjoyment to its readers.

The issues serve as a record of events in the lives and times of Duke's nurses, both in the hospital and in their extra-curricular activities. Not only does it keep the student body informed on the activities of the Nursing School, but it brings the Student Nurses, as a whole, closer together.

This year, the fourth one in Special Chart's history, the success of the paper may be attributed to the work of the Editor-in-Chief, Flora Kurz; Associate Editor, B. J. Duncan; Business Manager, Mary Lee Hodges; and their staffs.

Although the Special Chart is one of Duke's newest publications, the part it plays in the activities of the Nursing School is a unique one. It is the official Nursing School paper, and is the only publication managed exclusively by nursing students. The Special Chart can look forward to years of growth and expansion in which it will continue to be the voice of the students of the School of Nursing.

The nurses' new mimeographed publication is studied and read carefully by the editorial staff, to prevent any possible mistakes.

DUKE 'N' DUCHESS

FOUNDED BY THE DUKE STUDENTS
FOR THE PURPOSE OF PROVIDING A HUMOROUS OUTLET FOR STUDENT WRITING

Duke's youngest member of her family of publications, of which she is justly proud, is the Duke 'n' Duchess, monthly humor magazine, which was reorganized in 1946. The earliest beginnings of the present D 'n' D were in the form of a newspaper mimeographed by the freshmen of Duke in 1934. For two years after that it was a mimeographed magazine, the attempt to answer the Duke students' growing demand for a humor publication. From then on, however, the D 'n' D grew rapidly until it became a full-fledged magazine, officially recognized in 1938. Since that time it has been under the surveillance of the Publications Board along with the rest of Duke's publications, and has taken its rightful place on "Pub Row" as the magazine outlet for student humorous writing as well as other phases of campus life. Unlike the Archive, the D 'n' D is not bound to strictly literary material, but publishes anecdotes, jokes, cartoons, and sketches of the lighter side of college life, as well as the literary contributions it receives.

Bud Middlesworth, Business Manager; Chan Hadlock, Editor

During the war years the Duke 'n' Duchess was combined with the Archive, but early in 1946, Chan Hadlock, instrumental in petitioning that the magazine be reinstated in its old capacity, as Duke's humor publication, was named its first postwar Editor by the Publications Board.

In his year as Editor, Chan Hadlock has put the D 'n' D off to another good start. He has handled the job of Editor, photographer, feature writer, and cartoon gatherer with unusual efficiency. The Duke 'n' Duchess Business Staff is headed by Buddy Middlesworth, who manages the advertising, circulation, and promotion for the magazine.

Eight issues of the Duke 'n' Duchess are published each year: one a month except for February. The excellence of the October issue is an example of the type of material which the Duke 'n' Duchess includes: the clever cover, the editorial paragraphs, and the feature story, of the campus police.

Bud Middlesworth, Business Manager, instructs Chick and Bishop on securing ads. Parker and Orr discuss many new projects.

NAVY ROTC

The new peacetime Naval ROTC program was initiated this year at Duke following de-commissioning of the wartime training units. As a regular department in the University, the Naval Science division offers courses which give to students a broad education in naval ordnance, communications, seamanship, and engineering.

Composed of 185 men, the unit included both "regular" and "contract" students. The regular men attended college with tuition, fifty dollars a month and uniforms paid by the Navy in return for two years service following graduation. Contract trainees received commuted rations and uniforms with either active or reserve commissions upon graduation. In January, 19 men graduated and received commissions. Of these, two went to active service. In June over 100 trainees received commissions and six chose service with the fleet. The small remaining unit will be supplemented in September by many newly enrolled students.

Captain A. M. Kowalzyk, Jr., the Professor of Naval Science, remains at Duke from the wartime unit and directs all Naval instruction and activity. A graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy with a brilliant war record, Captain Kowalzyk took over the Duke unit in November 1945.

Commander Coxe, the "Exec," is also a graduate of the Naval Academy. During the war he commanded the destroyer U. S. S. Van Valkenburg in the Pacific. Other Officers on the staff include Lt. Comdr. Robert J. Connell, USN; Lt. Comdr. Samuel F. Curling, USNR; Major George B. Kantner, USMC; and Ensign Preston Peake, USN.

The student battalion organization includes two companies with three platoons in each. James Proctor was the first term Battalion Commander with a staff including Robert Buzzard, Jim Heald, John Gabellini, and "Bud" Brown. Company commanders were "Scoot" Llewellyn and Granville Semmes.

Center of Naval activity is the Armory located in the New Gym. It is equipped with classrooms, an indoor rifle range, sonar plotting rooms and much ordnance equipment used in the Navy.

Extra-curricular activities in the unit included rifle and pistol matches and intramural sports. The Rifle and Pistol teams coached by Major Kantner and Sgt. McLeod, did outstanding service for the school. Duke won a large majority of its matches with most of the other fifty-two NROTC colleges. In intramurals, the NROTC touch football squad finished among the leaders in division three, while the basketball team won the sixth division championship.

As in the past the Commodore Club, the NROTC social organization, crowned its queens during the formal "Ball" held near the end of each semester. Complete with uniforms, saber arches and nautical decorations, the dances were among the top social events of the Duke year.

Pan-Hellenic

Brotherhood and friendship formed the basis of our college life, finding tangible expression in the national fraternities and sororities represented on the campus

DEEP satisfaction is derived from pan-hellenic organization in any college. They are a source of some of the most cherished memories of undergraduate days as well as old and new friendships after graduation. The good fellowship of fraternity and sorority life helps to create a genial disposition. Through closer relations with fellow members, there is built a more tolerant attitude and an awareness of others' potentialities. Greek fraternities often increase faculty-student relationships, for many of our administrators are members. Students and faculty members are drawn into closer contacts. Greek life means loyalty and this, in part, applies to the attitude of the members toward the university which they attend. These organizations often undertake projects for the betterment of the college. Within each group, there is a common incentive for advancement. They encourage better grades, participation in activities, and they are a large part in the activation of the social calendar.

The fraternity aims to make good citizens of its members.

Fraternities, strengthened by the return of veterans, had a full year. They expanded to large proportions. They obtained their sections back again, and redecorated the section rooms. They had Open Houses and parties in the rooms after football games. They entered into the Homecoming Decorations Contest as well as the Wheelbarrow Race with zest and spirit. These and many other things were accomplished by fraternities during the year.

Sororities continue to strengthen friendships, help girls to feel a part of the school, and combine with other sororities to create a feeling of companionship and equality.

Between members of one fraternity there is a strong bond. Likewise, between the Greeks in the Pan-Hellenic Council there is a similar bond. This universality could be applied to larger spheres in a way that conflicts between nations would be replaced by brotherly love.

THE ORGANIZATION WHICH GREATLY ENRICHES AND BROADENS EDUCATION

The Men's Pan-Hellenic Council of the past year had four major problems to contend with: return of the fraternities to a prewar basis of operation; the establishment of an effective, uncomplicated rushing-initiation system; the presentation of a "big-name dance" open to all the students; and the revision of an out-moded wartime constitution.

A reformed rushing program was executed in the fall and the errors were remedied in the spring. A "C" average was required before a man could be pledged. As soon as the first rushing period had been ended, the Social Committee prepared for a Winter Dance Series featuring Hal McIntyre and his orchestra. The dance was open to both fraternity men and independents, and was generally described as one of the best affairs ever to take place at Duke.

After spring rushing had been completed, the council looked back on a year of earnest work with satisfaction.

Clarence Brown, President

Adah Torbett, President

Guided through the year by President, Ada Torbett; Secretary, Jane Bruce; Vice President, Jane McDonald; and Treasurer, Mary Kornfeld, the Women's Pan-Hel, finished two terms filled with many achievements.

The new rushing plan was carried out successfully last fall. The rushing period was cut from six weeks to four weeks, in order to prevent the prolonged period of abnormal relations between sorority girls and freshmen.

The council has encouraged scholarship by the yearly presentation of a silver cup to the chapter with the highest average, and as a reward for merit, has presented a scholarship to the rising senior with the highest average for the sophomore year and the first semester of the junior year.

Social plans for the year included a Pan-Hel formal dance in the spring with a big name band, and Joe College Day, also in the spring in conjunction with the Men's Pan Hellenic council. A Pan-Hel sing was given in March.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

SEPTEMBER 1946 found President Bob McCuiston welcoming back to House C such well-known residents as Don Perry, past and present Business Manager of the Chronicle, Harry Troxell, Leo Long, Charlie Davis, and Buddy Luper, outstanding players on the prewar football teams, who continued their fine records to become even more entrenched in the annals of football at Duke. Also returning were Wright Dixon, present chairman of the Union Party, and Bill Raup, who is now secretary of Men's SGA.

Further representing ATO in university activities are Buddy Middlesworth, Business Manager of Duke 'n' Duchess, Chuck White, Business Manager of Hoof and Horn, Bob McCuiston, Business Manager of Men's Glee Club and social chairman of Men's Pan-Hel, Clark Nelson, vice president of Men's Glee Club, Wally Osborne, secretary of Anchor and Eagle Club as well as secretary and treasurer of the Glee Club, and John Gabellini, treasurer of the Senior Class. Well-known members of the Duke Ambassadors include Tommy Farr, Dick Moorhause, Dick Weidman, Neale Baugh, Bob Hutchins, and vocalist Clarence Smith.

In the athletic limelight are Charlie Davis, president of the Varsity Club, Fred Palladino, varsity football team, Bill Palmer and Johnny Ellsworth, track stars, Harry Sutton and Gil Gilbert, Lacrosse stars, Irv Nichols, swimming team, Hank Smith and Bakie Palmer on the baseball team, and Joe Fitzsimmons, a varsity wrestler.

The fall social calendar was highlighted by the annual Homecoming dance, which was especially gala due to so many alumni being present. Cabin parties and open houses dotted the calendar with several beer parties rounding it out. The annual Christmas party for underprivileged children again was a success, with John Gabellini jovially playing the role of Santa Claus.

Group singing, traditional with ATO, was symbolized by the triple quartet, which won campus acclaim at the "sings" and on the radio program "Campus Time."

Three-quarters of a century of Alpha Tau Omega was celebrated at the 75th anniversary banquet and dance this spring. With a large number of alumni attending, renowned speakers, and a well-planned anniversary program, this was the outstanding climax of the year for Alpha Tau Omega.

BETA THETA PI

THIS HAS BEEN AN EXTREMELY joyful year for Beta Theta Pi as it witnessed the reunion of many old brothers who had been away from Duke during the war years.

This year, as ever, Beta Theta Pi assumed an enviable role in campus affairs. Versatile Ed Koffenberger, 1945 All-Southern Conference basketball center, was again the mainstay of the Duke varsity basketball team of which he was co-captain. In other fields, Ed's activities include president of ODK, treasurer of the Pan-Hellenic Council, a member of the Varsity "D" Club, Delta Epsilon Sigma, Pi Tau Sigma, and Pi Mu Epsilon. Jack Lanahan was elected vice president of the senior class and again dangled his ODK key. Beta was represented in BOS by Jack Fieldson and Fenton Guinee, and in Phi Eta Sigma by Dick Bugg, Bill Griffith, and Fenton Guinee. In addition, Beta is justly proud of Brad Cecil who is a member of Pi Mu Epsilon, Bob Maschmeier in the Varsity "D" Club, Jack Highsmith, Ed Gilbert, John Herrick and Bob Lee who all worked diligently on F.A.C. Numerous are the Beta members in the various Engineering organizations such as A.S.C.E., A.I.E.E., and A.S.M.E.

In the field of sports Beta was adequately represented by having Bob Bowles, and Al Tieche, active in track, Ed Koffenberger, Brad Cecil, Dick Gochnauer and Alex Wilson in lacrosse, Mike Kusturiss and Jim O'Connor in wrestling, Bill Doig and Charlie Willett in golf, Bob Strickland, Bill Wettstein, Sandy Davison and Foster Ingalls in swimming. Managers of sports include Bob Maschmeier and Fenton Guinee of basketball; Bill Robinson, track; Sandy Davison and Bob Strickland, swimming.

Beta, continuing the policy inaugurated last year, invited leading professors to participate in open forum discussions in the chapter room on international and domestic affairs.

The fall social season opened with a joint cabin party with the Pi Beta Phi sorority. Outstanding among the many functions was a dinner-dance given for the pledges in December. Many enjoyable affairs were held in connection with the Betas at Carolina, as well as open houses after each home football game.

The spring season was just as much of a social success as the fall, with dances, open houses, and cabin parties providing much of the entertainment. Beta is especially proud of its fine group of pledges of the fall and spring.

DELTA SIGMA PHI

DELTA SIGMA PHI'S activities this year, under the aegis of President Bill Lamparter, have been directed mainly toward rebuilding the chapter to its pre-war position of eminence following two years of wartime-engendered inactivity.

Returning Delta Sigs in September were welcomed by the news that the first pledge of Alpha Epsilon Chapter, George V. Allen, had been appointed Ambassador to Iran by the United States Government, thus adding still another name to the long list of alumni prominent in not only North Carolina, but national affairs. Nor can it be said that the undergraduate members of the fraternity have been unworthy of the example set by the alumni. They have been active in many phases of undergraduate life, and Delta Sig claims active members in nearly every school of the University, as well as on the faculty.

This year Tom Bailey has been the outspoken defender of the rights of the smaller fraternities in the Pan-Hel Council, while Tim Warner and Paul Huffman, North Carolinians whom we expect to carry on the legal traditions of our alumni in the state, were active in the Bench and Bar. Tim, incidentally, is the fraternity's Phi Bete man. In sports, too, Delta Sig has been active, entering teams in every major intramural contest. George Craniotis has starred on the varsity soccer team.

And about social life in this brief picture? Led by George Huelser and Floyd Allred, the fraternity started off the season with a series of open houses in its newly-decorated chapter room, climaxing these functions with a highly successful Homecoming reception which was attended by alumni living as far away as Montclair and Pittsburgh. Our team was supported by the fraternity at home games as well as those away. Tom Bailey drove a carload to the Navy game, and Bill Lamparter drove up to the Army game. Just before Christmas the Delta Sigs of Duke, Wake Forest, and State had a Founders' Day banquet at the Saddle Club, which was an extremely successful affair. April saw the renaissance of an old Duke custom with the sponsoring by Delta Sigma Phi of their 27th annual formal ball, one of the most talked about dances of the year. Guests were present from all the nearby Delta Sig chapters.

All this and more, plus an excellent pledge class made up a memorable year for Delta Sigma Phi.

DELTA TAU DELTA

IT WAS A HAPPY DAY for Delta Tau Delta last September when once again we could move back "home" to House X. The war years had not submerged the Delts one bit, for at all times chapter strength was kept up to normal. With the return to our prewar location came complete redecoration and refurnishing of the chapter room. September also saw the return of many Delt veterans, which were eagerly welcomed and resulted in present large active membership.

Delta Kappa chapter is proud of the fact that it can maintain a high scholastic average, and at the same time, have many members participating in extra-curricular activities. Two of the brothers proudly wear the coveted Phi Beta Kappa key—Ralph Vining and Doc Faulkner. Representing Delta Tau Delta on the Freshman Advisory Council are: T. Windham, P. J. Thomas, Walt Scott, and Ed Gurley, all doing their usual worthy jobs. Don Berry was a member of the Student Senate, making himself well-known for his coöperation and efforts. Coming into the spotlight more and more is Clarence Warta and his fine dance band. Clarence and the band have been quite successful and have played many engagements on the campus and around the city of Durham.

The Delts have entered into all the intramural activities, and have had especially good teams in football, basketball, and softball. Though not on top, the Delts emerged from intramurals with an enviable number of points. Two of the brothers are especially outstanding in the field of athletics, and they are Joe Brand, who is a letterman and valuable player on the varsity basketball team, and Leon Griffith, who was a baseball star here at Duke, and now has signed to play professional baseball with the Philadelphia Athletics.

Social functions were held often during the year, and all were complete successes. These functions included many cabin parties, open houses before and after each home football game, and dances. The most outstanding of the open houses was that held on Homecoming weekend, when the entire chapter had the pleasure of greeting many alumni who had not been back since before the war. The climax of all the social functions was, however, the annual Delta Tau Delta Queen Dance, at which the Delts picked their queen for the year 1947. And thus ended another remarkable year for Delta Kappa of Delta Tau Delta.

KAPPA ALPHA

STRENGTHENED by the return of veterans from several different graduating classes, K A continued in its high position on West Campus. With both members and pledges participating in all campus and fraternity activities the Chapter became a well-rounded organization.

The K A's were particularly well represented in varsity athletics. Coach Wade's Big Blue included such outstanding performers as Ernie Knotts, Kelly Mote, Bill Milner (captain), Ed Austin, Al DeRogatis, Fletcher Wall, Fred Folger, and Roland Hodges. Promising members of the White Squad were John Shaffer, Dick Bradley, Bill Scupine, Bill Smith, and Jimmy Baynes. Leading Doc Chambers' cindermen were Loren Young and Bill Scupine, while Coach Bob Cox numbered Bob Chapman and Jimmy Baynes among his tennis standouts. Lacrosse season found Tom Gorsuch and Mack Johnston turning in fine performances, and Jerry Fryc was an important part of Coach Coombs' infield.

The intramural sports program was especially outstanding for K A's, as both of our football teams won their division championship.

The K A's were active in other directions too. In B O S are Bob Chapman, Bill Edwards, Will Jackson, and Zeno Edwards. F.A.C. members were Grady Stott, Bill Edwards, Jim Summers, Joe Kyle, Bob Eirich, Charles Smith, and Bill Mathis. Working hard with the YMCA were Loren Young, secretary, John Wells and Bob Eirich on the Senior Cabinet, and Will Jackson, secretary-treasurer; and Charles Smith, president; on the Sophomore Cabinet. Their president, Grady Stott, was vice president of the Varsity "D" Club and Tom Gorsuch was vice president of the Men's Pan-Hellenic Council.

The social program opened with a cabin party at Bailey's, and was followed by many more, all of them proving to be great successes. Open houses before and after each home football game provided a gathering and meeting place for members, alumni, their dates, and their families. The biggest event on the social calendar came in January, when Robert E. Lee's birthday was celebrated with a banquet and dance.

A new venture for K A was the Campus Sing in October. Carl Sapp as master of ceremonies, with soloist Burt Gillette, and the K A instrumental and vocal group, the "Nose-Pickers," provided faultless entertainment.

Rushing in October and February brought into the fold an outstanding group which entered right into the activities of the "Grand Old Gang."

KAPPA SIGMA

IT WAS A GRAND and glorious return to college for the members of Kappa Sigma fraternity in September. Not only was it a welcome back for many veterans, but we were again in our prewar section, House BB.

Forty of the forty-six members in the Duke chapter served in either the Army, Navy, or the Marine Corps, and our pledges numbered fourteen prior to rushing season. Eight men were on varsity football team, while many other members participated in intramural football. W. E. Barrett was in charge of all intramural activity and encountered little trouble in making both spirit and points run high. Both "A" and "B" teams won a good string of victories over independents as well as other fraternity teams. In basketball we also had two teams for intramural competition from which the best results were derived. The fraternity sponsored a bowling team which engaged in a weekly competition league. Most of the 1942 volleyball champions were back and saw much action. Lou Scioscia is the champion intramural shot-putter, while Bob Houghton, famous no-hit artist, repeated his own sizzling brand of pitching on the varsity baseball squad this spring.

Among our other distinguished brothers are John Bocckel and Don Westover who were recently initiated into Phi Beta Kappa. Don also plays such a "hot" trumpet that in Sammy Fletcher's band, the Duke Ambassadors, he is popularly known "Gabriel." Johnny Speziale plays the sax and does more than his share to make this band topnotch. Jim O'Leary is the Southern Conference champion in the shot and discus, as well as playing in varsity football.

In the social line, we have enjoyed a series of cabin parties at very desirable locations just outside of Durham. Many open houses were held during the year, especially after all of the home football games. Our Georgia Tech Homecoming found many former Kappa Sigs present in their old section "BB" for our annual reunion. Social highlights were a dance at Forest Hills Club, a banquet at the Washington Duke Hotel, and a dual-fraternity dance with music by the Ambassadors.

Kappa Sigma is very proud of its fine representation in F.A.C., the CHANTICLEER, BOS, Phi Eta Sigma, Phi Beta Kappa, Student Government, the Pan-Hel Council, the Varsity "D" Club, and in every varsity sport. It has been a great year for all of us.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

REMAINING strong through the war years, Gamma Theta Zeta of Lambda Chi Alpha began the year in its old home, House D, with entirely new furnishings. Many returning veterans were welcomed back, and immediately joined with the more recent members in the various campus organizations and activities in which Lambda Chis have always taken a strong part.

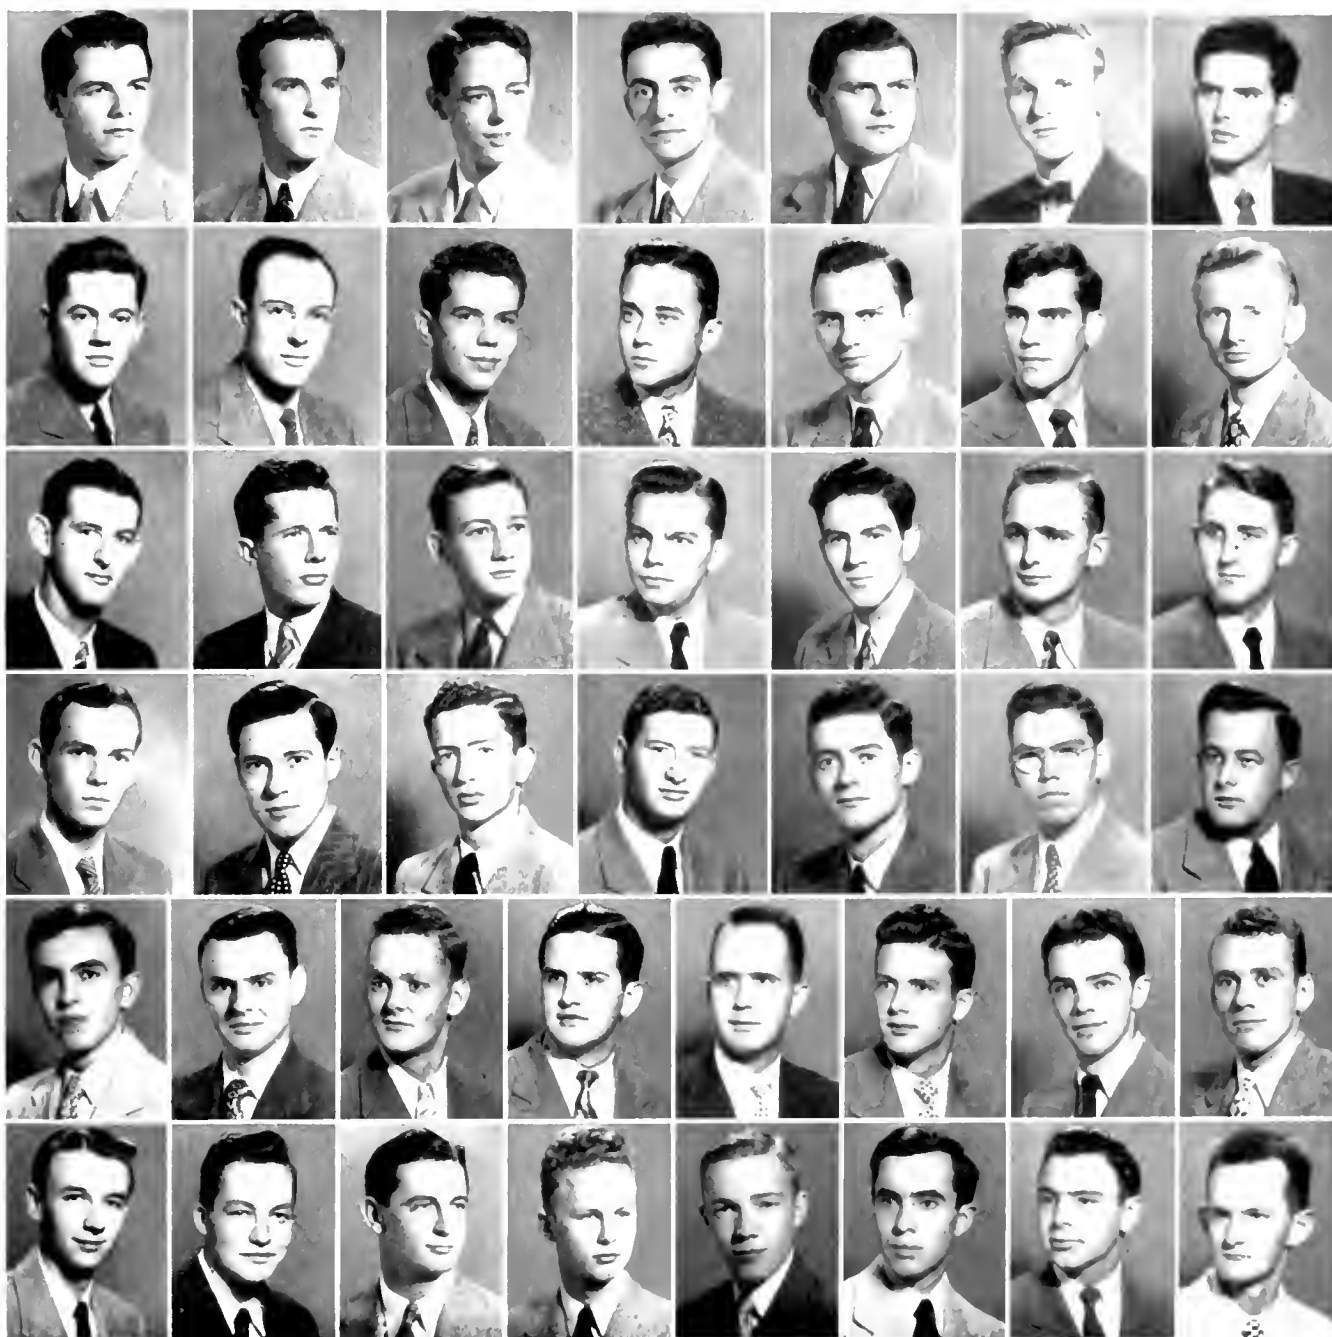

Each one of the brothers was outstanding in some field, whether being the life of a stag party or a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Lucky Kowalski and Charlie Hill were members of A.S.M.E., and Bill Henry was a member of A.S.C.E. Kowalski attained two of the highest honors possible—Phi Beta Kappa and Delta Epsilon Sigma. In addition to this, Lucky found time to be a valuable worker on the Duke 'n' Duchess staff. Also proudly showing his Phi Beta Key is Frank Fugale.

Lambda Chi was well represented in other extra-curricular activities also. Johnny Brooks made a capable Junior Class representative on the Men's Student Government Association, while Bill Howe was the able president of Bench and Bar. L. M. Clymer had the difficult job of wielding the gavel of the Anchor and Eagle Club. On Publications Row, Walt Elderkin was the ranking male of the CHANTI-CLEER Editorial Staff, aided by Dick Sulze and Roland Nelson, who also helped out on other publications. In music, Lambda Chi boasted of Bill Henry, Drum Major of the NROTC Drum and Bugle Corps, and several members of the Men's Glee Club and Chapel Choir, which included Bill Allen, Ralph Edwards, Dave Scarrow, Howard Scarrow, Walt Elderkin, and Milt Arneson. Andy Lawandales was in the Duke Band. F. A.C. numbered Charlie Hill, Roland Nelson, Shep Drewery, Bob Holland, and Johnny Brooks among its most active members. Fred Wight was an officer in the Fleet Club, as well as sharing top honors in sharpshooting with Bill Henry on the pistol team. Harry Grover led the fraternity to high honors in all the fields of intramural athletics, and we were very proud of Bill Garcia, one of the stars on the varsity baseball team.

The full social program included numerous cabin parties, open houses, beer parties, and formal dances. The highlight of the fall semester was a formal dance with Jack Fieldson's band, but the climax of the year came in the spring, when the Duke chapter sponsored a four-chapter, state-wide dance, at which Jack Fieldson and his campus orchestra again played.

PHI DELTA THETA

THE BEGINNING of the year found the Phi Delts still holding a top notch position in all fields of campus life, and welcoming back many old brothers.

The wearers of the sword and shield have made their mark in practically every campus activity. In the honoraries, Hal Becker and Ed Pratt were chosen this fall for ODK, thereby joining Brothers Bob DeMott, Norris Hodgkins, Charlie Markham, and Bob Gantt. Becker was also awarded membership in Phi Beta Kappa this semester, an honor already accorded to Pratt, DeMott, Markham, and Marshall Spears. Three men were tapped into Delta Epsilon Sigma—DeMott, Pratt, and Gene Johnson. Becker is currently serving as president of this organization. Another Engineering honorary, the Order of St. Patrick, selected Jim Murff for membership. On "pub row", Editor Hodgkins, Associate Editor Baldwin, Managing Editor Felker, Sports Editor Beaudouin, Columnist Markham, and reporters Foster and Smith are largely responsible for this year's high standards of the Chronicle. Johnny Walker served as sports editor for the CHANTICLEER. Al Tallman led the YMCA through a successful year, ably assisted by Brothers Lewis Hodgkins and Charlie Cook on the Senior Cabinet, and Dave Jung on the Sophomore Cabinet. This filled most all offices of the Commodore Club, NROTC social organization, with Gordon Smith, president, "Scoot" Llewellyn, vice president, Dick Schmidt, treasurer, and Ed Pratt, social chairman. Hal Becker was elected president of the Senior Engineering Class.

On the Blue Devil football varsity, Bob Gantt, Bill Davis, and Jim Groome were standouts. Bill Leitheiser, Ed Perini, Ken Younger, Hudson Meachem, Danny Hayden, and Jojo Jouannet played on the jayvee team. Perini and Bill Halliday were important to the baseball team, while Rufus Ashby returned to claim his spot on the varsity tennis aggregation. The Phi Delts were outstanding in this year's intramurals, repeating many of last year's victories in basketball and softball. The touch football team and tennis competitors also turned in fine records.

Numerous cabin parties, dances, and open houses combined to make the social side of our fraternity life something to-write-home-about. Many brothers made the New York and Baltimore trips. The success of two rush seasons was an ideal climax of the year.

PHI KAPPA PSI

THE ADVENT of the fall semester this year found North Carolina Alpha of Phi Kappa Psi back home again at pre-war strength, with a pleasing mixture of veteran returnees and new men.

The Phi Psis were engaged in nearly all the major extra-curricular activities on the campus. Our twelve Engineers led the way, especially Don Biancavilla, president of the Engineer's Club, aided by Harold Jackson, treasurer. Ernest Friedli was president of Pi Tau Sigma. Other slide-rule boys who made themselves known were Harry Griese and Bob Saunders, A.S.M.E., Harold Holbrook and Bill Denton, A.I.E.E. Our foremost Engineer was Buford Neely, who was initiated into Phi Beta Kappa. The smell of newsprint attracted many of us. Dave Fick was associate editor of the Archive, understaffed by Pete Wile and Ned Martin. On the Duke 'n' Duchess were Gene MacArthur, circulation and promotion manager, Glenn Johnson and Tom McEldowney. The Duke-engineer carried on in fine style with John Mitchell, adviser, Hal Jackson, Don Campbell, and Ernie Friedli. In the music and entertainment fields we boasted of Jack Anderson, soloist and member of the glee club and choir, Pete Wile adding comedy to the Hoof and Horn show, and Gene MacArthur in the glee club, Hoof and Horn, and Duke Players.

The Phi Psis were not lacking in sports, either, with a strong intramural representation in all fields and several members on varsity teams. Roger Neighborgall was a luminary on the track squad, Jerry Jackson in wrestling, and Pete DeWitt on the baseball team.

The Phi Psis were not lacking in sport, either, many smokers and cabin parties during the year. Outstanding among our functions was the Jefferson Day Hop given jointly with the Phi Gamma Deltas of U. N. C. in February, to commemorate the founding of both fraternities at Washington and Jefferson in 1852. A Christmas dance in the Union Ballroom was also a highlight of the social season. This was also a farewell dance for several brothers.

There has been much to do to regain a certain degree of normalcy and we feel this was accomplished. Mixing dances with drudgery, cabin parties with classes, we have rollicked through the year in as close a harmony as can be reached by any fraternity. Phi Kappa Psi can truthfully say, "A job well done."

PHI KAPPA SIGMA

SEPTEMBER 1946 was the beginning of a grand year for Phi Kappa Sigma. Forty members returned, twenty-seven of whom were veterans. The year started with the fraternity being presented the fraternity scholarship trophy. Formerly a prisoner of war at Stalag Luft I was Bud Willson, who, in addition to being president of Nu Chapter, was president of F.A.C. Another top position was held by Bud Brown, who did a remarkable job as president of the Men's Pan-Hellenic Council. Bud was also a member of the Men's S.G.A.

Scholarship honors went to Louie Moore, Lach Campbell, and Bill McCall, all members of Phi Beta Kappa. Phi Kaps were active in all fields of extra-curricular activities. Members of the Freshman Advisory Council were Bob Parish, Tex Garrick, Louie Moore, and Bob Rich, who also edited Nu News, chapter publication. Bob McGough was vice president of the Forestry Club, assisted by Archie Byers, a Phi Kap transfer from Vancouver, and a Canadian swimming champion. Rusty Tomlinson, our Pan-Hel representative, was a member of the rushing rules committee for the spring term. Rog Smith, Al Bingham, and Bud Cormack were members of the Men's Glee Club and Chapel Choir, while Dave Turpin played in the Duke Band.

In athletics, John Nania, line coach for the Junior Varsity, was discus champion in the Southern Conference, and has hopes of competing in the coming Olympics to be held in England. Bob Scott, fraternity intramural manager, saw to it that we won a large number of points this year. Our bowling team once again held its own in the fraternity bowling league. Lane Yelverton led the football team through a successful season, Clyde Yancy and Carl Cerrera being outstanding linemen.

The social program commenced with a Founders' Day Ball, celebrating the tenth anniversary of Mu Chapter at Duke and the ninety-sixth year of the fraternity. Open houses were held every Saturday during the football season. The purchase of a "coke" machine greatly augmented these social affairs. We welcomed many brothers from Georgia Tech as well as Phi Kap alumni at Homecoming. Climaxing the fall season was a gala Christmas party. Following a successful rush week was a fine cabin party, and the year ended with a spring formal, which was held in conjunction with the chapter at Carolina.

PHI THETA SIGMA

PHI THETA SIGMA, local Greek-letter social fraternity, was founded during a war year at Duke University on August 7, 1944, by Fred I. E. Ferris. Other founding members are Richard S. Douglas, Richard M. Bowles, E. Kenneth Aycock, and Henry D. Messer. The fraternity adviser is Dr. F. A. G. Cowper, Professor of Romance Languages at Duke since 1918 and a member of the Alpha Chi Chapter at Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut.

Acceptance on December 3, 1946 to membership on the Men's Pan-Hellenic Council climaxed more than two years of progressive work accomplished by the fraternity brothers.

The main purposes of Phi Theta Sigma are to procure a charter from Delta Kappa Epsilon, national social fraternity founded at Yale University in 1844, and to promote character and personality development through the mediums of religion, traits of understanding and coöperation, responsibility and leadership, and an appreciation for the finer things in life. Recognizing the fact that social fraternities should have a more sober responsibility in the complex world situation of the present day, the brothers began a philanthropic movement to help those less fortunate than themselves by contributing in some manner to the welfare of underprivileged individuals and public or private institutions. The first project undertaken was a Christmas party presented at Wright Refuge, a home for dependent children in Durham.

The social season was topped by the spring dance, with additional cabin parties, stag parties, and banquets also on the agenda. During the summer months the brothers will again meet for a reunion at some resort as yet not chosen.

Brothers of Phi Theta Sigma are as active as possible, outside of the tremendous work necessary to prepare a local fraternity for recognition by a national fraternity such as Delta Kappa Epsilon, in extra-curricular activities on campus, including the honorary societies of Phi Eta Sigma and Phi Beta Kappa. In athletics the Phi Sigs have men on the track team, baseball team, and soccer and tennis teams. Other members are active in state and national associations, conferences, and other movements.

The organization of this fraternity has taken "intestinal fortitude"; however, the brothers are confident of attaining their goals.

PI KAPPA ALPHA

PIKAS were participants in all of the campus activities and organizations. On "pub row" Art Wheeler did a fine job as editor of the Duke Engineer, aided by assistant editor, Kirk Kirkpatrick. Art Gilbert was assistant business manager of the Chronicle, with Dick Wambach and Ray Greenman on the staff. Bill Jennings was on the Duke 'n' Duchess staff.

Pi Kappa Alpha was well represented in various sports. Ben Cittadino, formerly an all-American, returned to varsity football with all of his old ability, as did Frank Inman, Clyde Redding, and Garland Wolfe. Len Thompson represented PiKA on the swimming team, and Alex Miller was a valuable basketball man. Tom Bullock was manager of the track team, and Jim Davis continued to break long distance track records. Bill Rankin proved his worth on the golf team.

Nor was PiKA short in musical talent. Thad Wester, in his white and gold cape, was a familiar figure to Dukesters as Drum Major of the band. Ray Harden was commander of the NROTC Drum and Bugle Corps, with several PiKAs playing in it. Kirk Kirkpatrick played with the Ambassadors and Gene Starks beat the drums for Jack Fieldson's Band.

Johnny Kelly worked in Hoof and Horn, and Carl Grover with the Duke Players. PiKA was also well represented on F.A.C., the Commodore's Club, the Engineer's Club, the Fleet Club, and the Anchor and Eagle Club. Keeping up PiKA's good scholastic standing were Bill Griffin and Johnny Vogel, who received their Phi Beta Kappa keys.

An extensive and well balanced social program was presented through the year. Numerous open houses were held, and many alumni were welcomed during Homecoming weekend. There were also many Sunday afternoon cabin parties, hayrides, and picnics. A Halloween Dance was given with Jack Fieldson's Band furnishing the music. In December a dance was given to honor the new initiates, and one in February to choose the PiKA sweater-girl of the year. Concluding another successful year was the main social of the year, the Dream Girl Dance. At this time the Pi Kappa Alpha Dream Girl of 1947 was chosen and presented with a pendant necklace of pearls as a mark of popularity with the fraternity.

PI KAPPA PHI

PROUDLY bearing the emblem of the star and lamp, the brothers of Pi Kappa Phi have completed a year of activity highlighted by the moving of the fraternity back to its dormitory section, by the return of many old brothers, and by increased participation in campus affairs.

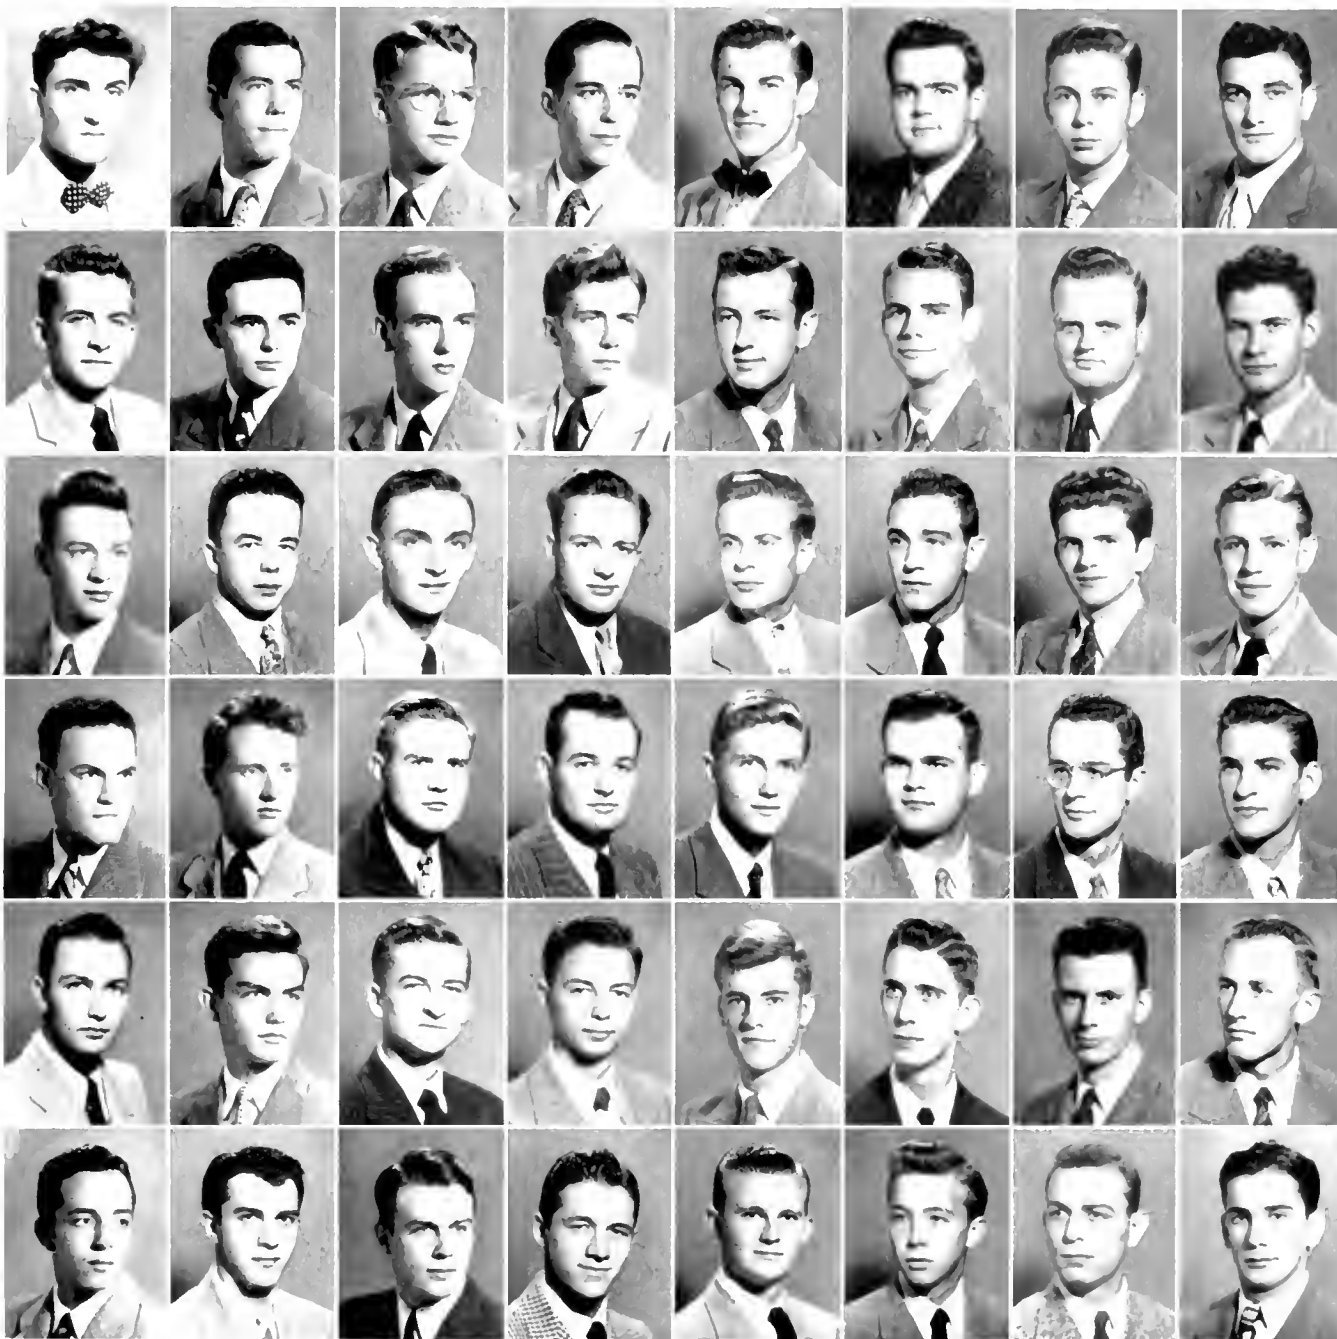

Ed Gatling is the Sophomore "Y" president, and Welsford Bishopric, secretary-treasurer. Other coveted honorary positions are held by Vahe Simidian, Bench and Bar Club president, and Bob McGreevy, vice president of the Duke Players. Ted Villaneuva and William Whalen are members of F.A.C. Norm Nelson, feature editor of the Chronicle, staff member of the Duke 'n' Duchess, and a member of the band and orchestra, won second place in the Phi Kappa Delta song-writing contest. Hu Burnett and Johnson Watts are active in the glee club and chapel choir. Manley Stockton, Ben Cato, Bill Elam, and Welsford Bishopric also work on the staffs of campus publications. William Whalen capably handled one of the leads in the Hoof and Horn production.

Warren Pope is the first student in three years to hold the position of manager of the basketball team. Brothers Art Vann and Bob Roellke add Pi Kapp vigor to the baseball and basketball teams, while the soccer team boasts of Rod Rigione, Don Shaw, and Joe Toledo. Don Wallis is a member of the Junior Varsity. In the intramural league, the Pi Kapps triumphantly ended the football season undefeated and unscored on in their division.

The social program, which opened with a combined cabin party and treasure hunt, maintained its vigorous pace with a series of open houses, stag parties, dinners and dances. An innovation in fraternity functions was the blond dinner to which all brothers brought flaxen-haired dates. The Pi Kappa Phi-Alfa Delta Pi exchange, at which bridge and dancing were enjoyed by all, constituted another novel event. The traditional candle-light dinner-dance climaxed pre-holiday activities. Decorations featured gold and white, with illumination furnished exclusively by candles. The spring semester included the Sweetheart Valentine Ball, at which wives of brothers were honored, the state triad dance held in Greensboro, a hayride, and cabin parties. A weekend party in May at Myrtle Beach rounded out the spring social calendar and culminated Pi Kapp activities of the year.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

IT WAS QUITE NATURAL that the largest roster in the history of North Carolina Nu would be represented in every phase of extra-curricular activities: social, honorary, and athletic.

In regard to the social calendar, 1946-47 found S A E leading the way with a succession of cabin parties, open houses, and more informal get-togethers. The annual dance in March, honoring the new pledges, was an overwhelming success. Topping off the year's social activities, the climactic dinner-dance was held at the Washington Duke Hotel. Given in honor of the all-deserving graduates, the unique, superb originality of the dance was truly a grand finale to a great social season.

In the honorary and elective positions, S A E was well represented. Howard Hartley was elected Junior Class president, and Frank Trechsel secured the vice president position in the Sophomore Class. B O S chose Bob Taylor as secretary, and tapped Frank Trechsel and Dick Barrett. Among the future Phi Betes who were initiated into Phi Eta Sigma were Frank Trechsel—who served as president, Dick Barrett—secretary, and Bill Boone. O D K tapped Brother Howard Hartley as one of its honored members. On Pub Row, John Coleman proved to be one of the CHANTICLEER's most capable Business Managers, and Howard Terry received the honor of Business Manager of the Chronicle. Ray Tilley was Assistant Business Manager of the CHANTICLEER, while the Archive boasted of Bill Bryan, Bill Snitger, and Frank Trechsel as assistants. Larry Coe did much outstanding artistic work for the CHANTICLEER and Archive, and Dick Barrett was Office Manager of the CHANTICLEER. Bob Allen was elected to the Publications Board with Howard Terry and John Coleman acting as ex-officio members.

Sig Alph was well represented on the football field with mainstays Herman Smith, Buddy Mulligan, Howard Hartley, Buddy Strauss, Bob Hartley, and Hugh Stone. In basketball, Doug Ausbon played an outstanding game at guard. The Durham boy also took top honors in track, leading the entire team in the 100- and 220-yard dashes, high jump, and mile relay. Brother Bob Taylor held a position on the tennis team and joined Emery Greene in the doubles. Lacrosse, Duke's newest sport, was not without S A E representation. Jimmy Corrigan was cited for All-Southern and Tom Davis lettered.

With the first post-war year behind us, Sigma Alpha Epsilon confidently looks to an even brighter future on Duke University Campus.

SIGMA CHI

IN A YEAR OF CHANGE and challenge, Duke's Beta Lambda chapter of Sigma Chi forged to the front in campus activities of every kind.

Politically, socially, and athletically it was a big year for Sigma Chi, largest fraternity on campus, as members won highest honors in every phase of student life. The president of Men's Student Government Association was John "Bubber" Seward, Balfour Province Award winner of last year. President of the Senior Class was Joe DiMona. President of the Sophomore Class was Bob Garey. Fully one-third of Omicron Delta Kappa at the beginning of the year was composed of Sigs: "Doc" Walker, "Bubber" Seward, George Clark, and Joe DiMona. Elected to BOS were Bob Garey, Ted Marshall, and Art Polier.

Other honors went to the Sigma Chis as the year progressed. Homecoming Weekend saw us win the first prize for decorations, and the YMCA's annual wheelbarrow race saw the Sigs, with Lena Harris riding high, wide, and handsome, come in first.

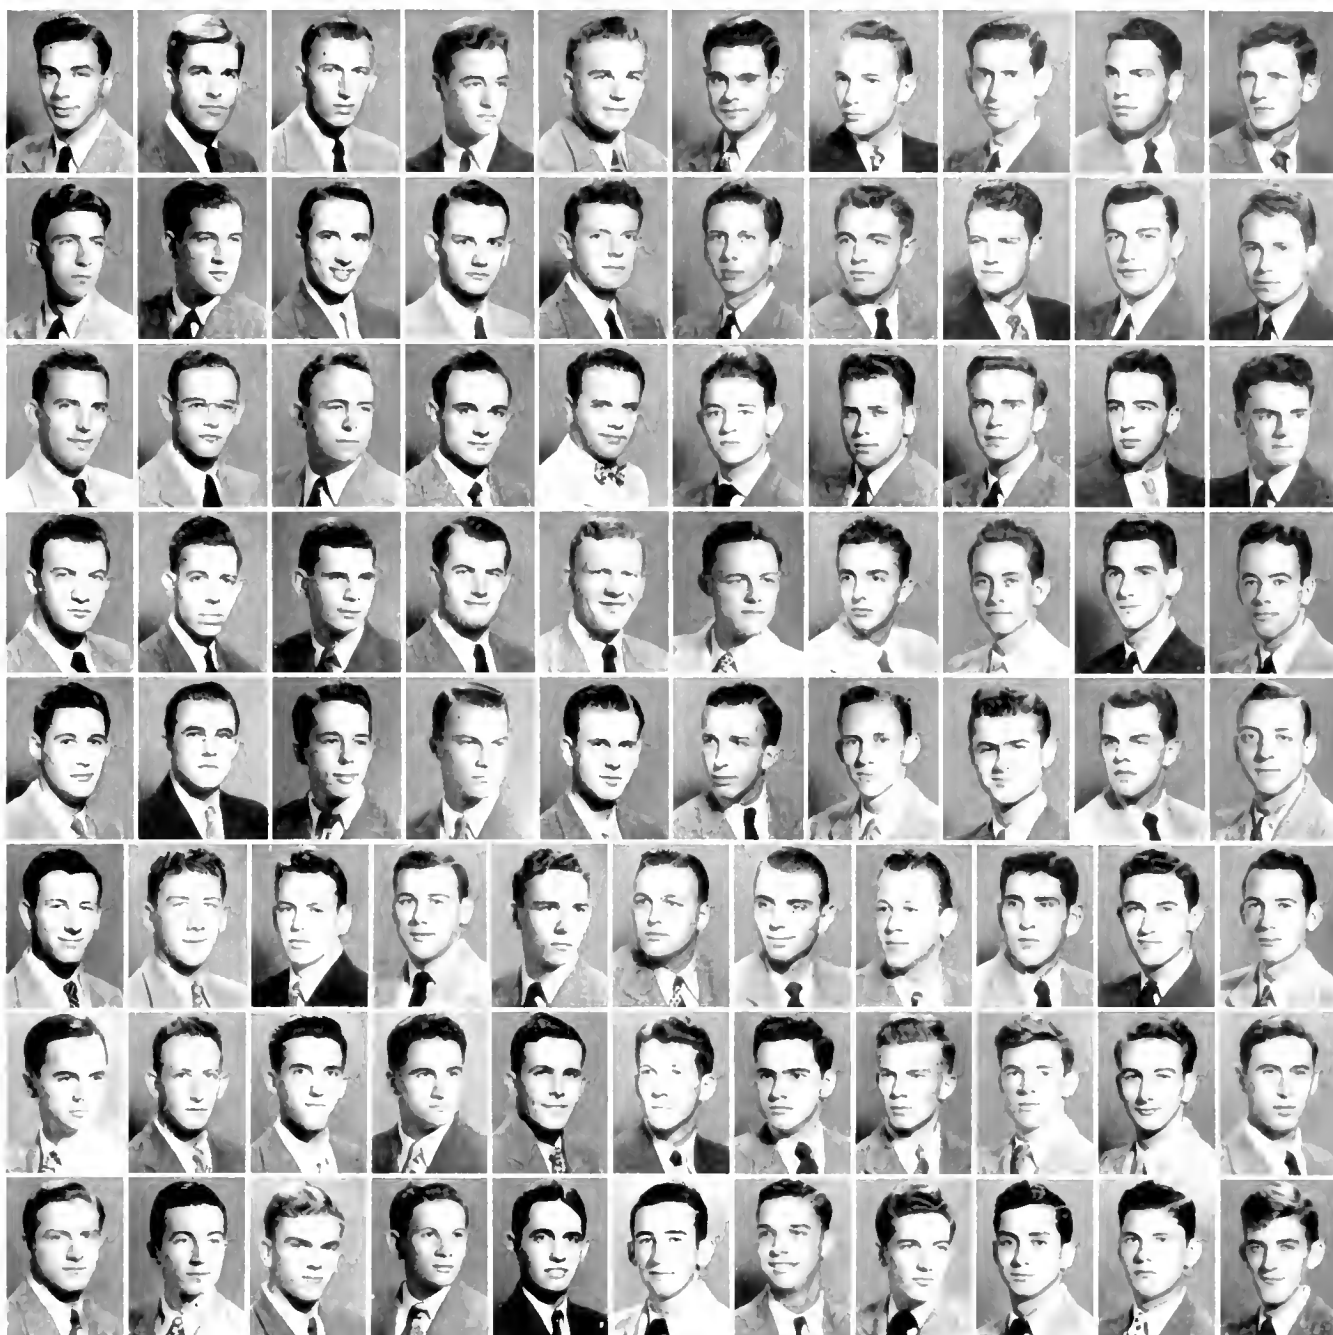

Publications Row thronged with Sigs this year as Joe DiMona, erstwhile editor of the Chronicle and Archive, returned to become associate editor of the Duke 'n' Duchess, and columnist for the Chronicle and Archive, and Bob Johnston assisted on the sports page. Charlie Sydnor held the position of Managing Editor of the Chronicle, assisted on the editorial staff by Art Polier, Johnny Boggs, and Bob Welch. Pat Dorsey was elected Business Manager of the Archive at mid-year, and Walt Parker was Associate Business Manager. Jack Shehee as Assistant Business Manager, and Jim Hopkins as Sports Editor of the QUANTICLER rounded out our representation.

In the field of athletics, Sigs were prominent in all phases of sport. All-American tailback George Clark, elected the "most valuable player of the year" was assisted on the squad by linemen Ted Marshall, last year's all-southern tackle, and Tex Williams. Varsity Basketball was made up of many Sigs, with "Bubber" Seward, co-captain of the team, Ben Collins, "Curly" Gordon, and Garland Loftis.

The social season was most vigorous, with cabin parties, stag parties, open houses, two informal dances, and two banquets. The zenith was reached on January 11 when Madge Slaughter was crowned Sweetheart of Sigma Chi.

SIGMA NU

THE "WAR YEARS" found Sigma Nu very much alive on the campus, and so the task of returning to a peacetime status in our old section was one of steering rather than reestablishing the fraternity for our able president, Ed Kirsnis.

We are very proud of our many brothers who are members of the various honorary Engineering Societies, which outnumber those in any other fraternity. Members of A.S.M.E. are: Tom Shuler, Dick Judge, Kirk Kea, Bill Skinner, Starr Latimer, Hunter Adams, Bill Pearce, and Charlie Donnelly. Belonging to A.I.E.E. are: Joe Willis, Gordon Goldsmith, and Nick Nickinson. The Engineer's Club can boast of three Sigma Nu members: Starr Latimer, Charlie Donnelly, and Bill Pearce.

Sigma Nu is strongly represented in all other extra-curricular fields besides Engineering. Five men who have made themselves outstanding on the Freshman Advisory Council are Ed Kirsnis, Dick Judge, Hunter Adams, Bob Shane, and Jack Applegate. Lu Pressley is a member of Tau Psi Omega, honorary French fraternity, and Gordon Goldsmith is a member of Pi Mu Epsilon. In the field of music are Jack Applegate and Lu Pressley, who are members of the Men's Glee Club and Chapel Choir. Publications Row finds Ken Baldwin and Bill Dewberry hard at work on the staff of the Chronicle. Ken finds additional time to be a valuable worker on the Duke 'n' Duchess staff.

Keeping the scholastic average of the fraternity in an enviable position are our five brothers who are engraved on the Dean's List. Athletically speaking, we are proud of the splendid record our Intramural teams made, as well as the outstanding ability of varsity trackman Jim Heffner.

The social calendar was filled with many activities. Open houses followed all home football games, with occasional cabin parties on other weekends. The annual Christmas banquet was a huge success and was the outstanding social function of the month. The spring found Gamma Chapter sponsoring a series of cabin parties and open houses, both in honor of the pledge class and for the general enjoyment of all. Another annual banquet and dance closed the spring social season, at which tribute was paid to graduating members and newly installed officers.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON

THE BEGINNING of the new school year saw the return of many veterans which bolstered the fraternity to its present position. Among those who returned were Clifford Blackwell, the capable Business Manager of the Archive, Bill Andrews, who proudly wears the coveted Phi Beta Kappa key, and Jack Halliday, who is completing his work in the graduate law school. Don Rothery is the leading musician of the fraternity as proven by his playing first clarinet in the Duke University Band. Don also takes a prominent part in the A.S.C.E., an honorary Engineering society.

At present the fraternity boasts of two athletes, one of whom is Hordur Helgason. "Helgie" is one of the lead players on the newly organized soccer team, and is pleased no end to participate in the national pastime of his native Iceland. Irv Gray was again a member of the varsity basketball team, having completed a successful season with last year's team.

With the intramural program once again restored to its peacetime level, the Sig Eps entered teams in touch football, basketball, bowling, tennis, and handball. Whether it was a case of win, lose, or draw, Sigma Phi Epsilon carried the fraternity spirit into each contest.

Their newly decorated chapter room was formally presented at an open house, held the Saturday of the Duke-Navy game. The members and their dates finished the celebration with dinner and dancing. Another gala open house highlighted the Homecoming game this year. Present at this affair were many alumni who were back for the first time in many years. Other successful open houses were held in connection with each of the home games, and were followed by the members and their dates going to a local "hot spot" reserved for the occasion, where all enjoyed steak dinners, dancing, and a special program put on by the brothers.

Following a successful spring rush season, Sig Ep returned to the prewar custom of holding a spring formal dance. It was held in the Union Ballroom. Previous years proved this to be the highlight of their social calendar, and this year it surpassed anything in the past

ZETA BETA TAU

ZETA BETA TAU has had a successful year on the Duke Campus. In September we moved back into our old section, House T, furnished now with a pleasing, but luxurious simplicity.

We have been fortunate to welcome back many veterans: John Levy, Sid Ziegler, John Frey, Stu Wintner, Larry Berngard, Burt Korelitz, Larry Simons, Buddy Wechsler, Gitty Gordon, Ben Pumpian, Leonard Rosen, Larry Schwartz, Howard Goodman, Dick Abramson, Chuck Farber, and Alan Brown.

The fraternity has been quite active in extra-curricular activities. In the field of sports, Larry Simons was our captain on the Intramural field. Shelly Adler and Shelly Ablekop, both winning honorable mention, were the mainstays of the team. The basketball team was very active due to the efforts of Morton Land, our high scorer, Alan Sugarman, Ben Pumpian, Wally Rosenberg, Shelly Adler, Harold Gordon, Larry Simons, Dick Abramson, and Dave Levin. Larry Schwartz had a very successful year in handball, capturing second place in this sport, and scoring third place in cross-country competition. Wally Rosenberg won first place in the cross-country.

In handball and tennis Howard Goodman and Sid Ziegler went to the quarter-finals. Al Sugarman was on the varsity swimming squad and Ben Pumpian holds a position on the varsity wrestling team.

Active in other fields were Ed Berne, assistant editor of the Play-bill for Duke Players; John Levy and Dick Feder who played in Emile Zola's "Therese"; Al Myerberg who participated in "Ten Little Indians" and Hoof and Horn's "Campus Time"; Alan Cohen who sang in the Men's Glee Club; John Frey who played in both campus dance bands, Hank Shapiro and Donald Millenson, both holding many honors in Engineering—DES, A.S.M.E., and Pi Mu Epsilon. Alan Sugarman was a member of the cheerleading squad, Hoof and Horn show, Duke Players, and BOS. Larry Simons was elected Secretary of the Junior Class.

Homecoming weekend was the outstanding attraction on ZBT's fall social calendar. It was commemorated by many alumni returning for the first time since the beginning of the war. An open house, a formal banquet and dance, and a terrific cabin party made the weekend a magnificent affair.

ALPHA DELTA PI

THE YEAR has been a well-filled one for the officers of Alpha Delta Pi. President Jane McDonald, who is also occupied with Hoof and Horn and the Pan-Hellenic Council, was ably assisted by Jean Lentz, vice president, and Mary Kathrine Ball, recording secretary. The treasury was handled by Betty Gwaltney, who was also on the Freshman Advisory Council. Jean Lentz, Nancy Boyer, and Jean Tommasi were also on F.A.C.

Showing their ability in the dramatic field were Sue Bowmall, Jean Armstead, and Alda Heykoop of Duke Players. Betsy Smith, Peg Forehand, Mary Louise Powe, Jane McDonald, Nell Bailey, Sue Bowmall, and Elizabeth Barrett were in Hoof and Horn. Sue Bowmall served on the Hoof and Horn Executive Board. Last, but not least, was Jean Tommasi, who was a member of both. Among the more athletically inclined were Julia Toms and Peg Forehand, both members of Nereidian, and Sue Bowmall of Pegasus.

The junior class was headed by: Jean Tommasi, president; Nancy Boyer, vice president; and Jean Armstead, treasurer. Heading the list of Sophomores was Jean Savage, vice president of the Sophomore class and member of Sandals. Another officer was Bev Neely, president of Alspaugh House.

Buffa Garrett, this year's CHANTICLEER Beauty Queen, was on the Social Standards Committee and the Pan-Hellenic Council.

Among the social activities for the year were a Halloween Party on October 21, a pledge dance, and a Christmas party. A beach party was given in the spring at Myrtle Beach.

The three rush parties of the sorority, including the Juke Box party, the Plantation party, and the Wishing Well party, brought fourteen wonderful pledges ADPi way: Anna Lee Smith, Roland Collins, Dewitt Cromer, Mary Sue Gray, Jean Hull, Hazel Jansen, Rita Vee Martin, Erdmuth McCuiston, Joan Simpson, Laura Jean Taft, Harriet Thigpen, Jane Walton, Betty Ann Williams, and Anna Wolfe. ALPHA EPSILON PHI

THE MEMBERS of Alpha Epsilon Phi proved their versatility through the year by their membership in the many organizations on campus.

Among those participating in the campus activities were Jean Schimmel, who was Co-Editor of the Duke Playbill, member of Phi Beta Kappa, and Pi Mu Epsilon; Evelyn Schmidt, a member of Pan-Hellenic Council, Phi Beta Kappa, Pi Mu Epsilon, and the Music Study Club; Shirley Finklestein, member of Nereidian, Music Study Club, and Choir; Nancy Lee Alexander, a member of Social Standards, Duke Players, and the Music Study Club. Bluma Kafka was president of the Music Study Club and vice president of Alsbaugh. Estelle Greenwald was a member of the sophomore "Y" commission. Barbara Sacks was Co-Editor of the Duke Playbill, president of the Sociology Club, representative of Mademoiselle, member of Theta Alpha Phi, and Tau Psi Omega. Enta Cove, who showed dramatic ability in Ten Little Indians, proved her scholastic aptitude by being tapped into Ivy.

Most of the officers, quite active on the campus, have already been named before as members and leaders of the various organizations. These girls are Sara Schwartz, president; Janice Paradies, vice president; Jean Schimmel, secretary; and Evelyn Schmidt, treasurer.

Among the plans made by Helen Cahn, social chairman, and the rest of the members, were a dance for the first week in December, a cabin party in the spring, and a shower for Jean Schimmel, who was married in February.

Using the stylish "covergirl" theme for their first party, the members of the sorority started the ball rolling for rush week. The second party was the Gypsy Tea Room party for which the room was brightened by tables covered with gay red and white checked table cloths. True to the gypsy theme, each rushee had her fortune told. The last and most serious party was the Dream Party in which all of the actives were very impressive in their white formals. Their efforts were rewarded by pledging five grand girls: Barbara Brady, Doris Friedman, Helen Rosenman, Shirley Seegall, and Shirley Wisebram.

PHI MU

GAMMA EPSILON chapter of Phi Mu elected Gini Kauble as president this year. Other officers were: Mary Ann Worthy, vice president; Mamie McLawhorn, secretary; and Thelma Klussman, treasurer.

Almost every girl in the group was represented in some campus activity. Gini Kauble was tapped into Phi Kappa Delta. On publications, Helen Gordon was student life editor of the CHANTICLEER, and Jim McRae was head of typing and filing. Peg Throne was Assistant Editor of the Archive. Betty Wolf worked for the Chronicle. Peg Throne, besides being in Chi Delta Phi and Hoof and Horn, was president of Duke Players.

Working on YWCA were Elizabeth Ashley, Betty Baker, Barbara Blackham, Ann Bliss, Shirley Blue, Jane Caldwell, Helen Gordon, Betty Sue Harward, Gini Kauble, Jim McRae, Marie Quinn, Sarah Simpson, Mary Jane Smith, Gene Stone, Christine Wagoner, Betty Wolf, Ruth Haigh, and Martha Launius.

Sophomore honors went to Shirley Blue and Sarah Simpson when they were tapped into Ivy. Jean Patee was a member of Pegasus.

Mary Ann Worthy was a member of F.A.C. and Social Standards.

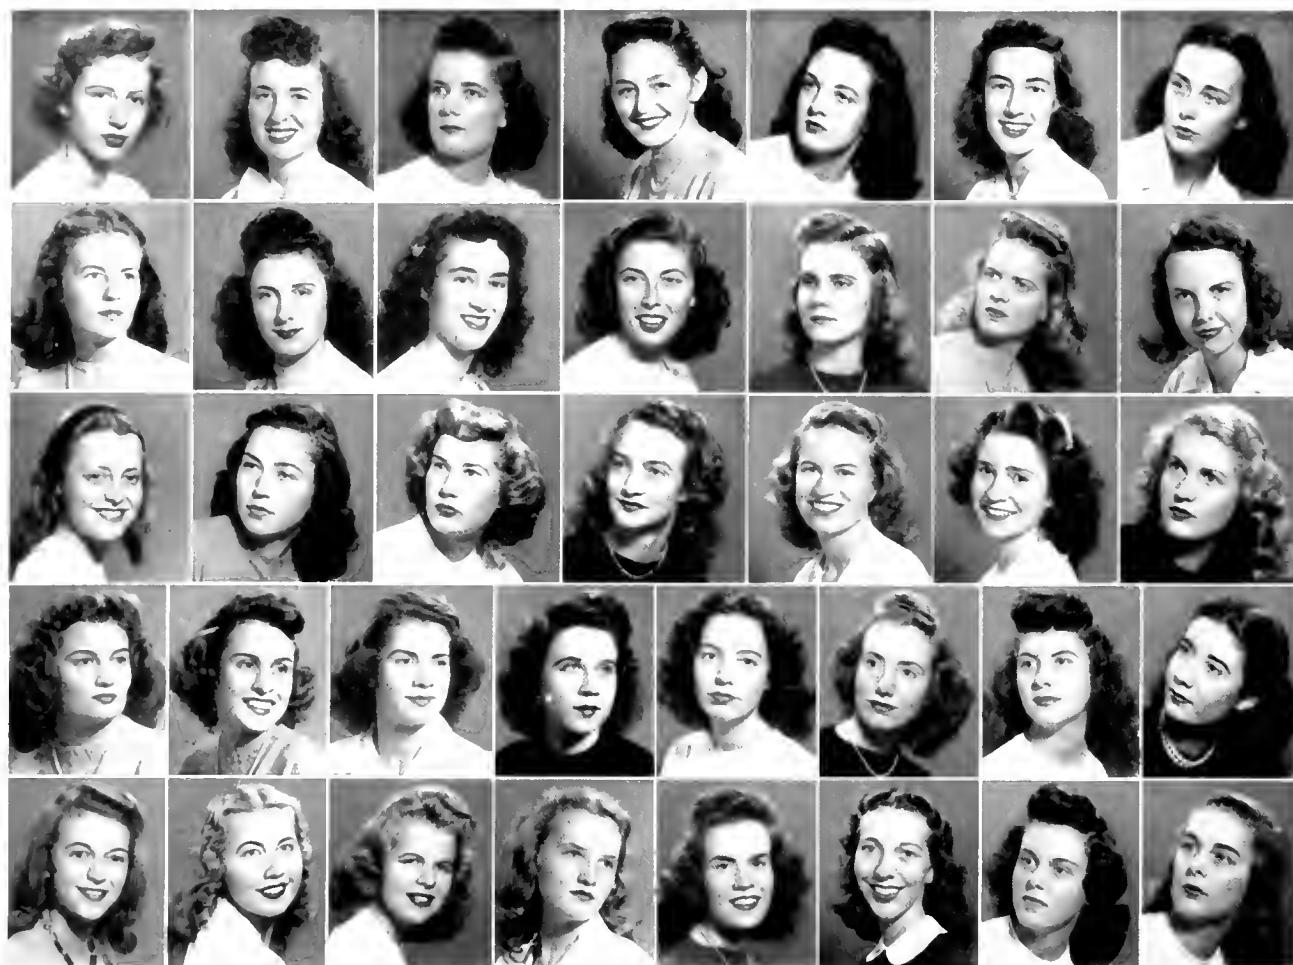

The Phi Mu's gave three rush parties last fall. The first function was a beach party, at which the actives wore playsuits. For the second party the chapter room was converted into Phi Mu Orientale, a Chinese Night Club. The closing party was the traditional Dream Cake Party, at which the colors of rose and white were carried out in the decorations.

Highlight of first semester social life was the pledge dance given in the Ark on East Campus. During the spring, members and pledges packed their bathing suits for a gay week-end at Crabtree. Gamma Epsilon won the Inter-sorority sing contest in March.

With Jean Patee as rush chairman, fourteen girls were pledged at the end of the four weeks' rushing period. They were: Nancy Alberts, Jennie Lee Barnett, Katherine Bixler, Betty Jean Caveness, Jean Kelly, Jennifer Harrison, Margaret Hinson, Mary Norton King, Eloise Parker, Mary Jo Reynolds, Ruth Seeley, Jane Suggs, Louise Tennent, and Nancy Vahey.

Pi Phi was represented in the CHIANTICLEER beauty section by Gloria Koltinsky, Audrey Bashore, and Becky Toms. Mary Ann Duncan was queen of the summer school girls.

In September the Pi Phis were entertained by their National Fraternity brothers, the Betas, at a cabin party. A pledge dance before Christmas was planned, as well as a house party at Daytona Beach, and a cabin party in the spring.

Giving as their three rush parties a circus, a time in review party, and Pi Phi Paradise, the Pi Phis pinned the wine and silver blue ribbons on the following pledges: Marion Bennett, Janet Botkin, Mary Lou Bratton, Jane Chivers, Nancy Earle, Molly Goddard, Elizabeth Graves, Joyce Hendricks, Pat Lynch, Nancy Niles, Betty Owen, Julia Pinnix, Mary Seaberg, and Grace Taylor.

SIGMA KAPPA

THIS YEAR the Sigma Kappa were led by Jeanne Harmon. Other officers were Robin Valentine, first vice president; Pat Cozart, second vice president; Kathleen Queally, recording secretary; Dot Meredith, corresponding secretary; and Lois Willoughby, treasurer.

The versatility of the group was shown by the many different organizations in which the members were active. Many girls were active in the YWCA. Eleanor Clardy was a member of the "Y" Guardian Club. Jeanne Eagles participated in the "Y" Political Discussion Group. Robin Valentine and Mary Kornfeld were on the Junior "Y" Commission. Marian Copeland worked on the "Y" Social Service Committee. Dot Meredith and Pat Cozart were in W.A.A.

Jeanne Harmon was a member of Social Standards. Dot Meredith was chosen to be on the Freshman Advisory Council. Jean Kilmer joined Tau Psi Omega and was also in Pegasus. Lois Willoughby and Helen Mapp were tapped into Ivy. Mary Kornfeld was treasurer of the Pan-Hellenic Council. Mary was also in Nereidian.

Under the leadership of Edie Andrews, social chairman of Sigma Kappa, the group planned a number of social events. After the rush parties, arrangements were made for a pledge dance, an initiation banquet, an overnight cabin party, several coffees and informal social teas for visiting national officers, and a tea on Founder's Day. A trip to the beach was also planned.

Throughout the year Sigma Kappa's general achievements have been scholarship improvement, standards improvement, and an increase in the number of girls participating in extra-curricular activities. The chapter has striven to meet these aims and has succeeded very well.

Eleanor Clardy, known to the chapter as DeeDee, acted as rush chairman this year. With her leadership to guide them, Sigma Kappa pledged eight girls, who proudly wore their lavender and maroon ribbons. They were Josephine Barron, Rebecca Burrum, Lois Colledge, Joanne Johnson, Celia McElroy, Ann Marie Richardson, Ann Smith, and Marjorie Streicher.

ZETA TAU ALPHA

THEIR TURQUOISE and silver colors flying, Zeta girls have had a busy and eventful year. Leading this active group were Jean Dunn, president; Maxine Yates, vice president; Eleanor Brinn, recording secretary; Betty Jane Troxell, corresponding secretary; and Mildred Reap, treasurer.

Betty Murchison, the Phi Beta Kappa of the chapter, was president of Southgate until she resigned in November. Besides this job, she found time for the Modern Dance Club and Phi Kappa Delta. The other W.S.G.A. member, Emily Boyd, was president of the Town Girl's Club. Active workers in the Modern Dance Club were Marilyn Gibson, president; and Lindy Stivers, publicity chairman. Jane Bruce was vice president of the YWCA and Lynn Echman was secretary of the junior "Y." Betty Jane Troxell was Co-ed Business Manager of the CHANTICLEER. Jane Bruce was secretary of the Pan-Hellenic Council. Shirley Zittrouer was tapped to Sandals. In Nereidian were Lillian Sturgis and Jean Dunn.

Zeta's beauty was recognized when Lindy Stivers, Shirley Zittrouer, and Til Paty Seward were chosen for the beauty section. Lindy and Til were members of Social Standards.

The social life of Zeta Tau Alpha began with a bang when wedding bells rang for Til. From then on things really happened. Planned functions were a supper in the chapter room for new pledges, a pledge dance in the Ark, and later a banquet at the Hope Valley Country Club. Second semester activities included an initiation supper in the Zeta room, a patron's supper, a cabin party, a week-end at the beach, two Sunday morning breakfasts, two Sunday suppers, and two Thursday night coffees. Other plans were to have a dance with a fraternity, a campus dance, and a Saturday afternoon bridge party.

Features

Fun was where you found it in those delightful days; dancing to Sammy Fletcher's Ambassadors; roughing it at cabin parties; cheering at football games; making the most of happy moments of Youth. . . .

THROUGHOUT this volume of the CHANTICLEER, the typical and more important events of the year have been recorded, but because they are seen from the viewpoint of their educational value, it is more than an account of collegiate activity—it is the record of a year of liberal education. Not detracting from the value of formal education, the educated man must know more than that which he secures from his textbooks. Supplementing formal knowledge he must become a well-balanced individual equipped to meet intelligently the many complex situations in life. Nowhere can greater opportunity for such development be found than on the university campus, for here influences of academic training, extra-curricular participation, athletic activity, and good fellowship combine to bring out the best qualities that lie undeveloped in each individual. Fortunately we are aware that even these are not complete without genuine fun and carefree relaxation.

When we refer to "peace-time Duke" we refer to cabin parties, cars, dances, week-ends at the beach, and a gay and carefree attitude of a school that has put the thoughts of war into the past. These are the things we will remember about Duke. These are the things we know we will have for only four years. Perhaps this is why the social life in any university becomes an important part in the mind of every student.

We will take away from Duke the memories of many and sincere friendships, football games that we sat through in rain or sunshine, walks down to Sawyer and Moore's or Aubrey's, early morning cups of coffee in the Dope Shop, evenings at the Saddle Club or Hartman's—and so on through four years. This is the part that represents fun and laughter. The uneasiness is over, and the time for happiness has returned.

The climax of the Coed Ball was the crowning of Buffa Garrett as Beauty Queen. Johnny Coleman, business manager, places the crown on her head.

On Thanksgiving Eve, the Social Standards Committee presented the first of their two annual dances under the direction of Laura Schwarz as chairman of the Committee and Buffa Garrett as chairman of the ball. This fall the dance had as its theme one of a Camelia Ball. The traditional crowning of the CHANTICLEER beauty queen was the high-light of the evening.

But the dance was not so easily arranged as it would seem. Much preparation had gone on beforehand with endless cutting of streamers, ordering of flowers, and, of course, asking a date. This latter doing was an event in itself, except for those who were pinned up. For this is one of the three dances of the year when the course of events is reversed, and the co-ed asks the male animal, hoping that he does not already have a date. For days before, the question had been, "Who are you taking?" The situation was quite awkward when two girls found that they were asking the same fellow. Stag bids too, were sometimes a difficult question. On West, the fellows were undergoing something of the same uneasiness that is usually found only on East.

However all details were smoothed out, and on the afternoon before the dance, all of the Committee gathered in the gym to decorate. Soon they and their helpers from West were lost in a sea of pink streamers, palms that toppled over, and grass mats.

Anticipation ran high, because for the first time the hours of the dance were to be from nine o'clock until one in the morning. The limited capacity of the gym and the large number of Juniors and Seniors who would attend this year made it necessary to make a regulation that no underclassmen except candidates for the beauty crown would be admitted to the ball. Too, it would be the first post-war dance when all of the dates would wear formal evening clothes.

The sweet music of Sammy Fletcher and his Duke Ambassadors drew crowds of people, and by ten o'clock the gym had been transformed into an old-fashioned Camelia Ball. To the delight of the co-eds, there were plentiful stags, and the floor was crowded with a swiftly moving pattern of bright dresses, tails and tux, under a huge frothy pink canopy. Opposite the door stood the vacant throne with its question of "Who will reign?"

At last, intermission. The band left the stand for a brief rest, but no fraternity circles were formed. Instead the crowd moved back to form a closely lined aisle for the figure. Out in the lobby the Social Standards Committee figure began to form. Then the band came back in, and the soft rhythms of "Dancing in the Dark," came up in the background, as each Committee member stepped up to the door-

Familiar twosome of last year, Bob Allen and Jane Sherrill, get together again for the fall Coed Ball.

Although they both seem more interested in getting back to dancing again, vivacious Co-Messie and Rem Rogers join in the spirited singing in the K-A corner in the traditional Duke fashion.

Intermission from the music of Sam Fletcher's Duke Ambassadors is a time for cokes, for smokes, and the ever-popular singing circles, which enable fraternity men and their dates to get together.

Big smiles of Brian Carter, Charlotte Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rice, Bill Brennan, Jo Rae, Ray Mitchell, Cis Willoughby, and Johnny Baldwin offer sure proof that the dance is a big success.

way. Here, the spotlight caught each girl as she stood in an old-fashioned white dress, carrying a fan with camellias on it. The light followed her as she and her escort walked the length of the gym to take their places in the figure.

Next came the ten members of the beauty court, each with her date. As each one walked down the aisle, the crowd would try to remember who had not joined the group yet, and try to guess the name of the winner. Finally all were in place except the queen. Beside the throne stood a little boy holding a pillow on which rested a crown of camellias. Then she came into the light. Masked and wearing a long cape, she entered on the arm of Johnny Coleman, business manager of the CHANTICLEER. But the secrecy was to no avail, for some blonde curls escaped from the hood, and the crowd knew before the master of ceremonies announced it that Buffa ruled again.

Buffa Garrett from Rockingham, North Carolina, chosen from an array of twenty beauties by Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontaine was Queen for 1946-47. It was her second crown in her three years here. The crowd applauded its definite approval.

The traditional Social Standards non-break dance followed. Then the rest of the couples began to fill up the floor, and the evening continued, bright and gay, until the one o'clock curfew.

This year the tradition of having a breakfast after the dance for the Committee exclusively was extended to encompass all of the dormitories. The girls with their dates came into the parlors and were served a buffet style breakfast. Preparations in most cases had been made and carried out by the underclassmen, but they stopped long enough to ask all the questions of who wore what and who went with whom. They had learned earlier from the special edition of the Chronicle who had been crowned queen. As soon as the last date left, they made a mad rush into the parlors to finish up the food.

The traditional breakfast for the Committee was given as always in the Women's Pan-Hell house. Here they had a menu similar to the one served in the houses, consisting of scrambled eggs, coffee, sweet rolls, and a lively conversation of how well the dance had gone.

The S.A.E.'s and their attractive dates seem to have enjoyed the Coed Ball as is shown from these four pictures. Their activities included not only dancing, but also singing, and then there were some of the party who decided to take time out and relax as they caught up on the latest events and gossip of interest.

At last, there was nothing more on the schedule for the day, except to slide out of dresses, put corsages in the window, hoping they would last, and tell the room-mate the smaller details. About two or two-thirty the dorms were quiet, the fellows had their rides back West, and both campuses appreciated the idea of a quiet Thanksgiving Day in which to recuperate or to make more headway on an introduction of the night before.

This was the story of the Co-ed Ball of the fall of 1946, but it is a picture, too, of most of the dances presented at Duke. It offers a preview of what the student body hopes all dances will be like again in the next few years as pre-war traditions come back.

In the Spring, the Committee gave their second and last dance of their tenure in office before the new Committee came during April. For the first time though in several years, there was no queen to be crowned at intermission. Instead, the members executed the traditional figure.

During the war, it seemed better, more through necessity than by desire, to crown the May Queen at this Spring Ball. This was done with the idea of eliminating the elaborate ceremony and costumes which were a part of the May Day fete. This year, to everyone's delight, it seemed right to revive the tradition of having a special day set aside for the reign of the queen and her court.

In early February a list of all the senior women was given to the students of East campus. On this sheet, they voted for their choice of the Queen and for the ten members of her court. This voting is done not so much with the idea of having another beauty queen, but rather to give recognition to those graduating members of the student body who have really shown themselves to be an integral part of student life, have given service, and are well liked all over the campus.

Two girls who are queens for a year, two Co-ed Balls, two campuses—that's all a part of Duke life after classes are over.

It was agreed by all who attended that the annual Coed Ball given by Social Standards was an overwhelming success. That fact is shown by these three couples. From left to right, Ann Markum and F. P. Bethune, Fran Ellis and Charles Markham, Maggie Carter and Milt Weinberg, pause to praise the Lunt's choice.

This year, in spite of protests from west campus, the war-time system of selecting the twenty candidates for beauty queen was continued. Under this system, every co-ed names twenty girls who are, in her opinion, the most beautiful girls at Duke. These votes are counted by Student Government members and the twenty receiving the highest number of votes are automatically those from whom the queen and the members of her court are to be selected.

The CHANTICLEER staff this year selected Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt to choose the queen and her court because of the fine job they did in selecting them in the 1939 CHANTICLEER. After careful consideration, the Lunts sent their choice to the president of the Women's Student Government Association. The decision was kept a dark secret until the presentation at the Coed Ball, the night before Thanksgiving.

The Lunts, the King and Queen of the Stage.
... For years internationally acclaimed as the epitome of that spirit and sense of dramatic values which sustains the theatre in the world of arts. Many have been their triumphs and long has the European and American public sung the praise of these two, so deserving of success. Their efforts, continually characterized by a deep knowledge of their work, have been crowned by a great and abiding understanding of one another. May they continue to give to the theater the invigorating influence of their delightful personalities.

We, the Editors of the CHANTICLEER, deeply appreciate the coöperation and help we have received from Lynn Fontaine and Alfred Lunt in selecting the most beautiful girls at Duke this year.

Lovely Madge Slaughter, Kappa Alpha Theta freshman from Orlando, Florida, was elected the 1947 Sweetheart of Sigma Chi from a field of six finalists.

Early in the year each sorority nominated two members, and each dormitory nominated one girl. These nominees, plus the wives and pin-ups of Sigma Chis, participated in a series of open houses and dances at the conclusion of which the six final contenders were selected. From the group which included Lindy Stivers, Jo Huckabee, Margaret Huckabee, Lena Harris, and Jo Hendricks, Madge Slaughter emerged as the Sweetheart of Sigma Chi.

Freshmen week in Bassett House is climaxed by an open house on Saturday night. Seated perilously on the diving board, Bill Brennen dares Jo Rae to beat him in a game of gin rummy. The couples wait eagerly in front of Aycock for the moving van to come to transport them to Crabtree.

Of the many types of social functions which Duke students enjoy, none is more popular than the Cabin Party. Cabin Parties have become an established institution at Duke. They are looked forward to come spring, fall or winter. One who has not attended a Cabin Party at Duke has not made the most of his opportunities for rollicking good times.

Kappa Sig cabin party at Bailey's finds most couples sprawling before an enormous open fire, while heartier ones on steps outside watch the sunset.

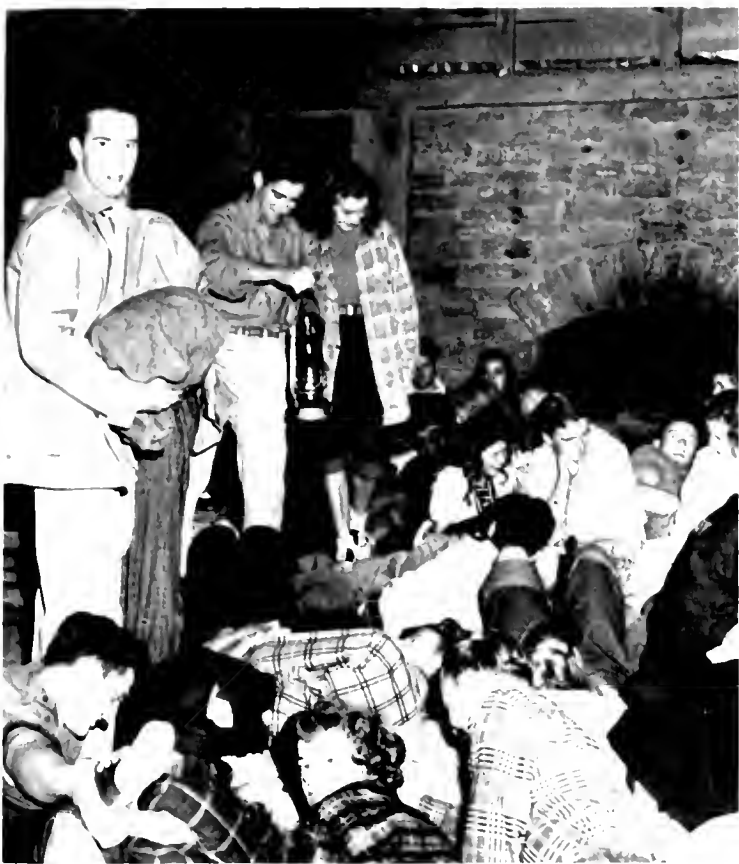

Studying finished and activities completed for the week, coeds eagerly await Saturday and Sunday afternoons, when Cabin Parties, given by fraternities, sororities, and other clubs and societies, will be in full swing to provide needed relaxation.

Early in the afternoons, Campus buses start their run from West to East, overloaded with brightly-attired males. The boys come weighted down with blankets, bats, and footballs, overcoats and baseball mitts. Rain or shine, they come; nothing stops them. They flock to the various dormitories and wait in line to have the desk-girls call their chosen dates for the afternoon.

After an interminable wait, the date descends, and, groping her way among the brightly-colored shirts and overalls, manages to find her date. She hands him her comb and lipstick, tucks her mittens, scarf, and extra sweater in his pockets, and leads him out the front door. She, too, is attired in the latest style of blue-jeans and plaid shirts. (Note: slacks are some times worn by the more sophisticated members of the University.)

Hard by, the trusty Durham moving-van driver awaits the arrival of the hordes of bright-eyed coeds and their dates, whom he will transport to the cabin in the woods. There are always those who do not arrive at the appointed hour, and thus delay the departure of the crew. The early arrivals choose prize positions in the truck and impatiently await the others.

At last the truck gets under way, fairly groaning beneath its load. The truck-driver, holding his ears with one hand and perilously rounding curves with the other, tries in vain to drown out the thundering strains of "Paddy Murphy" and "Who Put the Whiskey in the Well." He steps down on the accelerator, and the truck careens from left to right. It bumps along the dirty country roads, while students, coughing and sneezing, hide their heads in hopes of escaping the clouds of dust which issue from beneath the truck.

At last the truck is halted with a few rough jerks. Students clamber down and stretch their legs, casting derogatory glances at those few smiling characters who emerge, unwrinkled, from sedans, convertibles, and coupes.

The cabin, perhaps, is a bit dilapidated; nevertheless, coeds drag their dates inside to look it over, and find it well-supplied with running water, comfortable nooks, and a cheerful fire.

Outside, the woods are filled with couples blazing trails and following paths to the river, where they doff their shoes and socks and wade out to the large rocks, in order to sit and talk, and find relaxation, at last, after a long week of work. Some of the party spots are situated near little lakes, where rowboats provide a novel type of entertainment.

Baseball games, being excellent opportunities for males to exhibit their brawn and skill to their admirers, are always popular. The coeds who are more athletically inclined and those who cannot withstand the pressure of their coaxing dates join the game to prove that they too can wield a mean bat. Football, too, is always in vogue. The coeds do not shine as well in this game, but they earnestly attempt to win the admiration of their dates who race back and forth like all-Americans. Those coeds who cannot be drawn into the games compose the cheering section, the cheers of which often die out in place of the gossiping which must be done.

The less athletic couples often settle down to rubbers of bridge that attract many kibitzers. On stormy days these groups are found huddled on the floor around single kerosene lanterns.

At intervals, couples stroll into the woods which surround the cabin to escape from the crowd. (They are, of course, impressing each other with the multitude of facts which they have learned in Botany.)

In particularly hot weather, swimming is included in the fun. Although the water in the rivers is usually cold and somewhat muddy, there are always eager members of the group that dive and swim professing perfect comfort. Often an unsuspecting female is tossed in the "drink." Even gentlemen have been known to "slip off" the edge of the dock and be rescued by their innocent-appearing dates.

"Chicken in the rough," french fried potatoes and "hush-puppies," soon take over, since everyone has worked up a healthy appetite during the strenuous activities of the afternoon. Sometimes hot dogs are roasted over the crackling fire, and eaten with potato salad or cole slaw. Chocolate milk and cokes are rapidly consumed by the case.

Saturday cabin parties get under way. Kappa Sigs and dates listen to the vic before the fire at Bailey's, while Pi Phi's get busy hustling up the food at Crabtree under the auspices of the Phi Delt's. At the K. A. cabin party at Bailey's, couples gather to talk, as those upstairs, hanging perilously from the balcony, sing.

Cabin parties provide the main social life on weekends. In blue jeans, loud shirts, students play football, dance, eat hot dogs, sing by the fire. Sigma Chi party shows prevailing informality even to the noticeable shift of couples from tables to blanket-covered floor as night approaches, and the air grows chilly.

After dinner a cozy group assembles around the fire to sing. Fraternity songs are popular, and old standbys like "In the Evening by the Moonlight" and "You are My Sunshine" always appear sometime during the course of the evening. (For those who are not acquainted with the songs, an open mouth and an expression of I-know-what's-going-on serves the purpose just as well.)

Programs are usually arranged, and jokes, solos, and imitations precede the common rendering of "Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Sheane," the words of which deviate somewhat from the original.

Slowly, as the fire fades to embers, the cabin grows more quiet. The lively group dwindles down to a paltry few blind dates and platonic friends, who are left to play bridge with the chaperones, to dance to the vic which was brought along for the occasion, or to discuss in groups all subjects from the weather to the future of mankind. The other men are content to devote themselves to their dates' feminine charms.

It is with great misgivings that couples hear the shout that tells them it is time to leave—to boys being particularly bitter that the girls on East must return home at such an early hour. They climb into the truck, resume their singing with voices now hoarse, and return to Duke, exhausted after their day of relaxation.

S. A. E.'s desert their women for a day to throw a strictly stag party. Heartily in favor are Herman Smith, Dick Barrett, Pinky, and Doug Baxter. In another scene the brothers gather round to listen attentively to a bedtime story, which next to quenching their thirst, is featured entertainment of P. J. parties at Duke.

At the SAE rush party hosts wearing name-tags gather round beaming rushee to watch and applaud the entertainment provided by the actives.

Among the many things always in the mind of the fraternity man at Duke is the one thing that is never out of mind. Girls, studies, social functions all come and go in his maze of thought, but always present is the problem of rushing—rushing, the key to the fraternity's future. A successful rush week can make a fraternity, an unsuccessful week can break it.

Throughout the semester, a fraternity man will be constantly on the lookout for desirable freshmen. He will point them out to his brothers and discuss their potentialities in dormitory bull sessions. This flurry of interest in the new men reaches its climax during rush week. At this time, usually a few weeks after the second semester of a school year has begun, the fraternity man may speak to the freshman. After rush week is over and the freshmen have pledged fraternities, one would assume that the fraternity man could relax, but does he? Definitely not! He starts the whole procedure over again. A smaller group of freshmen and transfers are pledged in the fall of the year. But the interest never dies, even after the nervous tension of rush week is over.

In the fall Greeks on West are hosts at open houses held in their chapter rooms. The parties help fraternity men to get acquainted with newcomers at Duke and to rush prospective pledges. Typical scene shows beaming Sigma Nu's around the punchbowl. Betas merely listen attentively to an interesting story.

Freshmen and transfers are invited to first sorority rush parties. Joanne Pressing has no trouble conversing with eight ADP's at the Juke Box party.

Rushing! Freshman girls tingled with excitement in anticipation of the four-week period of informal sorority rushing which awaited them on their arrival at Duke this fall. Upperclassmen, members of the thirteen national sororities represented on the Duke campus, contended keenly for the favor of their favorite Freshmen, who watched the she-Greeks' eager rivalries with somewhat apprehensive eyes.

While homework suffered and grades fell lower, Freshmen toured the campuses on bikes. They visited tobacco factories and went to auctions. They saw all of the latest movies, and made their first visits to Chapel Hill and "Danziger's."

Pan-Hel supplied the Frosh with booklets containing data on the various sororities.

Kappa rush party recalls Arabian nights with sultan Marge Frey and harem, Dee Gentner, Ann LeCompte, Martha McKennon, and Joan Wharton.

At last came the parties! Freshmen eagerly awaited invitations that took them to rodeos and fashion shows; to saloons and circuses. They sipped mint-juleps on a Southern plantation; ate fruit on a South Sea Island; and smoked king-size cigarettes in a Moslem Harem. Apprehension and anxiety increased.

Then the parties were over, and Rushing drew to close. Freshmen and sorority girls alike held their breath and handed in their preferentials.

Rush parties give sorority girls chance to reveal hidden talents, originality in concocting home-made costumes, writing skits, acting in them. One was not surprised at anything the lowly freshmen were made to do on Goon Day as this picture of Goon Lave Taylor perched on the famous statue of Washington Duke proves. The crowning of the new queen of the Goons, Scottie Taylor, by the old queen from last year Sugar Riley, climaxed the dreaded day.

On Goon Day the freshmen spent most of their time on their knees before the sophomores as this picture which shows the Goons crawling obediently across the main quadrangle definitely illustrates.

The traditional hazing on East campus came to a climax on Goon Day, as lowly Frosh bowed down in humble praise of mighty and wise Sophomores. Paled and pig-tailed, they stooped in reverence to repeat:

"Oh, contemplate the plaintive plight of this poor, piddling plebe who palpitatingly and procrastinatingly ponders upon penetrating these palatial portals and becoming a pure Duke personality." With this chant ringing in their ears, they worked and hard, too for their fifteen pigtails, symbols of their lowly state.

The afternoon found Freshmen in upside-down skirts atop Wash Duke statue, and shouting Co-eds playing "Ring Around the Rosy" on the lawn. Boys from West bent on laughing at the girls were too often laughed at when they were proposed to after capture.

At night, disobedient and disrespectful plebes were summoned to appear before the court of judges who meted out punishment according to the offense. Goon Day Queen, Scotty Taylor, was soon selected, crowned and hailed as the lowest of the Freshmen.

One of the many peculiar antics that the freshmen had to perform on Goon Day was running around the quadrangle in this most uncomfortable and awkward position. Freshmen were ordered numerous times during the day to "sound off," which included singing a song of praise to sophomores, as these Goons are doing.

The Goons who had not acted as they were supposed to were punished by having to dance and sing at Rat Court for the entertainment of their sophomore masters and the large curious audience

Then they staggered, limped, or hobbled homeward, ears ringing from the derisive laughter of the Rat Court audience, planning similar miseries to be heaped on hapless Frosh in years to come.

After a week of hard work in classes, Duke students find relaxation and enjoyment in the Sings presented each Sunday night in the Women's Auditorium.

This year, Duke Sings got under way under the direction of Mr. Allan Bone, director of the Duke University Band.

The Sophomore "Y" Cabinet on West and the Sophomore Class of the Women's College joined forces, and under the leadership of Nora Cleaver and Bob Eirich, presented "A Day at College," a hilarious

Homecoming decorations this year were extremely clever as each group of men tried to surpass the rest and make their display the best and not vindictive one. Friday dawned a beautiful, sunny day, but Durham skies grew gray on Saturday, and the all-too-frequent rain destroyed the colorful arrays.

November first saw the arrival of hundreds of guests and alumni for the homecoming celebration. Previous to their arrival, students on East and West campuses went all out to decorate their dormitories and fraternity sections. DDT was sprayed on cardboard effigies of the Georgia Tech team, and mock graveyards of the Tech team members adorned the quadrangles. First prizes for the best decorations went to Alspaugh House, and Sigma Chi fraternity.

on East and West, there were sponsors for the two teams. The Blue Devils were sponsored by Bulla Garrett, Betsy John Hurley, and Mary Ann Duncan.

The game was played in a downpour of rain, and though Georgia Tech triumphed over the Blue Devils dampened spirits were revived after the game at the many open-houses for Greeks and their dates, which were given to welcome back old Duke alums. It was a grand feeling to be once again in the fraternity sections. Friends, parted for years, met again, and after quick juggling of memories, put names and faces together, and were soon off on the "good old days" when they were under-graduates at Duke.

The week-end activities were climaxed by a dance that evening in the Women's Gymnasium, given by the Varsity Club of Duke. The alumni left with fond memories, and awaited next homecoming.

When Duke Stadium was completed in 1929, it had the largest seating capacity of any stadium in the South. On January 1, 1942, the Rose Bowl game was transplanted to Duke Stadium, the first time the game was ever played anywhere except in Pasadena. Approximately 50,000 people witnessed the spectacle.

Overheated from the sun, then soaked by rain, and finally beaten by an underrated State team, Duke supporters storm the field and head for home.

But there was good games away from home, and the cheering section followed — from the Polo Grounds to South Carolina, with stops at Annapolis, Raleigh,

First of all the campus-wide formals was BOS-Sandals Dance. Zetas and their dates meet Brinn and Swindell, Bruce and Jim, Eleanor and Tiny, Jean and Linberger. Highlight of the formal dance was the tapping of new members to BOS, sophomore honorary on West; honorees are modestly surprised and pleased.

The social season was officially opened with a formal affair, sponsored by BOS and Sandals. Sammy Fletcher and his Duke Ambassadors set the beat. It was one of the first times that the old band had been revived for several years, and they gave forth with music that proved their revival was a fine thing for campus life. But the members of the band were not the only returnees. It was the first dance for many of the veterans, and it was good to see the floor so filled with the old boys in the stag line. During intermission, the new members of BOS were tapped.

vistors and graduates. In the afternoon, we played Georgia Tech in the midst of a rainstorm. We had the spirit and the team, but somehow we lost. Spirits were soon revived that evening in the atmosphere provided by a semi-formal affair in the Woman's gym, sponsored by the Varsity "D" club. That it was a popular dance was proved by the sell-out of tickets in thirty-four minutes.

The Engineer's Ball drew a capacity crowd, with all the people honoring the January graduates of the School. Again Sammy Fletcher was on hand with his vocalists, lovely Sally Waddell and handsome Clarence Smith. At intermission, a hooded figure came forward to pin the names of several outstanding students on the key of DES, the highest engineering honorary. After this ceremony, the new members of the Order of St. Patrick were called.

A "Flue-cures Frolic" under the auspices of the YMCA was on the schedule too. Here Jack Fieldson and his band, who had played for so many dances last year, was on hand. They were offering a good brand of music. The whole affair was very informal, in keeping with the tobacco-warehouse motif. Skirts and sweaters were the attire of the evening.

Thanksgiving Eve brought the annual Fall Co-ed Ball, this year carrying out a Camellia theme. At intermission, Buffa Garrett was crowned the Chanti-

On Thanksgiving afternoon, as a consolation prize for themselves, the Freshmen and Sophomore classes sponsored a "Baby Bowl." The tea dance was quite well attended. It seems odd that there are not more of this variety of afternoon dances.

During January, thoughts were directed to the fine art of cramming a semester's study into a few weeks. But the Navy came through to round out the semester's social season. With uniforms predominating, it was natural to carry out the blue and gold motif. During intermission Sammy entertains on the drums.

FRATERNITY AND SORORITY LIFE

Fraternity and sorority life plays an important part in activities at Duke. The year started off for the girls on East with the introduction of the four-weeks rushing plan, which seemed to be more successful than the old one. Harem costumes and grass skirts were removed from moth balls, and the worn-out phrase, "Oh! Do you know. . .?" was repeated all over campus. At last it was over, the bids were issued, and all settled down to a normal life, assured that the hard work was well worth it.

In December, the Men's Pan-Hel sponsored a dance held in the West campus gymnasium with music by Hal McIntyre and his orchestra. The decorations consisted of gay colored streamers and the fraternity emblems. During intermissions, according to an old Duke custom, each group of "brothers" assembles with their dates in the well-known "circle" and attempts to out-sing the others. The result is a loud conglomeration of the "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" at "The Bar Where the Kappa Alpha's Are."

Another old fraternity tradition is the serenading of the pin-up. The members of the fraternity gather outside the window while the honored co-ed listens, her face framed by the window, lighted with a candle, and here sorority sisters answer the boys. The number of pin-ups appeared to be on a mass production scale this year, so the boys had many opportunities to exercise their vocal chords.

There is a great deal of inter-fraternity competition during the year. First semester was highlighted by the wheelbarrow race, sponsored by the YMCA, in which a relay is held. Each group strives to be the first to reach East campus, their wheelbarrows laden with the lightest coed available, while the crowds cheer them on. The Sigma Chi's emerged victorious in the end after a great deal of excitement. Intramural sports were held, and many of the fraternities sponsored Sunday night "Sings." Decorations for Homecoming are another source of competition. This year the Yellow-jackets of Georgia Tech were displayed with the Blue Devils standing invincible against their sting.

There was, as usual, a continuous succession of fraternity social functions during the year. Cabin parties, formals and dinner dances were held. After many of the football games boys and their dates assembled in the fraternity sections for "Open Houses."

The annual sigma Chi "Sweetheart Dance" was presented again this year, and the members chose Madge Slaughter as the "girl of their dreams." The Pika's also presented their annual "Dream Girl Dance" in the spring.

The social program for the Women's Pan-Hellenic Association was highlighted by the Pan-Hel. dance with Elliot Lawrence and a "Sing." In the "Sing" each sorority sang one song, and a cup was awarded to the Phi Mu's chosen best by the judges.

The Sigma Chi dinner dance, held in the Washington Duke, climaxes a series of social functions given to choose one coed to hold the coveted title, "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi." The highlight of the program dance is the presentation of Madge Slaughter, Theta freshman, as the new sweetheart of the fraternity.

While many girls crowd into the room of a fraternity sweetheart who is being serenaded, others prefer to stand outside on the outskirts of the fraternity group to hear the singing. These serenades are frequently followed by a reception in the dorm or Pam-Hel House to which friends of the boy and the girl are invited.

ments and scholastic competition. Every year a scholarship cup is awarded the sorority with the highest scholastic average—this cup is a prize coveted by all. The AEPhi's were the proud winners this year.

After exams when the struggle for the "C" averages was over, the lucky ones who achieved it brought forth their white evening dresses and were presented at their pledge dances. Something new in the way of pledge dances was introduced this year with a Triad dance sponsored by the Pi Phi's, Kappa's and Theta's. Initiations followed with the new "sisters" proudly displaying their new jewelry, and the others more determined than ever to make their average and join the ranks next semester. On West the system is a little different, since a boy is not eligible for rushing until he has made a C average. A series of "open houses" were held in the fraternity sections at the

A big moment in the life of every Duke coed comes when she receives a fraternity pin. Then, as is the custom, all the brothers come to serenade her, and her friends respond with a few songs of their own. Even though there are no sorority or fraternity houses here at Duke, the Pan-Hel and Mordecai Houses on East and the sections on West serve as a meeting place for the members. The houses on East are open for dating almost every night. There are two kitchens on each floor, so many of the girls prove their domestic talents by cooking dinners for some unsuspecting male, who tactfully exclaims over the wonderful meal, and proceeds to gulp down his bicarbonate.

The end of the war saw the return of fraternity sections to Duke campus, and the return of the high standard of fraternity and sorority social life in the program of the university. Both the Men's and Women's Pan-Hellenic Associations strove for and achieved greater things for the groups they represent.

The dances were bigger and better than ever before as was noted at the Triad Dance weekend given by the Betas, Phi Deltis, and Sigma Chi's in late spring, and the lavish Kappa Alpha dinner dance given in the union on west in March. Open-houses were given throughout the year. The cabin parties lived up to their pre-war predecessors, and the ideal of the fraternity was more strongly impressed on the minds of those who follow it.

Pin-ups and serenades have been quite frequent around campus this year. Here Jim Miller and his brother K. A.'s are doing the honors for charming Bess Williams. From all reports it seems that they did a grand job.

TIME

It's Campustime with Sammy Fletcher's Duke Ambassadors broadcasting over WDNC from the stage of Page Auditorium before a crowd of applauding students. Al Robinson acts as master of ceremonies, and a popular trio from East composed of B. J. Colbreth, Sally Waddell, and Presh Devine provide the songs.

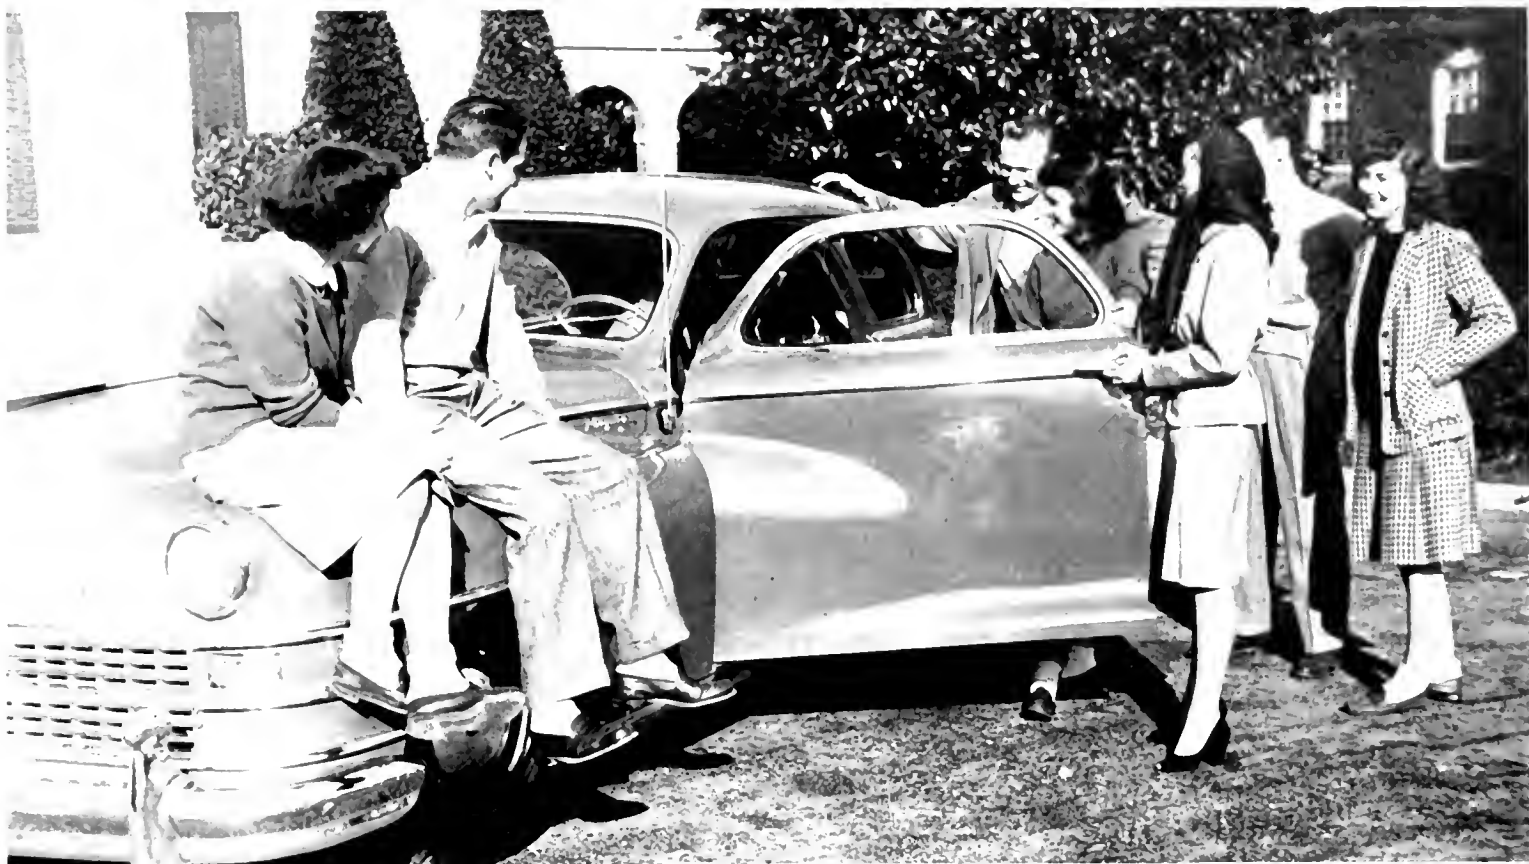

Between East and West campus winds a road, crowded with a stream of cars. Sooner or later, every student either pays "Skip" a nickel or catches a ride between the two. But there's another road, too—a kind of invisible one over which travel telephone calls and pins and such. But however it's done, the two get together.

Spring Ines fair damsels who have hibernated during mid-winter finals as Libby Shanley, Dee Gentner, and Betty Bayliss stroll around chapel.

Hostilities cease as Anti-East leaders, Roy Marcher and Moe Jenkins, melt under charms of Laura Schwartz, Betty Bayliss, and Sally Brown.

Notable addition to campus life is the number of cars which flood parking lots on West. Goeds flock to admire Lou Bello's new Chrysler. Molly Goldland (supported by Hank), Marge Coldwell, and Pat Way. Perched on the hood, Sally Bowmall and Bill Snitger prove Lou's car is sturdy as well as decorative.

For awhile, though, last fall, there was a definite threat of practicing an isolation policy. The fellows said the girls were too snooty, and the girls said the boys expected too much. Soon an Anti-East club was formed. Things got worse and worse, but wiser minds took up the problem, and a truce was signed. Soon once more, pins went back and forth and the phone rang.

Just before Christmas, the Social Standards Committee brought out a calendar for the new year. Filled with pictures taken by Walt Skackelford, the book offered views of all the spots on campus. Many students found them useful Christmas gifts for friends and relatives who had never seen the campus. Others used them for date books. But for whatever use they were put to, they were a fine piece of work.

All this and a Social Standards Calendar, too! Bryan Carter can't say no to D'Arlene Brink's salesmanship.

For Sunday afternoons students frequently arrange private picnics to end before dusk. Mary Ann Duncan, Peg Smith, Polly Weedon, Pat Waller, and Gloria Koltunsky entertain their dates.

Weather permitting, students relax on quadrangle before the Union for an after-dinner cigarette amid the discussions of crip courses, stiff profs, and sex.

The marriage of "Bubber" and Til in the Chapel in September was almost a campus affair. Bob DeMott and others followed their lead during the year. For others, there were fraternity pins, with maltese crosses, diamonds, swords and shields in every dorm.

What picture of campus life would be complete without the "Chiefs"? They wander over the grounds, usually seeing little wrong, or sit on the steps talking. Sometimes they answer a false alarm like the one in Southgate last winter. But they're a safeguard and they're appreciated.

Awakened by alarm clocks, Union coffee, and after-breakfast cigarette, coeds catch up on last minute gossip as they pass the library on the way to class.

Familiar figures are our chiefs, who patrol both campuses day and night. For twenty-five years Duke has maintained its own protective police force.

There were gripes about the food and praise for a good meal—gripes about losing a game, cheers for winning—groans for a quiz and smiles for a cut.

There were hours spent burning the midnight oil before exams and groans, sighs of relief or unconcerned shrugs of shoulders after them. There were wet feet, late busses, flying snowball, and voluptuous figures sculptured in snow during our single cherished (by some) snow this winter.

The last minute dashes for the houses on East before the doors were locked at night will be remembered with mixed emotions. Many a serenade, was given, at all hours of the night until the Administration made regulations governing them. Then they became social affairs with sorority open houses afterward. But then it's all a part of life at Duke, a life that will be remembered fondly in later years.

Pretty upperclass coeds, from Pegram are forced to take a back seat as they watch boys flock to open houses for freshmen during the first school week.

The center of activity on West campus is the chapel steps. There boys gather among friends between class to grab a quick smoke together or to discuss latest campus affairs. Naturally the scene isn't complete without an East campus coed present to join in. Winter forces the crowd to migrate to the Dope Shop.

At noon, the campus is alive with smoking and discussing the news as they meet together on the Chapel steps between classes. At night, the campus is deserted except for two boys in the distance. Then peacefulness and tranquility of twilight settles over the campus.

evening, it is open for dating at all times and is maintained by the Sandals. Downstairs there are ping pong tables. This year the bowling alley was reopened, to the delight of everyone. Games are inexpensive and the alleys are in good condition. The Ark is also used for Hoof and Horn rehearsals and club meetings. Frequently entertainment in the form of a night club show is given on Sunday nights.

In the fall, and again in the spring, every house on East gives a dance in the Ark. They are informal, popular with both coeds and men. The Gales house dance typifies the friendly atmosphere that prevails when the ice is broken by introductions of hostesses and overwhelming cooperation of a large stag-line.

Clad comfortably in faded blue dungarees, Marilyn McClure ably models what the well-dressed Duke coed wears when she is studying for her exams.

One may find, in dormitory life at Duke University, a pleasant, peaceful "Home Away from Home" (if, of course, he overlooks such inconveniences as carpetless floors, sagging beds, blaring microphones, and showers which never work). For, on the whole, dormitory life at Duke presents an excellent example of a healthy environment pervaded with an atmosphere conducive to study and the perusal of the finer things in life.

Within those Georgian edifices which grace East Campus, one finds the happy coed living a life of ease and leisure. She awakens to the harmonic strains of the train whistle in the distance, blended with the clanging of the alarm clock on her dresser, or a cold glass of water in her face, administered by the ever-loving, ever-helpful roommate. Bright-eyed and radiant after a long night of restful, undisturbed sleep, she rises to greet the new dawn with a smile and a cheerful word for all she meets. Sailing into the Union, she downs a delicious breakfast of half an orange and no roll (to insure a tiny waist for that coming dance.) Then back to her room to gather up her paraphernalia for the day, and she meanders slowly to class, carrying with her all the necessary equipment for the absorbing of much knowledge—a package of cigarettes, a comb, her knitting, a bulging wallet, a fashion magazine, and perhaps a small notebook, in case any important bits of information may come up in class.

In the evening, her hopes of studying are extinguished, in spite of the "Busy" sign which she has posted on her door. For she hears her name being called over the microphone, and takes her coat downstairs with her, knowing in her heart that she will never be able to resist that invitation to the movies.

And so, after a long day, we find her, zinc oxide on her face, her favorite teddy bear in her hand, leaving the little circle of chatter in the hall, to climb into bed, and fall asleep to the rowdy tunes of the serenaders returning to the other campus on their way home from "Red's."

So, also, do we find the Duke gentlemen enjoying the peaceful atmosphere which pervades that Gothic residence.

At some time during the middle of the night, he finally shoves the last of his raucous buddies out the door, and falls into bed.

Dorm life is one of the fondest memories of a Duke girl—midnight snacks, bridge games, lengthy confabs, and hectic house meetings. Often recalled are parties after ten-thirty, when even Bassett beauties appear in pajamas, cold cream, curlers and calamine lotion to share the punch, cookies and unrehearsed fun.

The Chapel dominates the University both structurally and spiritually. Every year the senior class observes an old tradition in the tree-planting ceremony. Joe DiMona and Lib Stutts, presidents of the class, wield the shovels, while Dean Baldwin, President Flowers, and Dean Wannamaker look on as the ground is broken and the young tree planted to add to the beauty of the girls' campus.

The Senior class of 1947 is probably the largest in the history of the University. With a variety of experiences behind them, they led the way to the new and took part in the old traditions.

On University Day, many participated in the traditional tree-planting, assisting Joe DiMona and Libby Stutts in setting out trees along the inter-campus drive.

Outstanding seniors are recognized by initiation into the honoraries. Omicron Delta Kappa, a national organization, honors men who have proven themselves outstanding in leadership and scholarship. Three years ago, ODK members founded Phi Kappa Delta, a sister honorary for the girls. They

Although the senior class members are usually busy with their various activities, they still have time for activities such as class projects and senior dances.

When the class of '47 graduated on June 2, they took many memories with them, and left behind a record hard to equal.

Bishop and Mrs. J. F. Barnes seem quite pleased as they listen to the rebroadcast of the choir.

It is apparent that the party given by Bishop Barnes in his home for the choir was an overwhelming success and enjoyed by all. The game being played by this happy group certainly does look like a lot of fun.

Thrilled at the prospect of hearing the renowned choir broadcast over a national hookup, again the coeds flock to the Chapel to hear Christmas music.

No less awe-inspiring than the beautiful Chapel which guards the Duke campus is the University Choir. This year, the Choir has been outstanding in its achievement.

Following the invitation of Radio Station WPTF in Raleigh, the Duke University Chapel Choir, under the able direction of J. Foster Barnes, presented three programs from the University Chapel. Recordings were made of the beautiful renditions by the Choir. These records were then submitted to the National Broadcasting Company headquarters for consideration as a weekly program over the network.

After the three local broadcasts over WPTF, the Choir, after long preparation, presented a spectacular program of Christmas Music, which was broadcast from coast to coast, over the National Broadcasting Company network. The program was based on the "Shepherd's Story." One hundred and seventy-five voices blended exquisitely in the strains of "Silent Night," "Star of Courage," and "Away in a Manger." The program was concluded with the inspiring rendition of the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's "Messiah."

In previous years the choir has made similar broadcasts. Well-known singers have come to sing over the Chesterfield Hour with the Choir.

The choir goes on the air for fifteen minutes of Christmas music including "Halleluia Chorus," "Away in a Manger," and "The Lord Bless You and Keep You." Students crowd chapel to listen.

Taking the evening off to celebrate at the Saddle Club are nurses from Duke and their dates. The Club, the newest night spot in Durham, is patronized almost exclusively by Duke students.

Duke Hospital, located northeast of the center of West campus serves students as well as thousands of patients in this sector every year. Beside the hospital is the old Nurses' Home; the new nurses' dorm is located one block west of the hospital.

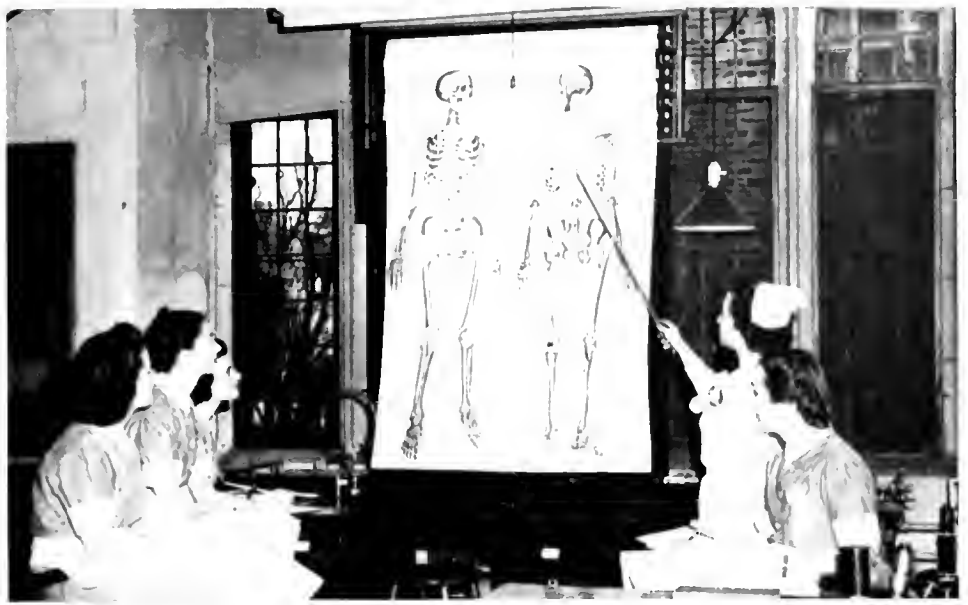

For many years nurses have been known as "Angels of Mercy," standing by and ready to serve wherever they were needed, whether in clean hospitals of large capacities, in rural communities, in emergency areas, or in war. Many veterans here on campus have seen them in action just a few months or years ago.

But all too often the glamour and appeal of being an angel in white and soothing tired brows is the picture that comes to mind when the name "nurse" is mentioned. Many girls contemplating this career are carried away by the aurora cast around a shiny white hospital. They do not realize the work and study required of a student in training. Nor do they seem to understand the deep satisfaction and pride there is in this profession.

Here at Duke we have one of the best nursing schools. While it is an integral part of the educational scheme, it is in reality a separate division, with its own administration, Student Government, and class officers. There are several hundred students in the School. They are divided into classes, the Pre-Clinical students being comparable to the Freshmen class on East; Freshmen comparable to Sophomores; and Junior (seniors) and Seniors (graduating seniors) equivalent to upperclassmen.

For the first three months of their training, as Pre-clinical students, they serve a probation period. During this time they attend classes and go on the ward about six hours a week. Here they do elementary but important jobs such as making beds and giving baths, and helping with the trays. They usually come on duty in the latter part of the afternoon. As the months progress, so do the hours on the ward.

At the end of the first six months, if they have successfully passed the trial period, they are capped. This to a nurse is one of the greatest thrills she will ever experience in her career. She knows that she has taken a long step forward, and that she may someday wear a black band on her cap, a symbol that she is a graduate nurse.

Standing before the front doorway of the nurses' home, Davis and beauty queen Ruby Pike are shown as they leave with plans for the big evening.

But there is still a long road ahead. By the end of this first six months, one third of all the classwork is behind, and she goes on the ward for forty-eight hours a week, with classes in addition. From now on each class lasts three months, with practical application on the wards during that same time. She has to complete satisfactorily three months of surgery, of medicine, obstetrics, and pediatrics; two months of operating room duty; and one month each of clinical work, dietetics, senior routine, and psychiatry. All of this study and practice is behind her before she is graduated.

But this is not the end. Sometime at the end of her last year, she takes the very comprehensive examinations offered by the State Board. If she passes these successfully, she is then a registered nurse in the state.

But the nurse's life is by no means all study and nursing. She leads as full a social life as any one could who has such a schedule. When she is on duty, she is given certain free hours each day. Then too, there are completely free days. In the warmer months, there are cabin parties, picnics, and sunbathing. In the winter, dances and parties in the dormitories provide relaxation. The girls are given free use of the gymnasium, too.

And of course, they meet interns and med students in all of their duties, so the nursing school is a strong element at the famed "Med school dances." As to the hours that govern this playtime, everyone must be in at eight o'clock for the first six months. After this time, they must be in at eleven on Friday and Saturday nights, and ten o'clock during the week.

The first peacetime NROTC program at Duke was off to a fine start this year with enrollment exceeding one hundred and eighty men—thirty-eight of whom were freshmen getting their initial contact with Navy life. The others were men with previous NROTC training or V-12 experience.

Routine was quite different from that experienced in the war days. Essentially, the future admirals were civilians all but two days of the week when uniforms were taken from the closets and rigged for drill. The only contact with the Navy was in Gunnery, Navigation, and other Naval Science classes, or up on the "grinder." And, of course, there were trips to the executive officer to fill out the ever-present forms, there were the chats with the skipper and the frequent stop-offs at the Navy bulletin board to read the latest information on NROTC activities.

Navy men were active in all phases of campus life. The Duke Middies turned in fine showings on the field of sport; Navy intramural basketball, football, and softball teams were highly regarded in league play, the NROTC rifle team competed against the nation's top college shooters and completed their season with an enviable national ranking. Almost every men's student government organization on the campus had several Navy men on its roster. Some were composed entirely of NROTC students. The Naval Ball, sponsored annually by the Unit, was a memorable social highlight of the year. A Navy Queen was crowned at the Ball in traditional crossed-swords Naval fashion.

The Battalion had representatives from practically every fraternity at Duke, all sections of the country, and was perhaps the most cosmopolitan group of men on the campus. The high caliber of these men is shown by the scholastic achievements and general leadership which they recorded at Duke.

The Unit had its own social organization in the Commodore's Club. The annual ball was sponsored by this group whose design has been to bring about closer ties and fellowship among the Navy men. A reading and recreation room was provided by the club as a place for discussions and additional study on Naval literature.

The Naval Armory on the campus was equipped with many of the latest training devices and it was here that the Middies received much of their instruction on heavy guns and Naval installations. A rifle range was also located in the armory affording each man the opportunity of becoming a skilled marksman.

Sports

On the playing fields, once again in clean and innocent competition, Duke's men of athletics were glad to be engaged in healthful and carefree endeavour. . . .

WITH THE departure of the clouds of war from the skies of the world, a new sun, the postwar sports boom, shone forth around the earth. The college campuses of this nation were perhaps the sites most affected.

During the five preceding war years, the Duke campus was more or less in a state of chaos as far as the athletic program was concerned. The periodic arrival and departure of Navy personnel and the consistent drain on civilian manpower imposed by the armed forces kept the coaches pretty much in doubt as to who would compose their teams when the next game rolled around.

During this period, the importance of athletics as a body and character builder was emphasized at the expense of the theory that the athlete should "do or die for the old Alma Mater." In strict observance of the fact that athletics was the principal means of effecting a stronger nation, the physical education program was extended to better prepare each man and woman physically to meet either a world of war or a world of peace.

The year 1946-47, however, brought the advent of a new era—the postwar era. The program of development, which had undergone a vast expansion during the war, was retained almost in its entirety. The intramural program was also maintained at the same high standards which it had attained during the war.

The intercollegiate sports assumed a new brilliance never before realized in the realm of college athletics. A return of star players, including those developed both before and during the world conflict, served to fan the fires of speculation and increase the interest in sports to heights heretofore unknown. As the student interest rose, it took with it the interest of the alumni and that of the countless thousands of other supporters of the University. Larger crowds jammed the various arenas of Duke sport to see the Devils further the tradition of Blue and White athletics.

Now, as in the past—both war and pre-war—the University Department of Athletics is doing its utmost to instill into the hearts and minds of all who attended this school the noble qualities which have made Duke University the great institution that it is.

For four years the sports world had eagerly awaited the season when football would cast aside its wartime cloak and return to a game of polished skill and power, and this was the season—September 1946. Gone would be the teams of green freshman and service players constantly being transferred in mid-season. In their place would be men of prewar recognition and those who had showed great promise on the gridirons throughout the country while playing with various service teams.

Discharged from the service and returning to football would be such well known coaches as Bob Neyland of Tennessee, Paul Bryant of Kentucky, Jim Tatum of Oklahoma, Tom Hamilton back at Navy, and here on the campus of the Blue and White would be the Old Master, Coach Wallace Wade. It was evident that no team would have an easy schedule and that probably no major team would go through the season with a perfect record.

In returning to Duke, Coach Wade would be starting his 24th year of coaching, a period that consisted of 177 victories and only 36 defeats. At Duke he had compiled 85 of these victories while suffering only 19 set backs. His last full season had ended with a perfect record and the East's choice as representative in the transplanted Rose Bowl here at Duke against a powerful Oregon State eleven.

To work with would be such material as All-Americans Bob Gantt, George Clark and Bill Milner. Other stars to be on hand would be Howard Hartley, Buddy Luper, Leo Long and Buddy Muligan in the back-field and Kelly Mote, Ed Austin, Al DeRogatis, Bear Knotts and Bill Davis in the line. It looked as if Duke would be loaded, but could those players who had been out of action so long be counted on to play their same prewar brand of football?

From the first upset of the year when little Cincinnati bowled over Indiana it was apparent that it would be a season of many upsets and surprises. And Duke had before it what was rated as the toughest of College football schedules.

First row, left to right: Wall; Bethune; Knotts, G.; Knotts, L.; Wolfe; Luper; Mulligan; Hayden; Hodges; Folger; Groomer; Davis, B.; Clark; Inman; Montgomery; Redding; Hardison. Second row: Chambers; Perkinson; Long; Cittadino; Davis, C.; Smith, H.; Milner; Mote; Gantt; Hartley; Strauss; Austin; DeRogatis; Muse; Mullins; O'Leary; Sinkovitz; Reese; Karmazin. Third row: Mgr. Wallace Wade, head football coach at Duke University, resumed his coaching career at Duke this fall after four years service in his second world war. For outstanding service in the army he received the Bronze Star Medal and the Croix de Guerre. He also holds the European Theatre Campaign Ribbon with four battle stars, the American Theatre Ribbon and the World War I and World War II Victory Medals.

His first coaching position was the Fitzgerald and Clark preparatory school. In 1921, he moved to Vanderbilt and in 1923, Alabama claimed him as head coach. His excellent record was climaxed by victory at the Rose Bowl fifteen days before he reported at Duke, 1931. In the eleven seasons he has directed football activity at Duke, his teams have won the Southern Conference title six times.

After twenty-one years as a member of the Duke coaching staff, Eddie Cameron is now serving as Director of Athletics as well as backfield coach of the Blue Devils. At Washington and Lee University, he was one of the greatest all-time, all-round athletes ever produced at that institution. He is former head basketball coach and won Southern Conference titles three times.

When the starting whistle blew in Riddick Stadium Duke immediately took command of the field. Under a torrent of rain the Blue Devils capitalized on a fumble by State's hard-hitting Leslie Palmer. Taking the ball on the Wolfpack's ten yard stripe George Clark raced around end behind perfect blocking to score for Duke. Gantt's try for the extra point was wide and the Blue Devils led 6-0 until the half.

Returning at the end of the half the angered Wolfpack unleashed an attack which the Blue Devils were unable to stop. It was State all the way. Sparked by two elusive backs, Charlie Richkus and Howard Turner, the Wolfpack moved to Duke's 10 where a short pass tied the score at 6-6.

The State eleven opened up with an aerial barrage which ended in the closing seconds of the game with a desperate touchdown jaunt by Richkus to paydirt. The extra point was made good from placement and Duke bowed to the victorious underdogs who emerged with a 13-6 triumph.

On September 23, Coach Beattie Leathers and his State Wolfpack played host to the defending Southern Conference champions from Durham. Tailback George Clark endeavors to pick up yardage around the Wolfpack flank, in the Blue Devils' first game of the season.

Before 42,000 fans, Tennessee half-back Walter Slater returns a punt for considerable yardage in one of the season's most thrilling battles. Duke finally bowed to the Volunteers as they were defeated for the second time in the second game of the year, and first home game.

In the middle of the first quarter, Duke's Buddy Luper, passing from his own 35, connected with Howard Hartley all the way to the Tennessee 20. Fleet-footed Hartley easily outran the Vol secondary to score. Bob Gantt's conversion was good.

Not to be outdone, Tennessee scored on the first play of the second quarter via a short pass from the eight to the two, Walt Slater to wingback Hillman, who went over standing. The conversion attempt was blocked by tackle Moon Mullins.

In the third quarter, the Vols again drove deep into Devil territory. Stymied on the ground, Slater passed on third down to center Huddleston in the end zone. The ball bounded from Huddleston's hands into the waiting arms of end Hubble, making the pass illegal; but the field judge, apparently oblivious of that fact, called it a touchdown. Again the conversion attempt was blocked, and Duke could do nothing to change the score.

Smarting from two straight set backs the Devils' made their first triumph of the season, and the first Duke victory over Navy after three consecutive defeats during the war years.

After three minutes of play, George Clark made a brilliant 55 yard punt return to paydirt and Bob Gantt converted. On the next series of downs, Middie Hawkins swept from his own 27 to the Devil 13, where Howard Hartley brought him down from behind. Pete Williams then scored from the eight, but Bill Davis and Bear Knotts blocked the conversion attempt.

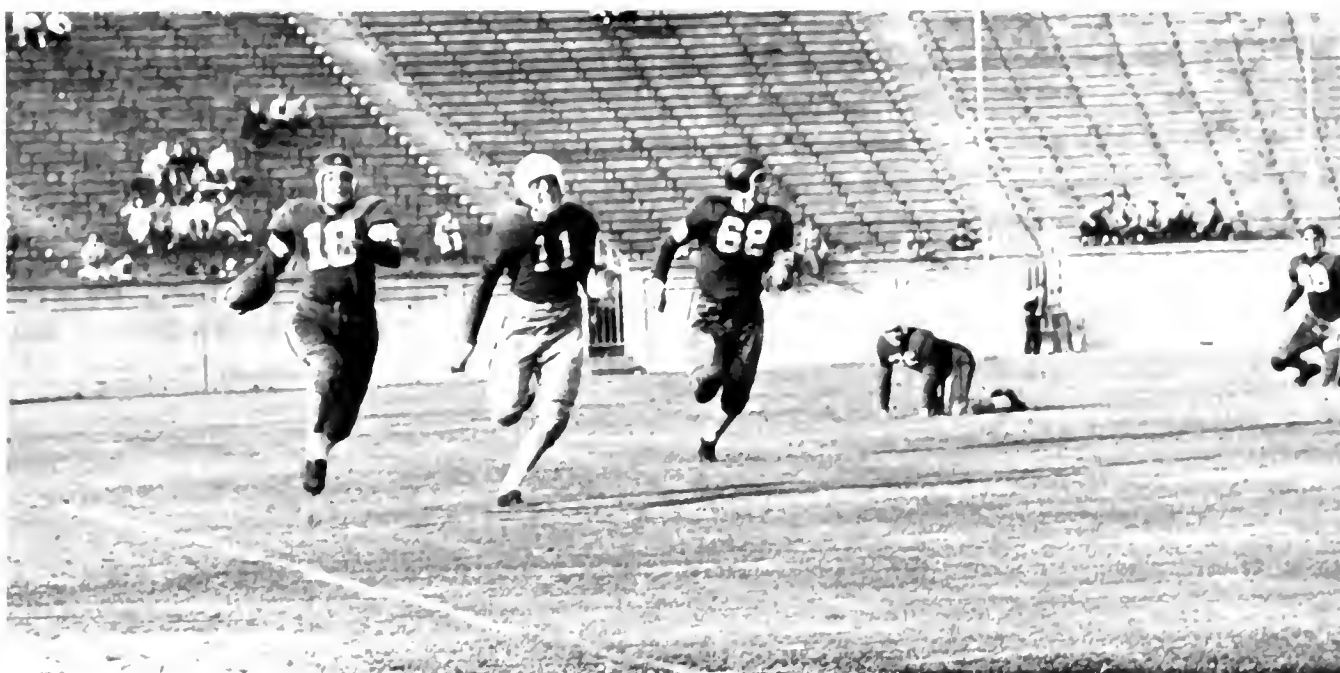

Late in the first quarter Duke drove deep into Navy territory and in the first ten seconds of the second quarter Leo Long plunged over from the two. Gantt again kicked true.

That story was repeated in the third quarter when Long plowed over from the three and Gantt added his third extra point, bringing to mind that time in the Duke-Navy game of 1942 when he missed the extra point and Duke went down 14-13.

Although the Middies piled up a total of 256 yards gained to Duke's 128, they consistently showed a tendency to stall in the clinch.

Long - core through middle against Navy as blocking back Gantt leads the way. After an impressive formation drill by the Middies in Baltimore Municipal Stadium the fighting Duke team staged a battle against Navy to stay on the top end of the score throughout the game.

On October 19 the University of Richmond Spiders invaded Duke Stadium intent on keeping their undefeated record intact.

Early in the first quarter Moon Mullins partially blocked a Spider punt and center Bethune recovered on the Richmond 26. After the ball had been advanced to the nine, Clark swept around end to open the scoring. Bob Gantt kicked true for the extra point. Minutes later, Clark passed from the Spider 46 to Buddy Mulligan, who went over from the 18. Gantt again converted. On the kickoff, the Spiders fumbled on the 13 and Duke recovered. Thrown for a loss back to the 19, Clark passed to end Herman Smith in the end zone for the third touchdown of the quarter. Moved back to the 25 on a holding penalty. Gantt kicked a perfect placement for the extra point.

Early in the second quarter, Hartley took a punt on his own 17 and on a great run went 83 yards to score. This time, Gantt missed. In the third quarter Buddy Mulligan took a reverse around right end to score the sixth Devil touchdown. The conversion was good.

Army was a heavy favorite with its string of 23 consecutive victories, but the Blue Devils were not dismayed. Some 2,000 students and the band accompanied the spirited Duke team, and morale was high.

Late in the first period Army moved into Duke territory and opened up with its long range artillery. Tucker fired a long pass to Davis into the end zone for a tally. The extra point was wide and the Military Academy led 6-0 until the half.

In the third quarter the Army began another campaign downfield which penetrated deep into the Duke sector. Tucker again quarterbacked the Army team to paydirt with a pass to Poole into the end zone. Leo Long, charging fast, blocked Ray's attempted extra point conversion.

Led by Mulligan and Hartley, the boys from Durham pushed across the midfield stripe and began driving toward the goal. A touchdown pass from Hartley to Mulligan fell short and ended the attack.

Army found its mark again in the fourth period for another touchdown with Davis scoring.

With John Montgomery about to take out Army end, Henry Foldberg, Buddy Mulligan, Duke halfback, cuts in for a short gain in the first quarter at the Polo Grounds in New York City. A crowd of 62,000 was on hand to see Army seek its twenty-fourth consecutive victory.

End Herman Smith covers a Tech receiver as a capacity homecoming crowd of Duke alumni sits through four quarters of pouring rain to cheer the home team up and down the muddy field. Cheers were evidently not loud enough; Duke came out on the short end of the score.

Quarterback Frank Boyles fired passes to halfback Mathews who moved the ball down to the Duke 2 in four plays. Here Dinkey Bowen plunged over for the marker.

Late in the second period Tech started another touchdown march which was climaxed by a lateral from Boyles to Mathews. The score at half time was 14-0 in favor of the Yellow Jackets.

A Duke offensive in the fourth quarter spurred by a twelve yard pass from Hartley to Mote set the Blue Devils in a scoring position. Long and Hartley lugging the ball alternately drove to the Tech 36. From here Clark and Long skirted the ends and plunged the lines all the way to the one yard marker where the Blue Dukes lost the ball on down by a matter of inches.

Tech punted out to end this threat, but the Blue Devils came back with a determined drive which ended the game on the Tech 20.

Duke vs. Wake Forest

After two straight whitewashings, the Big Blue, rated underdogs by one touchdown in pre-game betting circles, roared back into the win column via a thrilling victory over Wake Forest's Deacons.

Never out of the running, the highly-rated Deacons had to be stopped in the shadow of the Duke goal in the third quarter when halfback Nick Sacrinty fumbled on the two and Al DeRogatis recovered for Duke. The Devils themselves were held once on the Deacon two and once on the 14.

In the first quarter Buddy Mulligan reversed from four yards out to score. Gantt's kick bounced off the cross bar and was no good. The second touchdown climaxed a 53 yard drive in the third period when Leo Long crashed over from the six inch line. This time Gantt's kick was perfect.

This victory partially made up for the loss to Tennessee as Wake Forest had whipped them the previous week. It also helped keep the record of a Wade-coached eleven never having lost to a Wake Forest team.

Duke vs. South Carolina

On November 16 the Blue Devils, 36 strong made a jaunt to Columbia to meet the University of South Carolina Gamecocks.

The first score came when Clark gained twelve yards to the one and Leo Long plowed over. Gantt's kick was good. In the second period Wall blocked a Gamecock punt and Smith recovered on the 23. Long and Clark alternated to the two and again Long scored. The kick for extra point was wide. A few minutes later, Hartley passed from his own 45 to Mulligan on the South Carolina 40. Buddy then cut to the side lines and Gantt paced the fleet back to the five where he disposed of the safety man and enabled Mulligan to score. Big Bob's kick was good. In the same period Hartley tossed a short one to Folger, who shed tacklers for 20 yards to the 15. Two plays later Luper danced over from the eight. Gantt kicked true. In the third period Clark, Long, and Mulligan alternated from the 27 to the one. Long scored; Gantt missed. The last score came when end Cittadino took a flat pass on the 15 and scored untouched.

Leo Long cracks center of the Wake Forest line deep in scoring territory. This was one of the many times that Duke found themselves threatening the Wake Forest goal line throughout the game, which ended with the Devils trouncing their opponent by the margin of 13 to 0.

Duke for the first time in seven years took the field in the role of the underdog. Carolina was a bowl possibility and the Blue Devils were prepared to upset their applecart.

Carolina on its opening play for scrimmage had a wild pass from center which was recovered on the two yard line by Pupa. This was the first break in the game for the Blue Devils who held the upper hand throughout the first half. The Tar Heels kicked out to their own 44 where Duke took over. Led by Long the Dukesters drove to the six inch line where the ball went over to Carolina on downs.

Hartley in the second period sprinted through the line to the Carolina four and Long went over for a score. The Tar Heels bounced back with a touchdown in the same period to tie the game at 7-7 and end the first half.

After a scoreless third quarter Carolina threw the coal to Choo Choo Justice and the Blue Devils began to falter. Fitch on a pass from Justice scored and three minutes later Justice after a Carolina pass interception drove across to chalk up six more points. A bad pass from center to Mulligan rolled out of the end zone for an automatic safety for Carolina. It was a heartbreaking 22-7 defeat for the Blue Devils and the end of the 1946 football season.

Clark holds the ball on a play started by Marshall at center in the Duke-North Carolina game. Taking the pigskin from the center, Luper handed to Clark, gave it on a spinner to Bob Owens, for twenty-five yards. Unfortunately, "Choo-choo" Justice lived up to reputation.

EVER a gridiron season passes here on the campus of the old Blue and White that several of the players don't achieve national honors for their outstanding sportsmanship and play on the field throughout the season.

This year eight players won recognition and places on the various honorary teams chosen by football coaches, sports writers, and football scouts. Of these eight to be honored all but three have played their last season of college football.

The Junior Varsity, under Head Coach Carmen Falcone, had one of its most impressive seasons in the athletic history of Duke University. When the 1946 season opened Coach Falcone had a superb squad of men and a fine coaching staff to carry him through a big year. With Stan Walker coaching the ends, and Coach Dippy Nania commandeering the forward wall, Coach Falcone took over the backfield, and the team began shaping into a formidable outfit.

The Blue Imps, with only three days of practice behind them, journeyed to High Point, on September 14, for their opening game with High Point College. The Jayvees were unable to find themselves, the result being that they were defeated 19-0.

The scene changed to Annapolis, Maryland, on October 11. The Blue Devils, in a brilliant performance, triumphed over the Baby Tars, 19-6. It was George Skipworth and Captain Fred Hancock who led the attack. Skipworth rifled a pass to Sessums for a score early in the game. The Navy sailed back with a touchdown drive, and held a 7-6 lead at half-time.

Late in the fourth quarter, Skipworth, running from a "T" formation, made a spectacular run, which carried to Navy's 11. Buchanan, on a reverse, carried the ball over for a touchdown.

With the Navy off its list, the Blue Imps turned upon the Cherry Point Marines for a sixty minute thriller at Cherry Point, N. C., on October 26. Captain Ken Younger, Gleason, and Scupine sparked the Dukes in in this closely contested battle, which culminated in a 13-12 victory for the Jayvees.

In the most exciting game of the season, the Junior Varsity played host to the University of North Carolina "B" Team in Duke Stadium on November 15. Carolina scored early in the first quarter on a long pass from Spellman to Purcell, and had a 6-0 lead.

When the final whistle blew, the Junior Varsity was a 21-13 victor.

Virginia Polytechnic Institute engaged the Jayvees November 22 for the final game of the season. Playing once again in Duke Stadium, the Boys in Blue turned in their most impressive win of the year, with a 34-0 rout of the Gobblers from Virginia.

BASKETBALL

A seasonal record of 19 wins against seven losses speaks highly for the Blue Devil team that Coach Gerry Gerard fielded during the year. Ending the season in third place in the Southern Conference they won themselves a berth in the play-offs for the 14th consecutive year since the tournament had been moved to Raleigh 14 years before. Now for the first time the event was moved to the Duke Gymnasium and the Blue Devils were ousted from competition in the opening round when they were upset by South Carolina 56-54.

When the season started Coach Gerard, beginning his fifth year as head coach, found himself seriously handicapped by, as he said, "too many new faces in the line-up". It was then that he also admitted that the team would have to go some to keep the conference title that they had won the year before. Perhaps he had in mind the strong teams that N. C. State was alleged to have or the many returning lettermen at Carolina. But it was generally known that they would have only two sure fire players to count on in John "Bubber" Seward, All-

Southern conference in '42 and '45, and Ed Koffenberger, All-Southern and All-American from the past year. There were other returning lettermen such as Dick Gordon, Doug Ausbon and Irving Gray from the '46 team; Garland Loftis back from the '43 squad; and Sam Rothbaum from the '42 team. Also on hand were new comers Corren Youmans, Carl Sapp, Ben Collins, Bill Martin and a couple others. The question was, though, how would they turn out under the strain of such competition as Temple, Navy, N. Y. U., State, Carolina, George Washington, Wm. and Mary, Wake Forest, Tennessee, and other teams that admittedly were fielding one of their best teams in history.

The Devils got off to a fast start in capturing seven straight before losing to Tennessee 47-53. Then in the next six games they dropped only two—one to N. Y. U. in a double overtime that proved to be one of the most exciting games in Madison Square Garden during the entire year and the other to the strong Navy five that lost only one game in 20 starts. But then things began to happen. As Coach Gerard had been afraid of, the strain on the first year men and the war veterans was proving too much. The caliber of play was slowed down as all teams were out to stop "Hook" Koffenberger from scoring and to keep Seward away from the backboards. Duke was able to win only three of the next seven, losing twice to Carolina and to State and George Washington, both teams that they had previously beaten on the home court.

In the opening game of the season it was Co-captains Seward and Koffenberger at forwards, big six foot five inch Ben Collins at center, and Dick Gordon and Garland Loftis in the guard slots who took the court against High Point. They walked away with it 44-29 as Koff racked up his first 14 points of the year. Next against Haines Hosery's pro five they eked out a one point 44-43 decision this time Seward pacing the Devils with 15 points. Two more wins were chalked up the following week against Hampden Sydney 61-51 and the University of Virginia 47-43 with center Ben Collins hitting for 16 points against Va. Ending up the year by playing through Christmas vacation they set down Florida 44-37, Jacksonville Naval Air Station 54-36 and the Quantico Marines 68-44. Koff, Seward, and Collins again taking top scoring honors.

As nothing is perfect neither was their record after they dropped the next game to Tennessee 47-53. Koff's 17 points and Bubber's 15 proved futile. Recovering they knocked over Davidson 55-48 before going North. Garland Loftis appeared to have his old set shot touch back as he burned the cords for 15 points only two less than Koff's 17. In the North, Duke split as they lost to N. Y. U. by three points in the second overtime, but then they jumped on Temple 59-56. Life was looking better to Loftis as he bagged 11 long shots and tossed in six free throws for a two game collection of 28 points. As usual Koff came through with his famous hook tossing in 17 and 22 points to give him a seasonal total of 152 in 11 games.

Back home for awhile, they doubled the score on Wake Forest 65-32 and closed out George Washington 52-46. It was Seward, Koff, and Collins doing the scoring again and some nice guarding by Dick Gordon who was showing himself to be excellent in defensive play. The next game came as a surprise to all as Duke ran up a first half lead of 37-19 over the highly touted Red Terrors of State and kept the lead to turn them back 60-53. The Terrors succeeded in stopping Koff, but Loftis hit for eight out of 10 longs to lead the parade with 16 points. Seward and Collins collected 15 and 14 respectively.

This five game streak they had rung up came to a screeching halt when the Middies sailed into town to scuttle the Devils 60-43. They completely outclassed Duke with Ken Shugart, All-Eastern and All-American forward, stealing the show by bagging 20 points for an 80 per cent accuracy. Koff again led for Duke with 17 points. Smarting from this loss they pinned back the ears of William and Mary 69-45 as Koff added 21 points to give him a seasonal total of 229, only 88 short of the individual record that he had established the year before. Duke made it four in a row when they trounced in quick order Washington and Lee 71-57, V. P. I. 52-40 and Davidson again 61-47. Koff ran his total up to 295 by pocketing in order 30, 16, and 20.

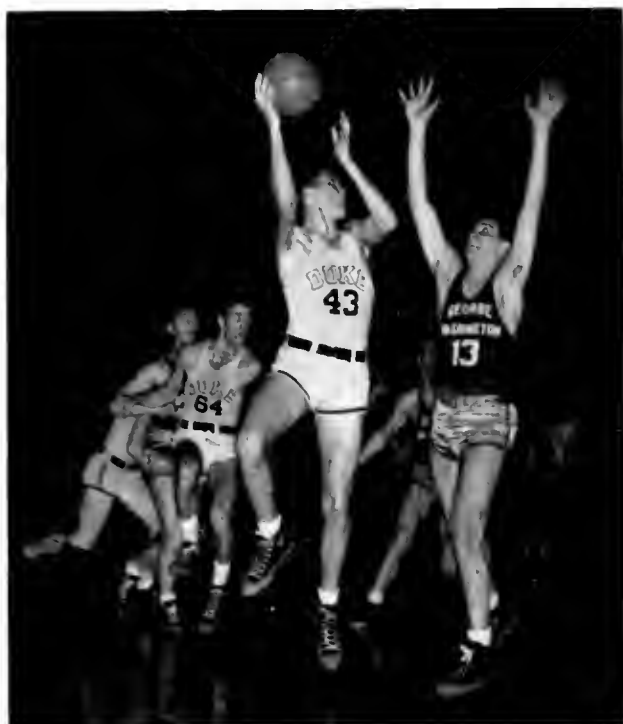

Then it happened! Carolina bowled them over 49-28 to the amazement of 6,000 spectators that packed the stadium at Chapel Hill. Duke gained one over Georgia Tech in the next contest 64-54 with Loftis hitting for 18 points and Koff establishing a new Duke record for individual scoring running his total to 324.

Koffenberger prepares to push in one of his famous hook shots. He set an all-time Duke scoring record of 404 points last season.

Koffenberger drops in a two-pointer as (13) of George Washington tries without success to block the shot. Duke won 52 to 46.

Gordon playing only sparingly due to a sprained ankle pulled the team together at the end of the game when their lead was dwindling. In the next outing against State they were installed as the underdogs but no one expected to see them suffer their worst defeat of the season by a score of 83-57. In the following three games they won over Maryland 43-38, Wake Forest 57-37, but lost to George Washington 49-51 in Washington, D. C. Koff kept rolling along gathering enough points to run his total to 377. Loftis was taking over Collins' place in the scoring column as Big Ben began to lose his touch.

In the closing game of the regular schedule Duke was again turned back by Carolina 57-47 in a heart breaker that saw them overcome a six point deficit at half time time to take a five point lead mid way in the last half only to have Paxton and Hamilton shove Carolina ahead again and to keep the lead until the end. With this win Carolina took over second place in the conference standings.

The season was completed by the loss to South Carolina in the tournament, but Koff ran his total to 416 to beat his old record by 99 points. Seward was second with 288 to his credit and Loftis took over third place in the last game from Ben Collins when he scored 14 for a seasonal total of 204 to Collins 195. Gordon scored 103, Ausbon 69, Rothbaum 30, Sapp 61, Scarborough 5, Youmans 38, Skipstead 10, Wallingford 20, and Martin 24.

Three stars, long to be remembered in the annals of Duke basketball history, led the way through a tough schedule and stole the show from other nationally famous artists on the floor. Ed Koffenberger, a veteran of three seasons under the Gerard system, topped off his fine record by leading the point-makers in the tourney, and being named captain of the mythical All Tournament team by a unanimous vote of coaches and sports writers, in 1946.

Gus Tebell, University of Virginia, said, "I think Ed Koffenberger is one of the finest basketball players ever developed in the South. I thought he was an All-American last year, and he has certainly demonstrated that he is one this year. He has all the qualities necessary for a good basketball player, a fine competitor and a good team man with a will to win. I think he is one of the best men under the basket, offensively and defensively, I have seen anywhere. In my book he is a real All-American."

Besides these tournament honors, Koff turned in a new Duke scoring record, topping that set by Gordon Carver by seven markers. Playing at center he was the main cog in the Devil scoring machine which upset such heralded opponents as the Wright Field Kitty Hawks and the nationally ranking Tar Heels.

TRACK

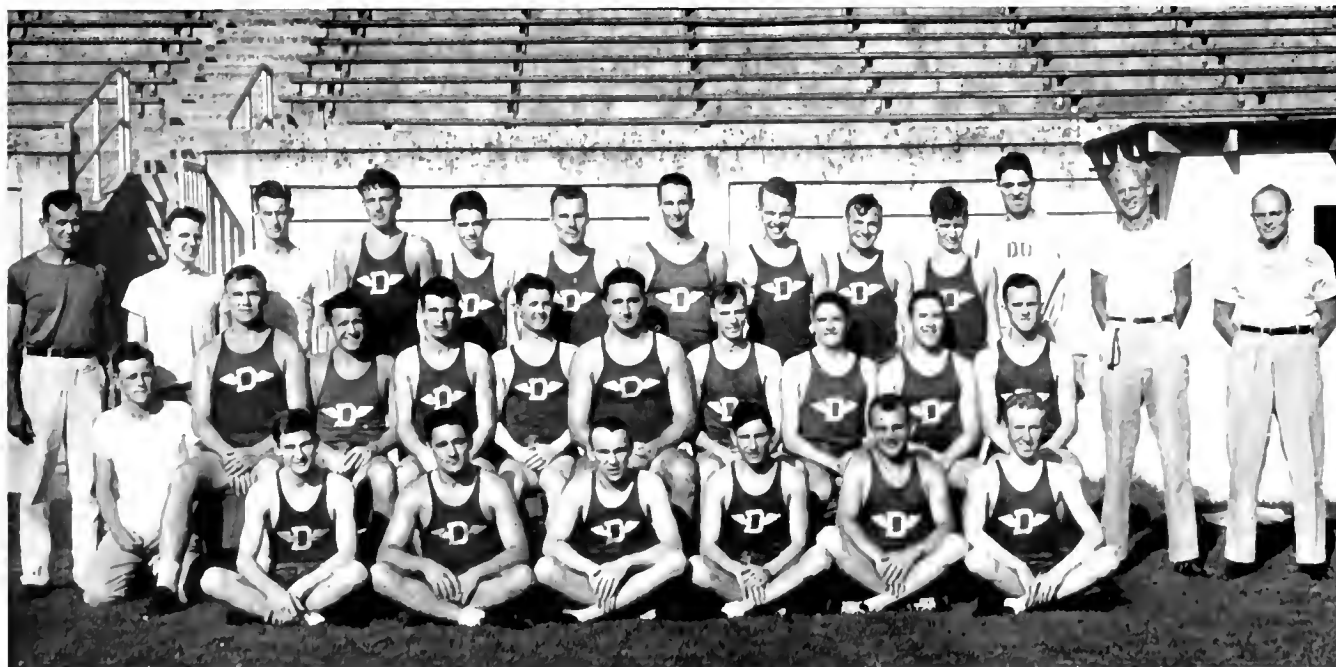

Studded with stars, the 1946 Blue Devils romped down the cinderpath to net four out of five dual meets, take fourth place at the Penn Relays, win the A. A. U. Open Invitational Meet's Senior Division title and capture the Southern Conference crown. Not only did the boys of Coach Bob Chambers achieve top honors in the track events, but they also excelled in the field throughout the season.

Leading scores for the season were: Ausbon, 77¹/₄; O'Leary, 53; Neighborgall, 42; Maxwell, 40¹/₂; Young, 34; Simons, 26³/₄; Aumen, 25¹/₄; Davis, 24; Downes, 21; Scupine, 21 and Gardinier, 21.

Getting the season off to a bang-up start, the track men opened their 1946 track calendar April 8 with a smashing 107¹/₂ to 22¹/₂ victory over the South Carolina Gamecocks in Duke Stadium. The outstanding performance of the day was turned in by Jim Davis, Duke's ace cross-country runner, when he romped through the two-mile run to an easy half-lap victory in ten minutes, 18 seconds. Footballer Bill Aumen won the 100-yard dash, took second in the broad jump and third in the 220-yard dash to capture scoring honors for the Blue Devils. Doug Ausbon began his scoring honors for the season by winning the broad jump event, tying for second in the high jump and running on the winning mile relay team for Duke. The Devils out-ran the Gamecocks with Downes winning the mile; Young, the 440; Bodine, the 880; and Maxwell, the 220-yard dash. Montgomery with the javelin; Gardinier, the shot put; McCormick, pole vault and O'Leary, discus, highlighted the field events to take winning honors for the Dukes.

Traveling to Charlottesville the following weekend to take on the cindermen from the University of Virginia, Duke's well-balanced team scored ten first places and picked up a liberal share of second and third places to defeat the Cavaliers 85¹/₂ to 40¹/₂. Doug Ausbon, Duke sprinter and field events star, took individual honors with 14 points to his Double winners for the Devils were Jim O'Leary, who hurled the shot and discus for good distance, and Lren Young, front runner in the 21 and 440. Virginia's boys came in first on three events, but Coach Chambers' boys followed closely with Davis placing second in the two-mile, Scupine in the 220 low hurdles and Montgomery with the javelin.

The third meet of the season saw the Navy Middies take twelve of fifteen events and tie for first in another to make the Devils bow 89½ to 41½ at the track meet held April 20 at Annapolis. Scupine and Cheek came through to give Duke first place in the 220-yard low hurdles and the javelin event, respectively, while Curry of Duke and Barrow of Navy tied for first place in the pole vault.

On April 26 ten representatives from the Blue Devil team ran in the Penn Relays to bring in fourth place for Duke. Bill Simons ran third in the 400-meter hurdles; Loren Young, Roger Neighborgall, Bill Scupine and Doug Ausbon took fourth place in the mile relay; and Kurt Brown, Jim Davis, Bill Palmer and Chuck Downes came in fourth in the four-mile event. Jim Davis ran the two-mile and Jim O'Leary tossed the shot put, but they did not place.

Duke's Blue Devils scored a 80 2/3 to 50 1/3 victory over the University of North Carolina team here May 12 by winning nine of fifteen first places. The victory gave the Devils the favored spot in the Southern Conference meet which was held the following weekend at Chapel Hill. Although a Carolina cinderman captured honors with three first places, Doug Ausbon, outstanding performer for Duke, tallied 14 points by winning one first place and three seconds. Neighborgall recorded the best times of the afternoon with a 1:57.7 in the 880-yard run and a 49.5 in the 440. With this win over Carolina, the Duke record showed four victories out of five dual meets, the only lost being to Navy.

Paced by versatile Doug Ausbon, Duke University's track team won the Southern Conference Track and Field championship May 18 at Chapel Hill. The Duke team scored 76 points to Carolina's running-up score of 57. Ausbon, the speedy Duke captain, won the 220-yard dash, the high and broad jumps to tally 19½ points for high scoring honors. The Blue Devils excelled in the field events, taking first places in the discus (O'Leary), broad jump (Ausbon), high jump

(Ausbon) and shot put (O'Leary). Neighborgall, talented Duke speedster scored $10\frac{1}{2}$ points, placing first in the half mile and second in the quarter mile. In addition to the honors gained by the team as a whole, Roger Neighborgall was presented the Bill

Hendrix trophy for his performance in the 880. O'Leary, Duke's discobolus, copped the shot and discus throws for 10 points. Duke's winning relay team earned the Forrest Fletcher relay trophy.

Duke's Southern Conference track champions added the A.A.U. Open Invitational meet to their list of laurels at Chapel Hill, June 1, by taking the senior division title with a total of 125 points. Carolina trailed second. Duke winners in this meet and their events ranked as follows: Neighborgall, 440 and 880; O'Leary, shot put; Nania, discus; Ausbon, 100 yard dash; Maxwell, 220-yard dash; Davis, two-mile; Aumen, Young, Maxwell and Ausbon, 440-yard relay; Simons, Aumen, Young and Neighborgall, mile relay.

Coached by Head Coach Bob Chambers and Assistants Red Lewis and captained by Doug Ausbon and managed by A. B. "Jack" Shehee, the nineteen lettermen— Bill Aumen, Doug Ausbon, Albert Bodine, Robert Bowles, James B. Cheek, John E. Curry, Jim Davis, Charles Downes, Richard Gardinier, Nash Love, Kenneth McCormick, Terry Maxwell, John Montgomery, Roger Neighborgall, Jim O'Leary, Bill Palmer, William Scupine, Bill Simons and Loren Young— added to the already-long list of achievements credited to Duke's track teams.

Davis, one of the South's best long distance runners, finishes the two mile run as Doug Ausbon poses in position ready to take off at the sound of the gun. Ausbon is a sprinter, jumper, and leading point maker. Davis runs the mile and two mile and is a cross-country letterman.

Although Duke has lost such outstanding stars as Bill Aumen, Jim O'Leary, Buck Ckeek, and Bill Simmons, prospects for the 1947 season are bright. Doug Ansbom, Roger Neighborgall, Dick Gardinier, and Loren Young, lettermen on the 1946 squad, are showing up well in practice sessions. John (Bubber) Seward, All-Southern Basketball star, has turned out for track, and should greatly improve the Blue Devils chances in the field events. Jim Spearman, outstanding high school distance man, is giving a good account of himself, and should prove a valuable man to the team.

Although the competition is tougher this year, Duke's Southern Conference Champions will be fighting hard to retain possession of their crown.

In the 1947 pre-season eye opener, the Southern Conference Invitational Indoor Meet at Chapel Hill, Duke bowed to a better conditioned University of North Carolina team led by Chunk Simmons. The outstanding individual performance of the evening was given by Roger Neighborgall, Duke's adept middle distance star, who aided in establishing a new Southern Conference record for the sprint medley relay by running a fast half mile anchor leg of that event and came back to the Spring vacation and the Florida Relays will see the Duke cinder path boys in better condition and stronger in every event as they enter a difficult outdoor season.

BASEBALL

The 1946 baseball season was another successful one for Duke University. Under the guidance of veteran coach Colby Jack Coombs, the Blue Devil nine again ranked high in intercollegiate competition. Led by the superb pitching of Bob Houghton and "Lefty" Lee Griffith, the Coombsmen won 15 and lost 8 taking runner-up position in the Big 4 league. Although this record may not sound too impressive, Duke lost several of their games by the closest margins. Right fielder Carlyle Groome won the league batting title, while team-mate Art Vann was runner-up. Lefty Griffith signed a professional baseball contract with the Philadelphia Athletics, while Bob Houghton, Bakie Palmer, Jerry Frye and Ed McCarthey were chosen to play with the King, Vt., entry in the New England semi-pro league, which is made up of top college baseball stars from all over the country.

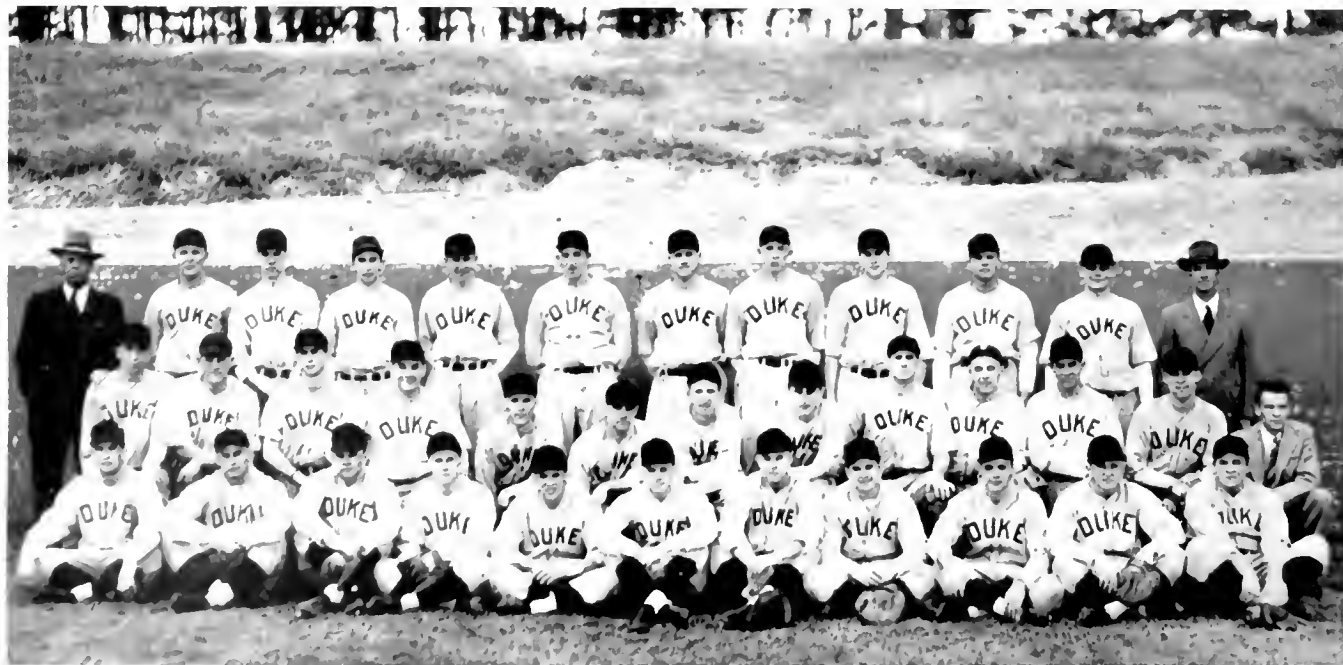

The Blue Devils opened the season on March 27 when an underfeated Michigan State club riding on the crest of an eight game winning streak invaded Methodist Flats and slapped a 5-3 defeat on the Coombsmen in an extended 10 inning game.

On April 3, the Blue Devils scored their first triumph of the year by edging Ohio University 5-4. Lefty Griffith replaced Stevenson in the fourth and pitched no-hit ball all the way and got credit for the victory. Art Vann led at bat collecting a home run and two other bingles in four trips to the plate. Vann kept in stride three days later in leading Duke to a 12-2 slaughter over Virginia Polytech. In getting three of the fifteen Duke hits in this game, Vann ran his season batting average to the amazing figure of .583.

April 12 and 13 found Duke's baseballers administering two successive defeats on the Gamecocks of South Carolina by scores of 5-3 and 16-2. First baseman Johnny Muse led the batting parade in the first game with three bingles while Lefty Griffith, Duke's "Old Reliable," going in as a relief pitcher was credited with the win while his teammates collected 17 hits.

given a rude shock by Duke on April 20 when they were handed a resounding 11-0 shutout with star Lefty Griffith holding the hapless State to four scattered hits while fanning 11.

Two days later, Duke lost a 4-2 decision to Maryland when the Blue Devils blew up in the eighth with six errors in one inning. A strange feature of this game was that neither team yielded a single base on balls.

On April 24, Duke squashed Davidson 12-5 in a game played at home. Led by Johnny Muse who got three hits, the Blue Devils scored all their runs in two innings.

April 27 found the Blue Devils in Chapel Hill dropping a 4-2 decision to the University of North Carolina. Whiteheart pitched shut-out ball for the winners after the first inning while Lefty Griffith, who just the week before had married a Chapel Hill girl, was charged with the loss.

Winning their next game with an eight inning rally against Wake Forest by a score of 8-2, the Duke club gave a fine exhibition of baseball with Houghton holding the Deacs to two hits, and winning his own ball game in the eighth.

The ex-G.I. turned in an easy win over Wake Forest's hard hitting Deacons, giving up only seven well-spaced hits to the Baptists. Hough-

Two days later South Carolina came to Durham to hand Duke another upset by beating the Blue Devils 10-6 after dropping three in succession to the home team.

The Naval Academy handed Duke a 6-3 defeat at Annapolis on May 18 in a game called in the seventh because of rain.

On May 22, the Blue Devils routed Wake Forest in a home game by the lop-sided score of 11-2 to come within half a game of the loop-leading State team. Bob Houghton shut the Wake Forest team out for eight innings.

On May 25, the State Red Terrors won the Big Four crown with a 4-3 victory over the Blue Devils. Grady Stott hit two homers for the losing team accounting for all of the Duke runs.

Finally on May 29, Duke beat the University of North Carolina 6-4 in a battle of errors with Carolina making five errors in the eighth inning alone.

One of the highlights of the 1947 Schedule will be the visit to Durham of the Naval Academy on April 26. Other intersectional games will also be played with Villanova in the first appearance of the Blue Devils at home on March 31; Ohio University; Michigan State; Cornell; and the University of Michigan.

MINOR SPORTS

The Minor Sports program of Duke University, although retarded to a large extent by the war, is fast regaining its pre-war fervor. Duke teams in Wrestling, Golf, Tennis, Swimming, Cross Country, Soccer, and Lacrosse have again resumed their respective activities with interest at a higher pitch than ever.

Like the major sports, the "Little men" were faced with uncertainty when their seasons opened because of a lack of returning lettermen or doubt as to whether the men who had been away in the armed forces would regain their former skill and effectiveness.

During the past year, nearly all of the Duke students have had an opportunity to participate in one or more of these Minor Sports. This has been the purpose of the program since its inception. On the whole, the response has been much the same as it was hoped it would be. Most of the teams were well-manned and were able to turn in an impressive slate of victories at the end of each of their seasons. A few of the teams were short on manpower and experience, but more than made up for what they lacked by the all-out manner in which they performed.

The records bear witness to the fact that the Minor Sports of Duke are more than upholding the fine name acquired for the school's athletic teams by the older and more established Major Sports. Duke's Minor Sports participants have toured the country to compile impressive records against top-flight competition. Although crowded from the headlines and sports pages sometimes by the feats of their more publicized "big brothers," these athletes have, nevertheless, fought gloriously to better the name of Blue Devil athletics.

The Athletic Association has put forth a special effort to help increase and improve the present facilities available to Minor Sports. The return of increased supplies of the various materials needed will no doubt make possible further additions. An example of the new improvements is the addition of a wooden outdoor track near the tennis courts. Now the indoor track team is able to conduct regular practices on a bona fide track and is reciprocating by turning in scores which are a great improvement over those of the past.

It is hoped that at sometime in the near future a "typical Saturday" at the Duke gym will include exhibitions by not only the one of the major teams of the school but a so one or more of the minor teams. During the football season, the cross country team usually either accompanies the football team to a game or goes to a meet of its own. On a Saturday during the winter sports season, the wrestling team engaged in a match with V. P. I. while the swimming team was occupying its time in a meet with Georgia Tech. Both of these events were taking place within a short distance of each other. In the evening, Duke's basketball Blue Devils completed the day by taking on the cagers from the Naval Academy. This exemplifies the ideal program of sports participation.

It is the hope and goal of the University Department of Athletics that some day they may assume their rightful place beside their more publicized and self-sustaining "big brothers."

GOLF

Another successful season was the product of the efforts of Duke's 1946 Golf Team. Winning six out of seven dual matches and capturing the unofficial Southern Conference title for the ninth consecutive time were but a few of the achievements accomplished by Coach Ellis "Dumpy" Hagler and his linksters last Spring.

Coach Hagler started almost from scratch with one returning letterman and an excellent reputation accrued before the war. Another equally important cog in the machine was Frank Garrett, only man on the squad who had previously won a Duke golf monogram.

Others who shared the load were Bruce Davis, Luke Smith, Bill Doig, Frank Aiken, Bill Rankin, and Les Brooks. Pietro Pedro of Santiago, Chile, Chilean Amateur Golf Champion, also began the season with the Duke linksters, but was forced to leave the team early in the season in order to undergo an operation.

The biggest disappointment of the year occurred when North Carolina State upset the Dukemen 17-10 at Raleigh. Up to that time, the Duke golfers had not tasted defeat through a string of sixteen consecutive matches.

This record is unequalled in the Duke sport annals.

Garrett and Pedro sent Duke's link season off to a flying start by beating Wake Forest 26-1.

Frank Garrett again showed the way against South Carolina at Columbia. This time, Bruce Davis was the runner-up. Davis himself was the leader of attack against Wake Forest on the two teams' second meeting. Duke was an easy victor in the match getting a total of 25½ points to the Deacons' 1½.

Then came the series with State. The first contest showed Duke with 22 points, State with 5. The second meeting of the two teams, State won by a 17-10 score.

The final series was played with the University of North Carolina. Bruce Davis was low for the first match, and Duke downed the Tar Heels 17-10. The second match Duke again came out on top by a slightly closer margin, 16½-10½.

It was a gloomy day for Coach Bob Cox when he took the census of what was to be the Duke squad for the 1945 season. At the initial practice he found no lettermen and no nationally ranked players. The only returning person was Manager Doc Walker. And to top it off he had before him one of the toughest of tennis schedules with matches against William and Mary, Georgia Tech, Carolina, Navy, and Kalamazoo.

The team got off to a slow start but came around fast and finished the season with a .500 average of seven wins and seven defeats. Two freshman, Bob Chapman and Bob Taylor, proved their ability in the one and two slots while Chapman teamed with Hal Landesberg to make up the top doubles combination.

First of the menu was a strong Kalamazoo team that took over the Devils 8-1. They were followed by another powerful team in William and Mary which came to town and left with a 7-2 win.

Journeying to Atlanta the netters came through against Emory with a 5-2 score, but then aided Georgia Tech in getting their 28th consecutive victory over a period of three years when they dropped the match 7-3.

In a home stand Coach Cox saw his team's brilliant play in downing Wake Forest 9-0. Two of the doubles teams—Bodle and Jenkins, Taylor and Freeland—completely blanked their opponents 6-0, 6-0. Going strong the Devils disposed of the Cherry Point Marines 7-0. "On to Carolina" was the cry, but the Tar Heels caught them by the horns taking a 9-0 win.

Not to be downhearted, Duke hit the road for Charleston, South Carolina, where they made themselves a nuisance to the College of Charleston and the Citadel taking 9-0 and 8-1 wins respectively. Home again they took on Wake Forest giving them only one set for an entire afternoon's work. This brief winning streak was brought to a halt by Carolina as they took their second win 7-2.

A match with Navy was rained out. And when it rains it pours, as the Indians of W. and M. poured it on by scalping the Devils 9-0 in the next contest. In the remaining two games Duke broke even, taking over N. C. State 7-2 and losing again to Ga. Tech.

Paced by Adams in the distance events and Venable and Bronson in the sprints, the Duke Devilfish faced the second half of their swim season with a record of two wins against three losses. Outstanding individual performer of the season was Captain Adams who clocked 2 min. 22.5 sec. in the 220-yard free style, which is a Southern Conference record. The current season showed a great improvement of the team over its standard during the previous season when the Devilfish lost all their meets and scored only 2 points in the A.A.U. meet.

Opening the 1947 season against Virginia Polytechnic Institute, the Duke Devilfish swam to a 48-27 victory in their home pool. The visitors were able to score only one first place in the seven individual events while Venable took the spotlight with firsts in both the 100-yd. and 220-yd. free style.

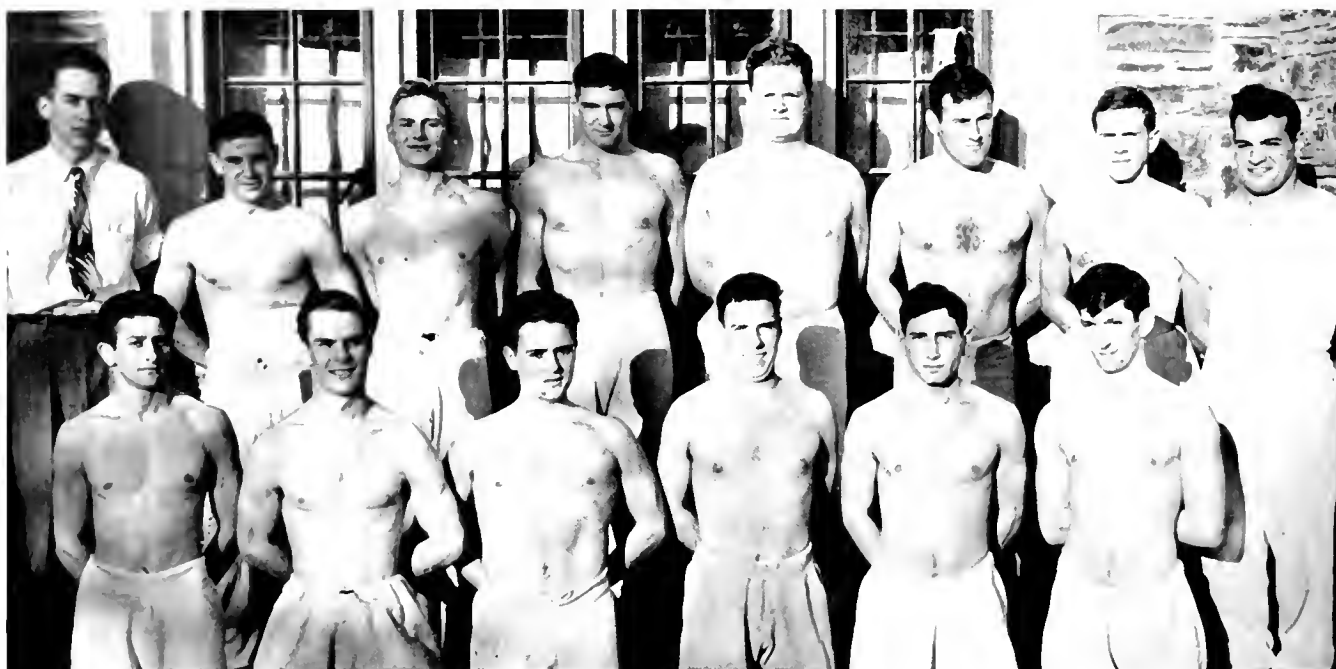

With its medley relay trio setting a new world record, the undefeated Yale swimming team handed the Duke squad its first setback at New Haven on February 5, by a score of 62-13. Venable was again in the spotlight for Duke, winning the 100-yd. free style to score the the visitor's only first place.

Returning home to Durham, the Devilfish outswam Virginia Military Institute by 44-31 on February 8, scoring six firsts out of nine individual events.

On February 14 and 15, the Duke Devilfish toured Georgia and, swimming on successive days against Emory University and Georgia Tech, lost both matches. In their 41-34 loss to Emory, Adams and Bronson scored two firsts each with the 220 and 440 free style going to Adams, while Bronson kept pace with him by annexing first laurels in the 50 free style and diving events. Taking on Georgia Tech the next day, Duke lost by 45-30 with the result of the meet in the balance until the final event. Two firsts went to Duke with Neeley annexing the 200-yd. breast stroke, while Gubbins, Saturday, and Venable won the medley relay.

The 1947 season marked the sixteenth year of Coach Person's handling of the Duke swimmers. Numbering numerous freshmen and sophomores on the squad, the Devilfish look into the future with optimism.

WRESTLING

The Duke varsity wrestling team, which last year came within one meet of winning the Southern Conference Championship, had a rather poor season this year.

Seven meets were scheduled for the Duke matmen with the first one being held at Davidson College. The grapplers showed promise of a successful season by winning that first meet on January 14 and then defeating Georgia Tech on February 1. These, however, proved to be the two lone victories of the wrestling season. On February 28, Duke went down to defeat before a powerful V. M. I. team. This was followed by defeats by U. N. C. and N. C. State following in quick succession. The meet with Washington and Lee was called off sparing Duke that defeat, but on February 24, the groaners suffered their fourth and final conquest at the hands of cavaliers of Virginia.

The outstanding member of the 1947 wrestling squad was probably Mike Kusturis who wrestled in the 128 pound slot. He wrestled in every meet and was defeated only once during the entire season. Kusturis wrestled here before the war and did a great job for his first season back.

Louches, Jouannett, Heiss, Billmeyer, and Gillette also appeared somewhat regularly for the Duke squad. Most of these men were relatively inexperienced this season, and this fact contributed greatly to Duke's poor showing.

Coach Falcone, former Olympic wrestling champion, did his utmost to produce a winning squad this year, but it seems that the odds were somewhat against him. The opposition he faced was some of the toughest and most potent ever faced by a Duke wrestling team. Discounting the inexperience of his men and the difficulty of his schedule, Mr. Falcone did quite well this season.

SOCCER

After a four year lapse, soccer was reinstated this year as a varsity sport. The soccer team during 1946 was one of the most powerful in many years, running up a fine record of only one loss in seven starts.

Boasting a strong defensive wall with Hal Landesberg in goal and Walt Jakob, Bill Kalkbrenner and Dick Strauss starring in the defense, the team relied on the South American sharpshooters "Rod" Riggioni, "Chico" Craniotis and "Pepe" Toledo in the forward line to shoot the goals. Others playing on the starting line-up included backs: Jack Heller; half-backs: Al D'Alonzo and Shin Tanaka; and forwards: Werner Jakob, Al Bitker, Hedi Helgason and John McMillan.

The season got under way on October 23, when the Tar Heels came to Duke to take a 3-1 shellacking with Riggioni setting the pace, scoring two goals.

Duke added another notch to its victory column two days later when they swamped the University of Virginia 6-0 in a driving rain.

November 1 found the Blue Devils playing their first "away" game of the season at Chapel Hill. In the final stanza the Duke booters found their shooting boots and drubbed the Tar Heels 3-1.

Traveling to the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. on November 6, the Blue Devils suffered their only set-back against the high-ranking Middies by a score of 3-0.

Returning home, the Blue Devils played their third game against the U. N. C. Tar Heels and again subdued them, this time holding them scoreless while tallying three times for Duke.

On November 13, the Duke booters traveled to the University of Virginia to play a 1-1 tie. An extra time period was played but the final score stood at 1-1.

Concluding their season with a home game against the University of North Carolina, the Blue Devils trounced them 5-0, bringing to a close a highly successful season.

Coach Jerry Gerard was able to secure the valuable assistance of Dr. Clelland of the Divinity School in training the soccer team.

CROSS COUNTRY

The personnel of Coach "Red" Lewis' squad was somewhat dubious at the opening of the campaign. The only returning letterman, Capt. Jim Davis, who has been termed by many sports writers as one of the South's outstanding Cross Country men, was the only certainty. Other lettermen on the squad were L. R. Jackson, Roger Neighborgall, R. R. Gardner, Al Bodine, Jack Ellsworth, and Bill Simons. Tom Bullock served as Manager for the team.

West Point was the scene of the first meet on October 12, as the Cadets' superiority in experience overpowered the Dukemen by a 19-36 count. Duke was represented among the leaders, however, as Davis was second. The time was 21:57 over a 4.2 mile course.

The next attempt was a victorious one for the Blue and White as Georgia Tech was easily downed, 19-39. Davis carried the colors across the line first to gain the laurels with a time of 17:54 over Duke's 3.4 mile course.

October 26 saw Duke's winning ways continue, but only after a scare. The University of Virginia made a brave effort to win on its own course but was unable to cope with the Devils. Davis again scampered home in the win position in 24:13 for a 4.4 mile course.

The midshipmen from the United States Naval Academy did not find much trouble in downing a slower but fighting Duke squad on November 2, at Annapolis. The final tally showed 18 points for Duke and 38 for the Navy.

The team completed its regular schedule on November 8, by losing to the Carolina Tar Heels. Carolina was an easy victor with a 45 point total while the Dukes garnered 16. 4.4 miles of UNC turf provided the setting for the encounter which was run in 23:41.

The Southern Conference meet at Chapel Hill, an annual affair to determine the conference champion, was on November 25, over an even 4 mile course. The final recapitulation showed the University of North Carolina first, Maryland in second place, and the Blue Devils from Duke University in third place. The time for the entire meet was 20:09.

LACROSSE

Getting off to a fine start, the Duke lacrosse team, led by All-American Ray Brown, upset a highly favored University of Maryland ten by a score of 12-4. He was ably supported by All-American basketballer Ed Koffenberger and goalie Mark Johnston in the defense.

Running into the Middies from the U. S. Naval Academy two days later, the Blue Devils dropped their first game, suffering a 7-3 setback.

This defeat was followed by another at the hands of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute to the tune of 12-5.

Playing the cadets from West Point next on their schedule, the Duke team lost by a score of 18-10.

The Blue Devils again hit their winning stride by slaughtering Loyola University of Baltimore by the amazing score of 22-4. The Blue Devils were led in their scoring by Walt Ross who tallied six points, followed by Pettit with five goals.

Four Duke players were nominated to play in the annual North-South tilt - namely, Jim Corrigan, Olin Gilbert, Tom Gorsuch, and Walt Ross.

The regular lineup which represented the Duke team during the 1946 season comprised Johnston, Gorsuch, Sutton, Koffenberger, Gilbert, Brown, Corrigan, Ross, Pettit, and Cecil.

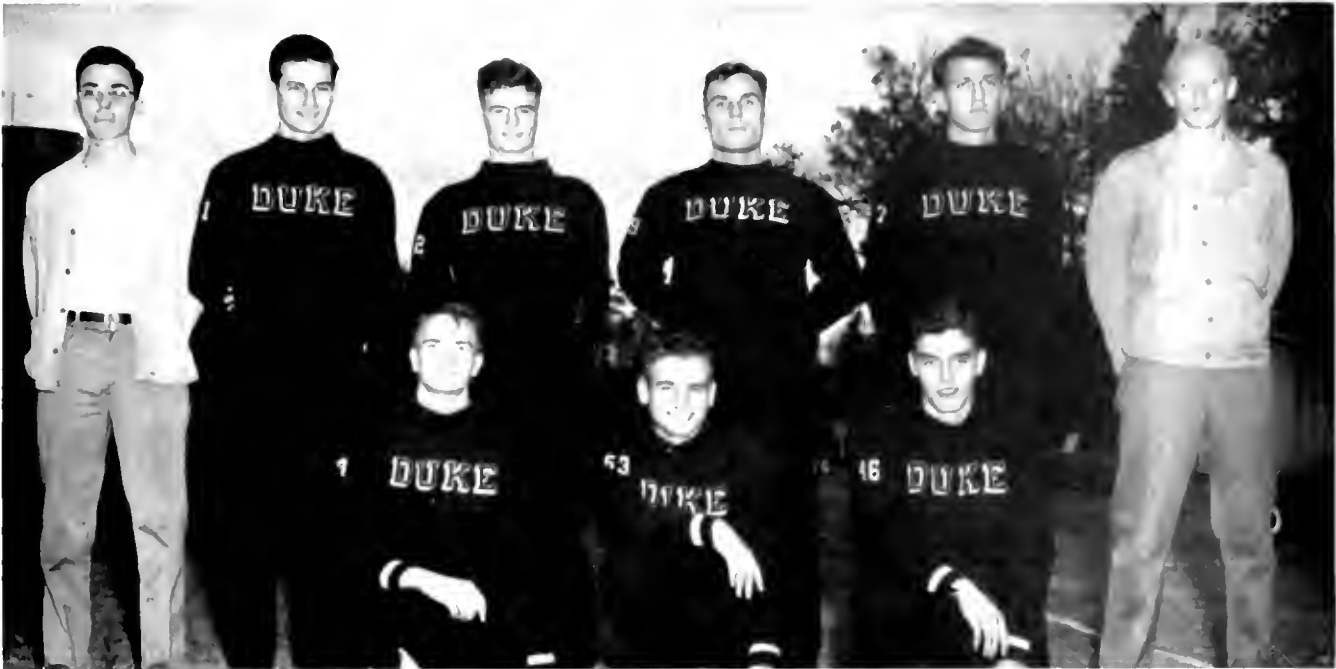

As in the past years, the team was coached by "Jack" Persons who completed his sixteenth year of coaching at Duke University.

With the graduation of Ray Brown in January, Duke has lost a stellar performer on the lacrosse field and a very better-than-average tennis player. A number of lacrosse men remain to carry the blue and white colors during the 1947 season but the services of All-American Ray Brown will be sorely missed.

As a result of the 1946 season, Duke was recently elected to the United States Lacrosse association. Because of this tie-up, Coach Persons was able to schedule the best teams in the country for 1947. Maryland, Penn State, Hopkins, Princeton, Yale, Army, Navy, and Loyola will be played.

1946 was a momentous year in lacrosse.

DUKE RUSSL

Lou Bello, Senior Manager, Coach Gerard, Director of Intramural Athletics, and Erb Edelman, Assistant, make preparations.

This year marks the first postwar revival of a program of Intramural Athletics that in 1942-43 had reached a point of interest on the Duke campus unparalleled in the history of the school. Many of the guiding forces of that season have returned to help re-establish Intramural Athletics in its rightful place of prominence, but the success of the season is dependent on more than the hard work of a staff of directors, managers, and officials. It is dependent on the degree of participation and spirit of competition evidenced by newcomers to Duke University.

Under the direction of Lou Bello, Senior Intramural Manager, Erb Edelman, Assistant, and Coach K. C. Gerard, Director of Intramural Athletics, facilities and tournaments were set up for touch football, track events, volleyball, soccer, golf, badminton, boxing, horseshoes, swimming, wrestling, basketball, handball, tennis, and softball. Handsome trophies were presented to the winners and the runners up in each division. That fraternity or independent group that compiles the most intramural points throughout the year receives a huge trophy which may be kept if won in three successive years. A trophy is also given to the individual getting the most points.

In the hardest fought game of the season, the champion Kappa Alpha (A) football squad mastered a slightly inferior freshman team from

INTRAMURALS

House "M." Marked by outstanding kicking, excellent defense work, and all-star passing, the gridiron classic ended with a 9-2 victory for the heavier and more experienced KA eleven. Using their stellar defense, the freshmen were able to force the KA's into the air for the deciding score. In the first half, starting in the middle of the field by successive passes to Hinnant and Stott, Miller laid the groundwork for scoring. The extra point was also made on a pass from Miller to Vining.

In the second half the freshman line held the opponent for four downs within the five-yard line. The two points dropped by each club in this half were the result of safeties in which Jim Futrell and Jim Miller were both caught in their own end zones.

Although never threatening the score, the club from "M" earned much credit by its fine defense and remarkable kicking. Loss of the championship was the only defeat suffered during the season by the freshman team. Defeating six opponents, this squad was rated as one of the best if not the finest frosh team in many years by the Intramural Department.

The Kappa Alpha eleven has a clean slate of ten victories and no defeats. Closing the 1946 Intramural touch football season, the victorious KA squad will go down as the first All-Intramural team since 1942 when Southgate held that position. As a token of appreciation for fine playing throughout the season, the leading teams from divisions one, two and three were awarded trophy cups in the Senior class meeting. The freshman eleven later received individual medals.

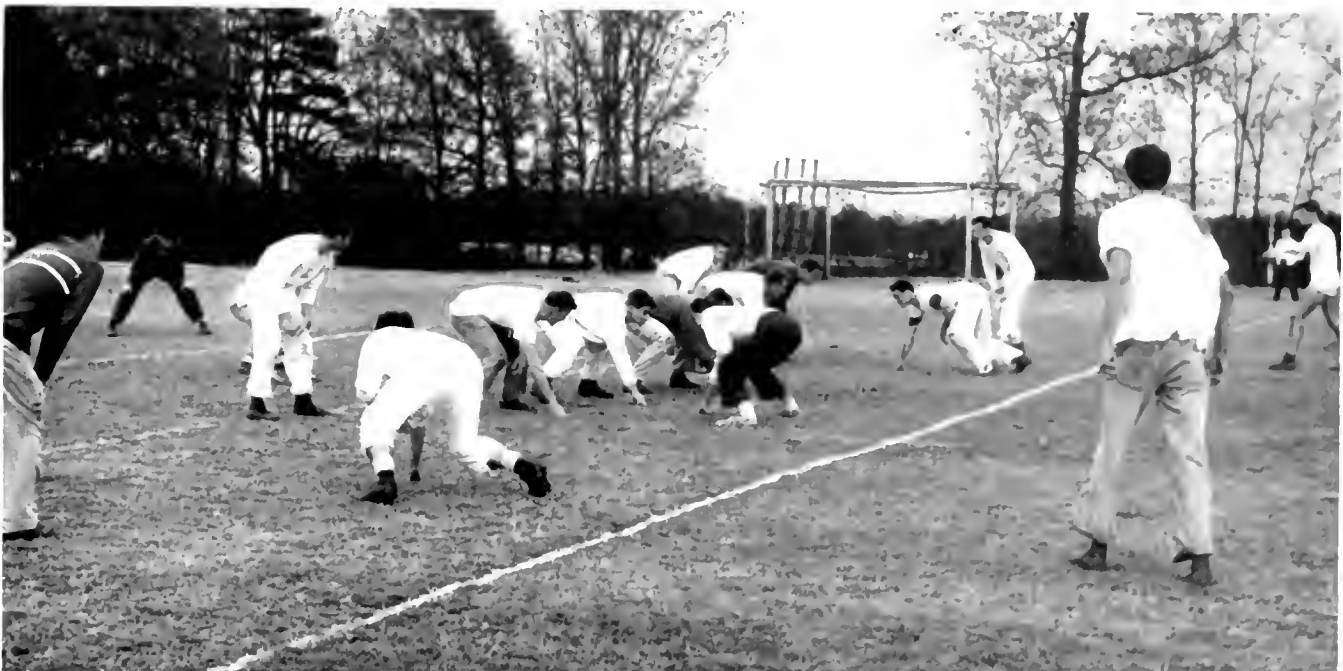

Dan Dudenhoefler, ace handball man, and Wally Rosenberg, fleet harrier, each copped the top honors in handball competition. After battling out to semi-finals in handball singles, Dudenhoefler, Sigma Nu, now holds the championship following his victory over Larry Schwartz in two games, 21-11 and 21-19. Runner-up in singles for Fall and Spring in 1942 and 1943, Dudenhoefler returned this term to reach top place in the tournament.

The big change in the basketball standings came with the Phi Delt defeat by Kappa Alpha in the first division. The lead was then tied between the Sigma Chi and Phi Delt squads. Final games were scheduled for March 3, 4, and 5. Kappa Alpha, led by big Bill Milner, won the intramural track meet in early March, as it piled up 57 points to second place Sigma Alpha Epsilon's 24^{3.4}. Alpha Tau Omega was third with 16 points, Sigma Chi was fourth with 9, and the remaining points were evenly divided between House M, House P, NROTC, Beta Theta Pi, Lambda Chi Alpha, Zeta Beta Tau, and Sigma Nu. The KA's won first places in the 3.4-mile run, the broad jump, medley relay, and the mile relay to amass their winning total. Bill Milner, KA football star, set a record in the broad jump when he leaped 21 feet. The old record of 20 feet, 9 inches was established by the late Al Hoover in 1943. Sigma Chi's Art Palumbo tied the shot put record, also held by Hoover, when he tossed the 12-pound iron 46 feet, 7 $\frac{1}{4}$ inches. He threw the shot 49 feet on one try, but this was nullified when he stepped out of the throwing circle.

The spring Intramural sport season was planned to get into full swing the first week after vacation, according to Lou Bello. With the successful close of the basketball tourney, new events which were to fill the calendar are softball, handball, and tennis. In addition there was planned a badminton, a horseshoe tournament, and a one-day track meet held on the cinder track.

The personnel of the Intramural Department are: Coach Jack Coombs, W. W. Card, Coach K. C. Gerard, T. M. Aycock, E. M. Cameron, and Harold "Lou" Bello.

Coach Kenneth C. Gerard in the Intramural Handbook said: "Intramural Athletics not only develop the individual physically, but they train his mental, moral and social natures as well. Through this form of activity he learns the meaning of sportsmanship, fair play, and the sacrifice of self for the best interest of the group. The returns which come from his exercise cannot help but contribute to a more complete living. As a cardinal principle, we have established the fact that the facilities of the Intramural Department be always open to the use of the students."

The activities included in our Intramural program are so varied that there is opportunity for every individual no matter what his level of ability may be. The Intramural program at Duke University is a comparatively new institution. The project took immediate hold with the students here, and thus far it has been a decided success. We hope, however, that as the years roll by, more and more students will realize the comparative advantages which may be realized from an Intramural program and will support it even more wholeheartedly. Intramural Athletics have so many worthwhile qualities that we cannot recommend too strongly that every student make it a point to participate.

Don Dudenhoeffer, Sigma Nu, won the handball singles championship. Runner-up is Larry Schwartz of Zeta Beta Tau.

Lou Bello presents intramural awards to the House M football team. They are the division winners and runners-up for the school championship. Intramurals are playing a far larger part on the campus this year than in any previous year due to leadership and active interest.

WOMAN'S ATHLETICS

The physical education department of the Woman's College offers a large number of activities including outdoor individual, dual, and team sports, dancing, swimming and gymnastics. All freshmen are required to take a body mechanics course during second semester, and a rhythm, one team sport, and two individual sports must be selected during the years of required physical education by all students. A swimming pool, tennis courts, and other athletic equipment are available to all students for use at specified times.

When West campus was merely a group of architect's plans, and all students lived on East campus, the facilities for athletic participation were very limited for the girls. Since the boys occupied the large gym, the gym in Southgate was used for the girls, and they were allowed frequently to make use of the swimming pool and tennis courts. There were three horses for those interested in learning the equestrian art until an unfortunate accident occurred and this sport was abandoned. As soon as the men moved to the other campus, and the engineers took up Southgate as their abode, the girls had the full-time use of the gymnasium and its facilities.

Miss Julia Grout, who received her A.B. and M.S. at Mount Holyoke and Wellsley Colleges, and took a graduate course in physical education at Wellsley, is now associate professor of physical education for the Woman's College, and was here to witness the change from the "Shack" to the big gym. Mrs. Bookhout and Miss Lewis came a few years later, and are now assistant professors in Physical Education. Miss Lewis, who attended the Woman's College at Greensboro and received her Masters at Columbia is head of the Modern Dance Club. She has done a great deal of extra study in dancing and is supervisor of practice teaching in athletics. Mrs. Bookhout received her Masters degree at Wellsley. Mrs. L. K. Berry, who is an instructor in health education, holds a B.S. degree, and has studied at the Yale School of public health. Miss Margaret Weeks who is head of Nereidian has done special work in swimming and obtained her Masters degree from U.N.C. Miss Janice Van Tuyl secured her Masters from Skidmore College and is now adviser to Pegasus and the W.A.A. Miss McCall and Mrs. Swasey are two new teachers this year. Miss McCall graduated from N.Y.U., and Mrs. Swasey received her Masters from Peabody. She has had much experience in summer recreational work and teaches courses in it here.

During the development and growth of opportunities and facilities available for students of the Woman's College, two very important events have taken place. The first of these was the introduction of physical education as a major subject for those who wish to qualify as full-time or part-time teachers of Health and Physical Education. This was introduced four years ago, and the first three graduates of this course have received high recommendation from their employers.

The second important event occurred last year. In May, at the suggestion of the University Curriculum Committee, and with the approval of the men's and women's faculties in physical education, the General Faculty Council voted to allow 4 semester hours academic credit for the required work in Physical Education, increasing the graduation requirements to 124 semester hours and 124 quality points. The three-term plan, which was formerly used, has now been replaced by the semester basis. Quality points will be given on the same basis as in other subjects. This change has resulted in more stress being laid on the physical education program at Duke.

Working closely with the department, the Woman's Athletic Association has realized broad development and an extensive program to organize and promote student participation in athletic and recreational activities.

W.A.A. Board consists of the following: Jean Erwin, president; Pat Weiland, vice president; Jo Rae, secretary; Ann Templeton, treasurer; Dot Meredith, publicity chairman; Betsy Greene, chairman of the point system; Monkey Walters, student government representative; Jean Noble, head of basketball; Shirley Zittouer, head of badminton; Merwyn Stallings, head of bowling; Betty Owen, head of softball; Marge Frey, head of fencing; Sue Amsbury, head of tennis; Donna Todd, head of golf; D'Arlene Brink, president of the Speed Club; Sue Thompson, president of Nereidian; Marilyn Gibson, president of the Modern Dance Club; Barbara Tinsley, president of Pegasus; Lynn Weith, freshman representative; Jay Deming, sophomore representative. The governing body has a representative in every house who attends all board meetings and relays the information to their respective dormitories.

Many events highlighted the year, the first of which was an open house for freshmen in the gym. This annual event is held to acquaint the freshmen girls with the activities of the W.A.A. in which they may participate. Two other open houses were held later in the year one in coöperation with the YMCA, with dancing, games, and refreshments, for the purpose of bringing East and West campuses closer together, and the other for the entire student body.

Joyce Dawson and Marilyn Gibson practice for Modern Dance Recital. There are also classes of instruction in modern dancing.

At the annual Play Day in Raleigh on November 16, the East Campus athletes participated in volley ball, swimming, and tennis tournaments and emerged victorious in all three.

Badminton, inter-dorm swimming, volley-ball, and softball, and inter-dorm and inter-sorority basketball constituted a few of the more important tournaments held during the year. National telegraphic tournaments for bowling, archery, and swimming, sponsored by the Speed Club, also took place.

The W.A.A. cabin, maintained by the Outing Club, was the scene of many picnics and overnight trips.

In the spring the association invited the combined freshmen and junior class out for a day. A week later, they took the sophomore and senior classes. The cabin is situated about eight miles beyond the nurse's home and is the scene of many gay picnics. It was maintained before the war, but was not used during the war years. Last year it was re-decorated and is now in excellent condition. Any student is welcome to visit in the cabin.

Until the morning of the appointed day, the date for Kite Day was shrouded in its usual secrecy. Prizes were given the dorms with the best looking and best flying kites, and sack races, peanut and spoon races, and various relays were held. A picnic supper on the lawn ended the event.

In coöperation with Chapel Hill, a basketball play day was held. The Nereidian pageant and Modern Dance Club recital, outstanding among the year's events, were greeted with the usual eagerness by the students. The Modern Dance recital was held on March 12 in the Woman's College Auditorium. It began with a "Prelude" and some of the following numbers were, "Tarantella," "The Hollow Men," two ballads, and a scene depicting a strike was presented in a novel way. Mr. Ernest Badenoch of the English department provided vocal accompaniment for "Tarantella" and "The Hollow Men."

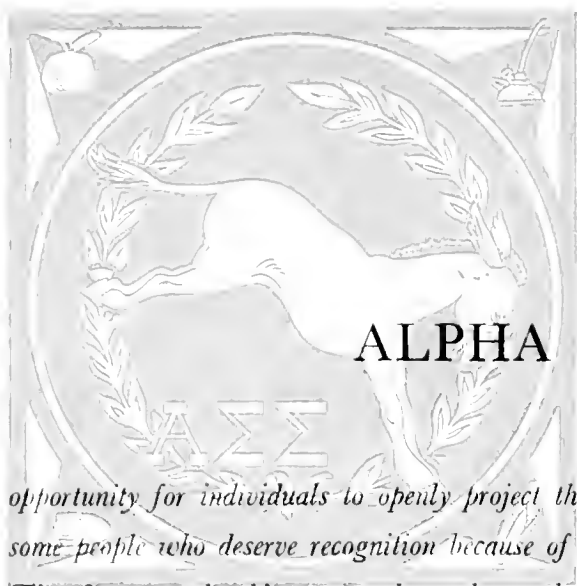

In March, W.A.A. sponsored a "Haymaker's Frolic" in the gym from eight o'clock to eleven thirty on a Saturday night. The gym was decorated as a barn with hogheads placed around, hay on the floor, and a prevailing rustic atmosphere. Swimming, barn-dancing, badminton, volleyball, and contests were provided for the men and women. Twenty-five cartons of Chesterfield cigarettes were given in the form of prizes for door prizes, winners of contests, and for the best costumes. A package of cigarettes was received by each girl from the dormitory with the most girls represented. The party was well-planned and highly praised.

In April, the AFCW, Athletic Federation of College Women, was held in Greensboro, North Carolina. Representatives from Duke attended and they had a large part in this important national meeting.

W.A.A. has done a fine job in planning and carrying out successfully this extensive program, and the important part it plays in East Campus organizations is fully realized by the great amount of student coöperation and participation.

Golf enthusiasts, Marge Frey, Marian Bennett, Pat Weiland, B. J. Culbreth and Jo Rae under the instruction of Miss Van Luyk, are enjoying spring weather. Instruction in golf is given for beginning, intermediate and advanced golfers. The Hope Valley Country Club cooperates with the department so that girls may practice on the greens. Clubs are provided for girls, and every opportunity to learn is offered.

ALPHA SIGMA SIGMA

In a large institution such as Duke University, there is opportunity for individuals to openly project their character and personality traits. On our campus there are some people who deserve recognition because of their influence in one way or another on the college community. Therefore we take this opportunity to honor them with initiation into Alpha Sigma Sigma.

Fig-Leaf
Brief

• Here's the popular brief that made such a big hit before Hanes turned to war production. Now it's being produced in quantity again.

Exclusive Hanes construction gives featherweight athletic support. Snug-fitting waistband for trim fit. Conveniently placed fly.

Combine it with a short-sleeve Hanes Undershirt—the all-around utility style that Navy boys like so much—worn as underwear or as a sport shirt. P. H. Hanes Knitting Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina.

Another favorite with men
HANES FIG-LEAF SUIT

Designed in one piece to give athletic support and waistline comfort. Your dealer will fit you in your correct trunk size—measured snugly from shoulder through crotch and back again.

BUILDERS DREAMS

VISIONS created by the imagination precede the achievement of any really great accomplishment. The ability to weave the threads of imagination into the finished fabric is equally important.

It has been the privilege of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY to cooperate with the Chanticleer staff in creating their vision into material form.

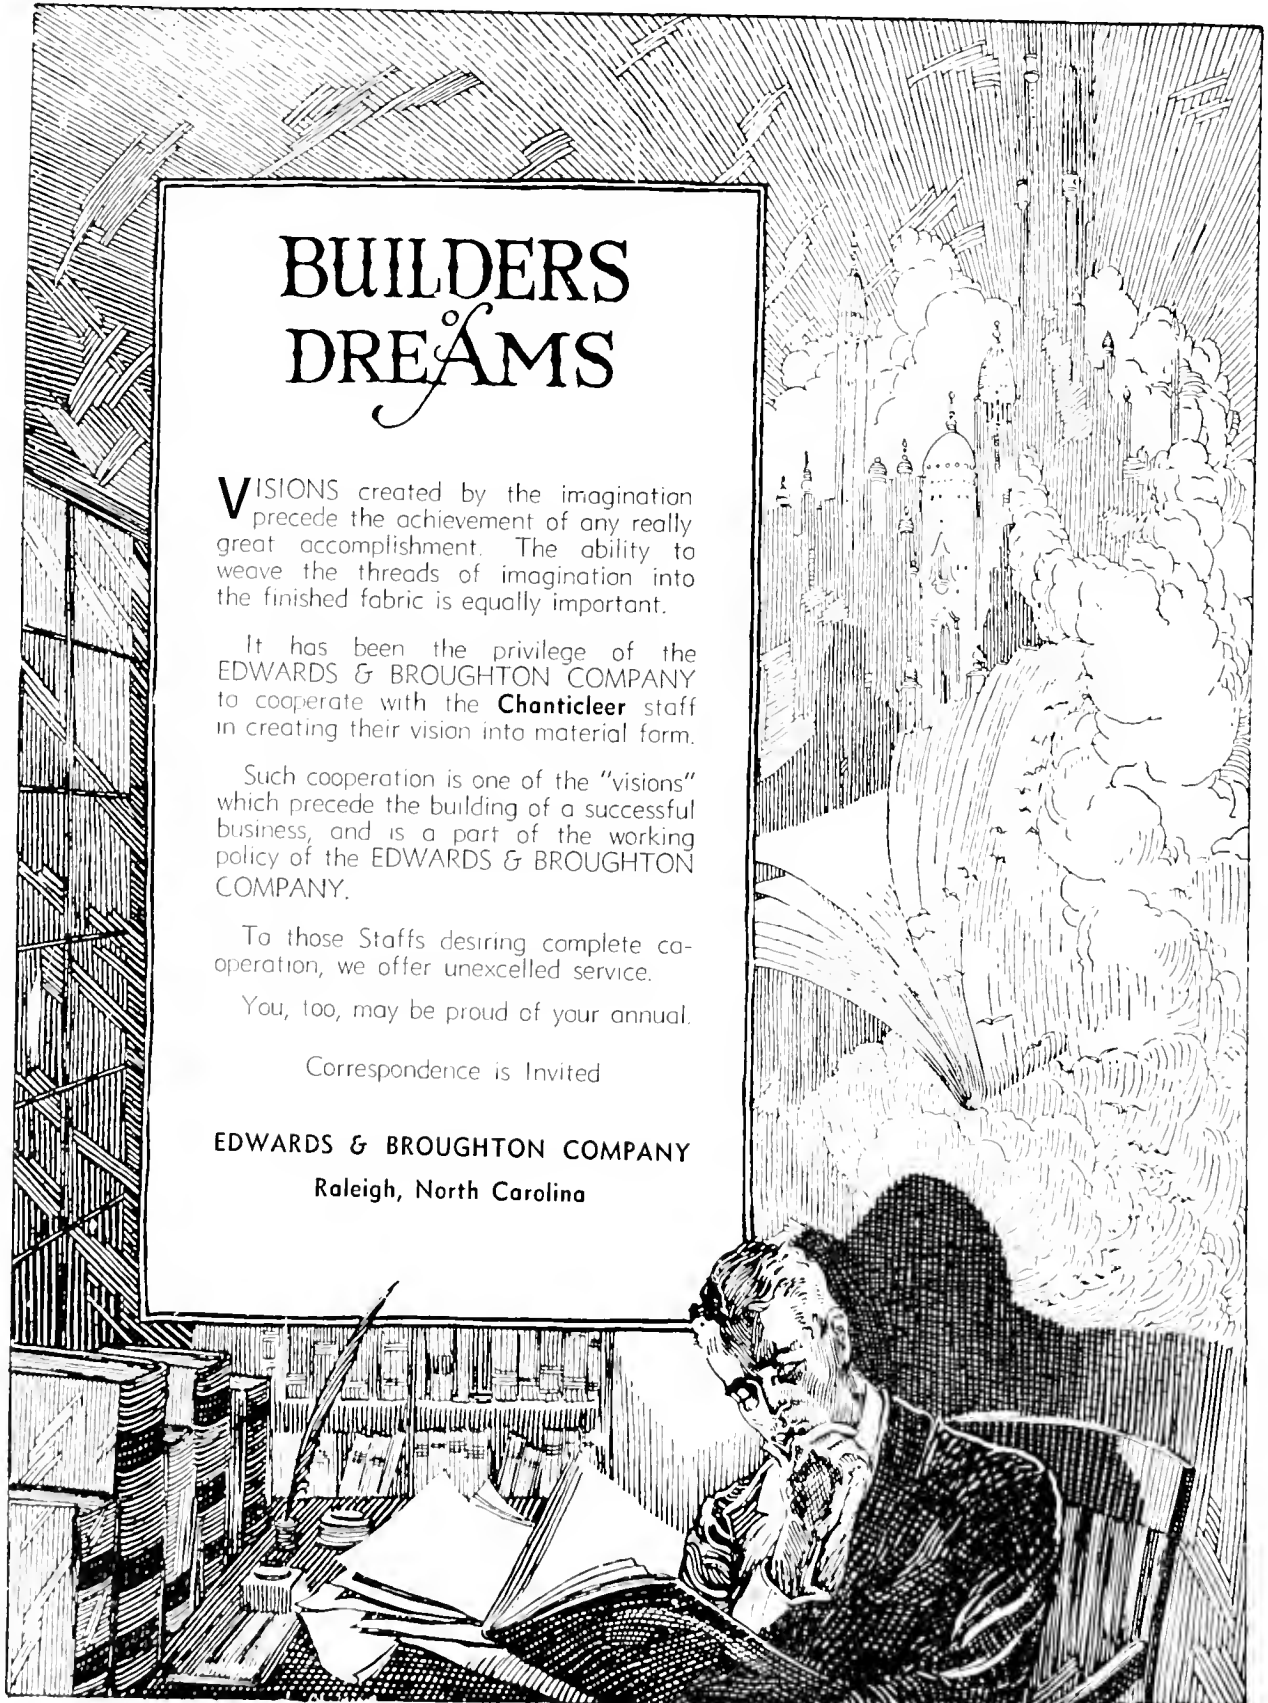

Such cooperation is one of the "visions" which precede the building of a successful business, and is a part of the working policy of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY.

To those Staffs desiring complete cooperation, we offer unexcelled service.

You, too, may be proud of your annual.
